State Poll Has Reagan Over Brown by 11 Pct.

Republican Ronald Reagan enjoys an 11% lead over Gov. Edmund G. Brown, according to The State Poll nia's top elective office was: survey conducted less than two weeks after the primary election. In all of the other statewide races, the incumbents are running ahead of their challengers.

More than 1,200 representative Republicans and Democrats were interviewed last week to ascertain how they intend to vote in the general election next November. The respondents were scientifically selected so that they formed a representative cross-section of the California electorate.

	Tot.	Dem.	Rep.	North	South
Brown (D)	37%	58%	7%	42%	33%
Reagan (R)	48%	24%	82%	42%	52%
Don't know	15%	18%	11%	16%	15%

Reagan, fresh from his impressive primary victory over former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher, enjoys the support of almost one-quarter of the registered Democrats in addition to his solid Republican support. On the other hand, Brown is supported by only 58% of the Democrats, and a small minority (7%) of Resurvey The State Poll questioned the voters of California concerning the probable gubernatorial contest between Brown and Reagan on June 3 and 4, 1966, immediately prior to the primary election. The results of this heretofore unpublished survey are:

	Tot.	Dem.	Rep.
Brown	40%	63%	8%
Reagan	43%	18/0	80%
Don't know	17%	19%	12%

Gov. Brown has trailed Reagan in The State Poll since January. But Brown's deficit has never been as high as it is now. The comparison of the 1966 matchings are:

	Latest	June	May	Mar.	Jan.
Brown	37%	40%	43%	42%	42%
Reagan	48%	43%	46%	46%	47%
Don't know	15%	17%	11%	12%	11%

A review of the party breakdowns in previous State Polls indicates that Brown currently receives less Democratic support than has been the case in the past. However, the figures do not substantiate the supposition by many political analysts that the Democrats who voted for Brown's primary opponent, Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty, have bolted their party en mass to vote for Ronald Reagan.

Brown Jabs at Reagan

FRESNO (UPI)-Gov. Edmund G. Brown sharply attacked actor-politician Ronald Reagan Saturday as the two competed for the gubernatorial endorsement of the Mexican-American Political Association (MAPA).

Eight of the 12 major candidates for statewide office appeared before the organization in the first direct confrontation of nominees for the November election. Brown addressed a luncheon meeting of the group. Reagan spoke by telephone from Los Angeles.

The governor said Reagan's supporters "have bitopposed everything you have ever stood forwhether it concerned economic opportunity, education or civil rights.'

His remarks were greeted by hearty applause. The seven-year-old organization, which claims to represent California's 700,000 voters with Spanish surnames, has almost unanimously en-

Also lauded as the top singing group in this year's forty choir competition was Bethel 125 of Los Angeles. Second was Bethel 282 from La Habra. In addition, 25 Jub's Daughters were given $300 scholarships by the Grand Council. Deborrah Vittum of Thousand Oaks was high scorer in the high school division, and Beverly Lowe headed the college groups.

Pistol Sales in L.A. Soar

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Los Angeles area residents are now buying handguns at a rate more than twice that of last year, it was reported Saturday. In 1965, the State Criminal Investigation and Identification Bureau estimated handgun sales here were in "excess of 13,700." Sales took a big spurt after the August riots in Watts last year. Sales now run at a rate which would mean a total of 31,000 for 1966.

Al Ferrone, member of the Los Angeles Police Department robbery detail which processes sales of concealable weapons, said residents are scared.'

He blames continuing tensions spawned by sporadic racial violence here and throughout the nation.

During the week of June 8-14, Ferrone said, sales of concealable weapons totaled 635. Forty-four were purchased by persons with criminal records, he said.

Viet Reds Move Into Rebel Area

HUE, Viet Nam (UPI)-Two full divisions of crack North Vietnamese regulars have moved into South Viet Nam's two northernmost provinces where Buddhistinspired anarchy halted the Allied war effort for three months, it was reported Saturday.

Military sources said a steady stream of fully equipped North Vietnamese regulars has been moving across the demilitarized zone since the Buddhist antigovernment movement started.

"Local force" Viet Cong units in the area had been destroyed as an effective fighting force in a series of swift, hard-hitting campaigns halted by the civil disturbances in early March.

Optimism Rises Over Viet Scene

By ANDREW BOROWIEC

SAIGON (49)-Optimism about the Viet Nam scene is evident among Saigon and American officials this weekend to a degree unparalleled in recent years.

SACRAMENTO - Students on trips don't get all their kicks on Route 66. Nor from LSD.

Legislative researchers, probing LSD-type drugs, have learned that college students recently uncovered "Scotch Broom" plant which causes hallucinations comparable to the "trips" of outlawed LSD.

Some state officials are red-faced over the dis-closure that "Scotch closure that Broom" is in the LSD class. It grows in abundance along California highway routes in mountains and foothills.

And inadvertently, "Scotch Broom" was featured in the dominant scenic picture in the 1966 "State Official Highway

In a pictorial scene with a forest of vellow Scotch Broom in the foreground and a winding highway in the background, the 1966 State Highway Map has a caption saying:

"Scotch Broom displays a spectacular burst of early spring color throughout the historic mining areas along State Route 49."

Luci and her fiance, Patrick J. Nugent, 22, had flown to Boston for the closing weekend of the convention.

Scores of Southern optometrists and their wives, waving napkins and clapping, rose with Luci for "Dixie" and "The Eyes of Texas." But despite Luci's urgings, Illinois - native Nugent stayed seated until the played "Yankee Doudle."

With a grin, he stood up and joined the festivities. Then he and Luci inited the conventioneers who filled the vast ballroom in singing "God Bless America.

Appearing on a pre-recorded television-radio broadcast with Rep. Frank Horton R-N.Y., Rusk was asked about the prospects of convincing the North Vietnamese that their aggression will win them no reward. Rusk replied:

"There have been many many contacts with Hanol, directly and indirectly. We have heard nothing from them since January indicating a change in the view they expressed at that time, at the end of our 37-day (bombing)

"They did not come back with any proposals for negotiation or for any suggestions of making peace. They came back saying, You must ac-cept the Liberation Front as the sole spokesman for the South Vietnamese people; you must accept Hanoi's four points and get out of South Viet Nam."

"That is what the entire struggle is all obut," Rusk added, "and of course that could not be accepted. "Their present view seems to be the same, but I cannot help but believe they are having second thoughts about the prospects of succeeding in South Viet Nam."

Optimism Soaring Over Viet Situation

THE MACHINERY for holding a national election is gradually being put in motion. The election, scheduled Sept. 11, will name a constituent assembly which, in turn, is to draft a national constitution as a step toward the return of civilian rule.

The Viet Cong failed to exploit the spring political turmoil to any great extent and drew no visible profit from the Buddhist dissidence in the northern provinces. One American offi-cial said: "We had braced for the worst and we are still stunned by the enemy's failure to cash in on that situation."

The massive presence of American servicemen now about 271,000 strong · is clearly showing results. Viet Cong movement of both troops and supplies has been seriously hampered by U.S. air and ground pressure.

In this atmosphere Vietmese and American officials speak confidently of victory, although the Americans, taught by the lesson of premature optimism in the past, are careful not to speculate on a timetable. Premier Ky himself has promised victory in 1967. Ky's advisers say they believe the war can gradu-ally dwindle within a year to a police action. This might isolate die-hard Viet Cong in largely uninhabited jungle and mountain areas without hampering the nation's life as a whole. These officials admit, however, that such a police action might go on for years.

Both Americans and Vietnamese authorities are preoccupied with launching a reconstruction and social affairs program to sap Viet Cong influence.

appears to be at a slightly higher level than it was prior to the primary. But there is no discernible mass movement of the Christopher voters away from Reagan at this time. Brown draws approximately the same percentage of Republican voters as he did in most of the State Polls prior to the primary.

The effect of this year's primary is not unlike the aftermath of the 1964 primary election. Pierre Salinger's unexpected victory over Alan Cranston for the United States Senate Democratic nomination gave him a lead in the early general election polls. This year Reagan defeated Christopher by a larger margin than policical observers expected. The notoriety he gleaned from his impressive victory might partially explain his increased percentage of the vote.

DEMOCRATIC LT. GOV. Glenn M. Anderson currently leads Los Angeles attorney Robert Finch by a 17% margin. Anderson, unlike Brown in the gubernatorial contest, attracts almost three-fourths of the Democrats while surrendering only 13% of his party's support to Finch. At the same time, 19% of the Republicans cross party lines to vote for the incumbent.

The results:

Tot. G. Anderson (D) 50% Robt. Finch (R) 33% Don't know 17% 16% Anderson emerged the victor in a tough primary fight over State Board of Education President Thomas Braden and United States Ambassador Lloyd Hand. However, the charges made by Anderson's opponents apparently had little effect upon Anderson's support within the Democratic Party.

The campaign for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor on the other hand was conspicuously a non-contest. On election day, Finch received 63% of the Republican vote. His nearest opponent, Riverside County Supervisor Norman Davis, received 17% of the vote. The lack of fireworks in Finch's primary should be considered when studying the current standings of the two candidates for the lieutenant governorship.

IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, Anderson's lead is less than half what it is in the northern portion of the state. Almost 50% of California's 7.8 million voters reside in three Southern California counties: Los Angeles; Orange, and San Diego. Southern California will be the battleground, not only in the Anderson-Finch contest, but also in all of the statewide races

At this time Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan, the only Republican of the six statewide officeholders, is running ahead of Asst. United States Atty. Gen. Norbert Schlei by 13% of the total vote. However, the contest for secretary of state has one of the highest "don't know" factors encountered in the survey.

The results last week were:

	Tot.	Dem.	Rep.	North	South
Jordan (R)	. 44%	24%	72%	51%	38%
Schlei (D)		49%	5%	28%	34%
Don't know	25%	27%	23%	21%	28%
Jordan en	oys solid	support	among	Republica	ins. He also attracts 24% of the Democratic vote. If it were not for Jordan's incumbency, Schlei would conceivably receive more Democratic support than is now the case. The impact of "slate voting" could affect Jordan's position in the survey.

AS THE INCUMBENT, Jordan will be listed on the ballot. Many Democrats inadvertently vote for all of the incumbents. In the last two elections, Jordan has been re-elected in the face of Democratic sweeps of the other Assemblyman Houston Flournoy trails State Controller Alan Cranston by the largest margin of any of the races measured in the survey. More than three-fourths of the registered Democrats interviewed support Cranston. No other Democrat enjoys higher support within his own party. In addition, Cranston attracts the highest Republican vote of the Democratic incumbents.

Cranston's name has appeared six times on a statewide ballot. In contrast, Flournoy won a little publicized primary in his first statewide effort and lacks a statewide

The net result is that Flournoy fails to receive a majority of his own partys' vote. But at the same time, 22% of the Republicans are undecided.

IN THE CLOSEST contest for statewide office, Democratic State Treasurer Bert Betts leads former Treasurer of the United States Ivy Baker Priest, by a scant 7% of the total vote. The "don't know" factor-the highest encountered in the survey—is 27%.

Both Betts and Mrs. Priest were unopposed in the primary. Although their names appeared on the ballot, neither extended much more than a token effort during the can paign. As a result, neither can be considered as well known by the California voter.

Because neither of the candidates became widely recognized as a result of the absence of a primary campaign, the Democratic preponderance in registration exerts itself in the race for state treasurer. Both candidates enjoy approximately the same amount of support within their own party, and both draw from the opposing party by the same percentage of the registration.

The representative voter results as of last week:

	Tot.	Dem.	Rep.	North	South
Betts (D)	40%	60%	13%	46%	3 7%
Priest		13%	62%	28%	37%

THE LAST OFFICE on the statewide ballot is that of attorney general of California, Democratic incumbent Thomas Lynch has more than a two-to-one lead at this time over his Republican rival, Santa Clara County Counsel Spencer Williams.

The results:
• =	Tot.	Dem.	Rep.	North	South
Lynch (D)	54%	74%	25%	60%	49%
Williams (R)	25%	6%	51%	21%	28%

with Williams' bare majority of Republicans. Williams' lack of a statewide image asserts itself in the Party break-downs, especially in the instance where he loses one-fourth of the Republican vote to Lynch.

This State Poll survey provides a reference point for the general election campaign. In some of the races images are well-established, the issues clearly defined. Some of the less-publicized races are characterized by their obscurity. As the campaign evolves, The State Poll will periodically survey the electorate to ascertain the progress of the candidates, and specifically to observe voter trends. Monday the State Poll will report its finding concerning public conceptions of the political philosophies of Gov. Brown and Ronald Reagan. In addition, the report will include the respondents' reactions when asked if they consider themselves of the "conservative," "moderate," or "liberal" factions of their own political party.

Minnesota GOP Picks Levander

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (49) Minnesota Republicans broke a state convention stalemate late Saturday and chose Harold E. Levander, 55year - old lawyer, as the party's choice for governor after 15 deadlocked ballots.

Levander defeated John S. Pillsbury Jr., 53, after a twoman stalemate for most of two days.

Pillsbury immediately moved to make the endorse ment unanimous.

THE BREAK CAME after a -hour summit conference of the candidates, GOP congressmen and party leaders in which it was agreed to cut the endorsing requirement from 60 to 55% The vote on the 15th ballot was 702 for Levander and 668 for Pillsbury, leaving Levander only 59 short on the next ballot, The 55% vote re-quirement was 761 and a series of county vote changes put Levander over the top on the 16th ballot. Levander, a pipe - smoking attorney from south St. Paul who once was a law partner of former Gov. Harold Stas sen, parlayed his victory from widespread rural strength, a strong base in his home area and an attractiveness to conservative elements, even though he denies any philosophical lahel. Barring upsets in the Sept. 13 primary, Levander will oppose Lt. Gov. A. M. (Sandy) Keith, 37, the upset winner for the Democratic Farmer-Labor party endorsement for governor in an equally stubborn convention a week ago. Keith defeated Gov. Karl F. Rolvaag for the DFL endorsement on the 20th hallot of a bitter party fight that still isn't settled.

NOVOSIBIRSK, USSR (UPI)-President Charles de Gaulle toured Russia's supersecret space center in central Asia Saturday and became the first known foreigner to witness a Soviet satellite launching.

His Communist hosts arranged the spectacular blastoff of a Cosmos earth satellite as a possible prelude to joint French-Soviet space shots.

De Gaulle pledged France to an agreement of cooperation with Russia in the space field during talks in Mos-cow earlier last week. SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) An explosion ripped the U.S. Navy minesweeper Stalwart at its mooring in San Juan harbor Saturday but none of the 61 crewman aboard was injured. The ship capsized and burned and one Navy fireman was hurt fighting the blaze.

It was miraculous nobody else was injured," a spokesman at the San Juan Navy base said. The injured fireman was overcome by smoke.

The Stalwart, a wooden-hulled vessel, is normally based at Charleston, S.C., and was in the Caribbean on maneuvers.

Navy spokesmen said the cause of the fire was undetermined although it was believed to have broken out in the boiler

Peace Talks MEANS SOMETHING Conjectured

WASHINGTON (4) - Sen Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Saturday the United States should welcome a move toward neutralization of Southeast Asia if it develops from French President Charles de Gaulle's Moscow talks.

The Senate Democratic leader said in an interview it eems obvious to him that De Gaulle has discussed with Soiet leaders "ways and means of how the conflict in Viet Nam can be terminated."

Mansfield did not go far as to predict De Gaulle will offer some concrete proposal but clear he hopes the French leader will do so.

"IF ANY move materializes as a result of these talks." he said, "I assume it will be on the basis of De Gaulle's stated

"I, for one, think that is a sound doctrine and good policy, provided there can be guaranteed neutralization with withdrawal of all foreign troops from the area."

He said the guarantees would have to be in the form of big-nation pledges to enforce neutrality in the area.

Mansfield thus sided with Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Fulbright has argued that the administration's policy of containment of China won't work and that neutralization of the whole area is the answer to the problem of Viet Nam.

MANSFIELD said that despite his criticism of Amercan policies, De Gaulle seems to be interested in trying to get negotiations started. He noted that the French president had dispatched a trusted subordinate to Peking and Hanot before leaving for Moscow.

"De Gaulle's fingers seem to be reaching out in many directions," Mansfield said, and among the matters to be considered in his talks with the Russians Viet Nam is not

by De Gaulle Highly Unusual: Pullout Stirs Castro Is Silent Dominicans

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Whether or not Premier Fidel Castro turns up again at the helm of the Cuban government, U.S. officials believe he faces major difficulties.

More than a week ago, on June 16, the State Department publicly noted that Castro had not been "in the minicans. foreground of events" in his own country since his last The Org major speech May I.

The lack of response from Cuba to the department's taunting statement has heightened the mystery about Castro's status.

The only reaction so far noted here was a brief commentary on Radio Havana. June 19. It called the State Department's remarks "absolutely a b s u r d." It said Castro had been "seen by everyone" at a June 4 pubpolicy for the neutralization lic meeting in Havana of all of Southeast Asia.

> U.S. officials were well aware that Castro attended the June 4 meeting. But they wondered why he sat silently on the platform while President Osvaldo Dorticos made a major policy speech and why Castro

had not been seen in any prominent role in Cuba recently. "Cuba-watchers" have noted that in the six weeks following May 1, Castro was less frequently mentioned in the Cuban press than during the six weeks before May I.

Castro has been "missing" for short periods before. He has been ill at least twice. But Washington officials feel it is uncharacteristic of him not to respond immediately to U.S. comments on his absence. What is certain, officials here believe, is that his troubles have been

The Cuban sugar crop is expected to be less than 4.5 million tons this year, compared with 6.1 million tons last year. This year's goal had been 6.5 million tons.

Castro is believed to be a cool $1-billion in debt to Communist countries for past economic aid and past trade deficits. He is probably running a $90-million trade deficit with the Soviet Union this year.

The need to maintain high exports to Communist countries has created shortages in the Cuban domestic economy. Refugees coming out of Cuba still tell of food rationing and long waits in line even for rationed foods. They report shortages of such basic foods as rice.

There has been an increase in police state methods, evidenced by a recent widespread purge of government employes, most of them accused of too much soft living.

Peace Force

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (P)—The imminent withdrawal of the Inter-American Peace Force from this troubled land has aroused both fear and hope among Do-

The Organization of American States (OAS) voted with-out dissent in Washington Friday night to withdraw the re-maining 8,000 - man peace force, and there were reports the first U.S. contingent would depart next week. There are 6,800 U.S. soldiers here and 1,200 men from other Latin-American countries, mostly Brazil.

President-elect Joaquin Balaguer will be inaugurated July 1, and the Dominican Republic has asked that the withdrawal start before then.

THE DECISION to pull out the peace force has rekindled speculation over what might have happened if American troops had not landed April 28, 1965, one of the most critical days in the political storm that erupted four days earlier.

Many Dominicans argue that U.S. intervention was illegal and violated sacred principles in the charter of the OAS, specifically that referring to nonintervention in the domestic affairs of member

But except for the small fringe of violently anti-U.S. nationalists and their political stepbrothers, the left-wing extremists, most Dominicans seem to agree the action was necessary to prevent a chaotic bloodbath of unknown proportions and indeterminate consequences.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flower-shaped cookies, the Seredipity Singers and the United States Marine Band will be used by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson Monday to open the first National Youth Conference on Natural Beauty and Conservation.

The meeting, a mixture of entertainment and serious discussion of beautification, will be held on the south lawn at the White House.

THE PRESIDENT'S wife will address 500 delegates from 50 states, all coming to Washington for a three-day session which the White House said would define the role of young Americans "in natural beauty projects and to plan action programs for their home communities."

The representatives of 10 youth organizations also will be taken on a Sunday tour of the nation's capital and visit what the White House described as numerous sites which have been improved since the First Lady began her nationwide beautification program.

Participating organizations included the Boy and Girl Scouts, the Campfire Girls and members of the 4-H Club.

"Punch and flower shaped cookies will be served from gaily striped tents on the south lawn," The White House announcement said.

Biggest U.S. Teachers' Group Meets

MIAMI BEACH (A)-Members of the nation's largest educational organization gathered here today with teacher militancy and complex civil rights problems likely to be the leading issues of a weeklong meeting.

"Teachers today are unwilling to accept things the way they are," said William G Carr, executive secretary of the National Education Association, in a pre-convention interview.

While teacher strikes and collective bargaining disputes are part of this new picture, Carr said "there is a deeper kind of militancy that is not economic. It is a desire to be ecognized, to have status, not to be pushed around."

"IT IS ALL RIGHT for them to be militant, but I hope they will be militant about the right things," Carr said. "I hope teachers recognize that militancy carries with it a measure of responsibility."

The NEA includes both teachers and school administrators in its membership of nearly a million. About 10,000 members are here for the group's 104th annual meeting.

John W. Gardner, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, addresses the first general session Monday, pointing up another comparatively new factor in education-the government's massive involvement in it

Desegregation, Northern and Southern, remains one of the knottiest problems of the schools, but Carr said civil rights is not an issue in the NEA itself except for one area that "persists to plague us."

"THE NEA has always been onen to anyone," Carr said. "We were one of the first large organizations not to pick any city for a meeting without identical facilities for all our members. We integrated Miami Beach in 1953." But in 1951, Carr said, the NEA began to take on as affiliates the separate Negro teacher organizations that existed in the Southern states. This was regarded then as "a sound," liberal policy," Carr said. Opinion later shifted and in 1964 the group adopted a resolution calling for abolition of all racial barriers in state affiliates and complete merger of Negro and white teacher associations, July 1 is the dead-

TOOK $187,440 IN '64 Bank Messenger Eludes Lawmen

By WEBSTER K. NOLAN

OAKLAND (UPI)-An anguished mother sat in her apartment waiting and hoping for some word from her son-a young man who walked out of a bank two years ago carrying a small fortune in a brown shopping bag.

"You know," said Mrs. Sophie Lajeunesse, "we were thinking of moving. But I can't. Who knows—maybe he might walk in the door some night."

The son, Theodore Nelson, who was employed as a messenger for the Oakland Bank of Commerce, has eluded police and the FBI successfully since the morning of June 23, 1964.

On that day, authorities said, the curly-haired 20-year-old messenger put $187,440 in small denominations in a shopping bag, exchanged a joke with a guard and casually sauntered out of the building.

ON ONE OCCASION the FBI came within 48 hours of catching Nelson. That was in the summer of 1964 when it was learned that the baby-faced young man was living in an apartment near Santa

It was a pleasant interlude for Nelson, who had changed his name to Dennis Portoian. He had made friends with several students at the local University of California campus. He treated them to expensive dinners and tipped waiters lavishly. He bought jewelry for the girls he dated.

At times he would rent a chauffeur-driven limousine. He also occasionally rented a bike and pedaled down to the beach for a day of sunshine.

The FBI traced the youth but when agents are rived at his apartment they discovered he had left two days before, after telling his friends he was unsure where he was going-persaps to Hollywood, he said, maybe to Spain.

If, since then, there have been any clues to his whereabouts, authorities have kept them a secret.

IMMEDIATELY following the theft, the young man lived in an apartment he had previously rented near the Berkeley campus of the University of Cali-fornia. He used the alias of Dr. Warren Campling and told the landlord he was doing research work at the school.

A few weeks later, he moved to Santa Barbara. He also took an apartment in Hollywood and traveled between the two residences by bus. During the interval, he had dyed his dark hair red, grown a beard and lost 20 of his 165 pounds.

His distressed mother is almost convinced he is mentally ill. "He probably doesn't even know hes' Ted Nelson," she said.

HE OTHER day, in a sort of offhand way, I asked people who have vacations on schedule this summer to let me know by postcard if they're going back to an old home or, if not, to what other place they plan to travel for a holiday.

Returns have been coming in on this rather loose poll. I hope to get a lot more but the first sampling is enlight-ening. It shows that among those who have taken trouble to answer, a majority are going on a sentimental journey back to an old home. It may change, but that's how things stand now

The way to do it is to write YES if you're going to any place of former residence. NO if you're not and in either case, if you wish, indicate your vacation area or (This might even help some people make up their minds.) Send card to Beach Combing Vacation Poll, IPT.

SOME WHO answered aren't going far.

Lloyd Leedom, the MWD director, reported he's saving his money to visit his birthplace: Redlands, about 80 miles away. That money-saving business is strictly waggish: Bro. Lloyd gives every indication of being well-heeled.

And then there's Mr. K. J. Patelski, who has made elaborate plans to visit her old town, Long Beach, Calif, She lives in Rossmoor!

More distant vacation spots range through the Northwest, Midwest, East and Terry Timmins is going to Santiago, Chile, not his old home town. The Timmins dog. Fritzi, will vacation in a new spot for him, a dog-care facility up the street.

Policemen Don't Hunt Trouble

POLICE BRUTALITY has become a sort of catch-word, a rallying cry among certain elements of our society.

And few will deny, including police, that an occasional officer has used more force than later seemed to have been required.

But there is another side to brutality -- civilian brutality.

The boundary between savagery and civilization is easily crossed and it rests upon the ability of men to satisfy their needs without damaging other people. Religion, education, custom, manners set out the general guidelines for civilization.

Specific legal guidelines are set forth in law and are enforced by policemen. These officers thus become society's front-line troops in defending peaceable citizens from the savagery of mankind.

POLICEMEN, by the very nature of their work, deal constantly with the raw edges of society, with the ill-mannered, the misfits, the vicious and the thoughtless.

These peace officers are human beings - on the whole quite idealistic human beings — and they get their bellies full of trouble. They don't seek trouble. It seeks them. Officers don't walk up to peaceful, law-abiding citizens and push them and peaceful homes and attack the Officers do get called to settle neighborhood arguments and fights. They do get called to catch robbers, rapists and burglars, to break up family quarrels, evict rowdies from public dances, theaters, sports events.

Sometimes these duties can be performed with little or no force. Sometimes they can't, How can an officer know whether a man who has beaten his wife and threatened her with a gun will use that gun or his fists on the officer? He can't, of course.

THE PEOPLE who charge police brutality on the whole have only themselves to blame. Their confrontation with police came because they were not peacefully tending to their jobs, their families or obeying the law.

The man who beats his wife, the kids who crash a party, the profane drunk, the snarling smart alec who ran a red light are the ones who sought trouble-not the police.

A person being arrested should know that he is-willingly or not on the front lines of society. Just as a soldier cannot stop to negotiate peace during a battle, neither can a policemen. The place to negotiate is at the conference table or the court.

THERE IS AN OLD MOTTO in the newspaper world: If you don't want it printed don't let it happen.

If you don't want trouble with the police don't start it. But if you do start it don't yell police brutality. It is not the policeman who is the brutal savage. It's the peraround. Officers don't enter quiet son who breaks society's rules.

LBJ, Congressmen Exchange Views

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON - President Johnson last week began what appears to be a new tack in achieving a larger consensus in Congress on administration Viet Nam policies.

The President and his top advisers met in the cabinet room with about 30 congressmen who have made recent trips to Viet Nam and there was an informal, free - wheeling exchange of viewpoints for over two hours.

The manner in which the affair was conducted favorably impressed most of the congressmen.

For example, P. Charles Gubser, R-Calif., a member of the Armed Services Committee and a veteran of many White House briefings, said he considers last week's session "the first real exchange of views and exploration of alternatives" he has experithe White House.

"Before, they always just shoved at us a package on what has happened and that was that," Gubser said.

Gubser said he came away from the meeting with a feeling that the administration still is firmly resolved to achieve its goals in Viet Nam, but "feels a real need for a broader base of support" both in Congress and among the people.

Attended by Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Chief of Staff Gen. Earle Wheeler, the meeting so engrossed the President that he was nearly a half hour late to a reception for Saudi Arabia King Faisal.

* * * * * REP. JOHN V. TUNNEY, D-Calif.. believes in getting a first-hand look at legislative problems.

Like many of his colleagues, Tunney has been perplexed by conflicting claims over whether or not two proposed Colorado River dams would damage the scenic Grand Canyon.

So Tunney, the young athletic son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, is planning to spend his Independence Day vacation making a jouncing, perilous raft trip down the river in Grand Canyon National Park for an on-the-scene assessment.

INTERIOR SECRETARY Stewart Udall used a colorful anecdote to illustrate his point in a recent speech about water pollution problems.

Talking to a group of chemists in White Sulphur Springs, Va., Udall told how Samuel Johnson, the dictionary compiler who was notoriously unkempt, once found himself seated at dinner next to a young lady.

She looked at him with a jaundiced eye and remarked haughtily, "Dr. Johnson, you smell."

"On the contrary, my dear," replied Johnson, "You smell. I stink." The point is, Udall told his audience, that in the smelling process there must be a source of odor and a perception of that odor. Today it is our rivers that stink; the public smells."

CAPITAL CHATTER

FROM HIS NEARLY 20 YEARS of driving cabs here, Eddie Mooney has evolved a theory that the Washington tourist pattern varies according to the administration.

During the Eisenhower years, the tourist traffic was less but seemed to consist of well-to-do visitors who were quite well informed, Kennedy's administration brought more tourists who were not as pecunious - "academic types who were real sharp," according to Mooney.

Now, says the cabbie, there are more visitors than ever, but they seem much poorer and "don't know what's going on." Mooney, who apparently has formed his opinion from the size of his tips and the eavesdropping inescapable in his craft, likens the current visitor to those who came during the Truman administration.

Solons Feel 'Heat' Over Prop. 14

SACRAMENTO --- The shadow of controversial Proposition 14 aircady hangs over the 1967 legislature. It was in 1964 that California voters overwhelmingly approved Proposition 14. They thus amended the state constitution to provide that no law may be enacted which restricts the right of property owners to sell or rent, Opponents called it a racial-discrimination amendment,

California Supreme Court subsequently ruled Proposition 14 unconstitutional. And if the federal supreme court agrees, the issue of fair-housing vs. property rights again will be before lawmakers.

A TIPOFF on the future: California Real Estate Association has asked the 240 nominees for the legislature to say whether they would support of the Rumford Fair Housing Act in 1967.

The Rumford legislation was the prime target of Proposition 14, emotional issues, they are likely to be dumped from office.

So be they bigots or liberals, you can look for growing legislative support for repealing the Rumford Fair Housing Act, The reason: the tremendous margin racked up by Proposition 14 and the political heat that still is generated by its supporters.

Seldom does a professional politician have an opportunity to take the temperature of his voters on a breadand-butter issue. Polls are half-hearted attempts at this goal. But they represent only a small sample and always are subject to some question.

strong expression of the electorate without some political risk. On a key emotional issue such as racial discrimination versus property rights, the elective official has little choice. That is one reason why a number of lawmakers who last time supported the Rumford Fair Housing Act are prepared next time either to repeal it or to revamp it drastically.

Both Assemblymen Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, and Joe A. Gonsalves, D-Norwalk, have indicated new positions on the subject.

IN KENNICK'S 44th Assembly District, Proposition 14 carried 79,825 to 21,951. The margin was even greater in territory to the north which includes a new Senate district where Kennick is the Democratic nominee.

In the Gonsalves 66th Assembly District, the margin on Proposition 14 was 57,000 to 15,000.

Long Beach's Ann Bowler, GOP national committeewoman, presented a bouquet to Mrs. Reagan "on behalf of millions and millions of California grass roots workers as the first lady of California."

Nixon endorsed the tribute by saluting "Governor Reagon." TV personality Art Linkletter, master of ceremonies, affirmed that Republicans here are 100% behind Lady Bird's campaign to beautify America: 'They want to put handsome Ronald Reagan in the governor's chair in California.

Linkletter got a laugh asking if Sen. Tom Kuchel were in the audience, then speculating that he may have made a wrong turn on the freeway and ended up speaking in South Dakota. Kuchel's course with regard to Reagan's run is still an unknown quantity.

However, Senator Murphy reported that Kuchel had undergone dental surgery that day and so was unable to attend. Murphy said Kuchel enthusiastically looked forward to getting Republican victory not only in California but across the nation.

REAGAN, in his introduction speech for Nixon, said the state GOP holds "the power and the responsibility not for just a narrow political victory, but our task is to raise a standard to which wise and honest men can repair."

Nixon said that through 20 years of speaking in all 50 states, "this is without question one of the greatest political gatherings I've ever been privileged to address.

President Johnson's "political slip is beginning to show," said Nixon, and what's more, "I don't think he comes over too good on TV. Come to think of it, I don't think Brown comes over too good on TV either but that Ronnie Reagan, wow!"

Johnson had it all his own way in 1964, said Nixon — conservatives thought he was conservative, liberals thought he was liberal and the rest didn't know. In 1966, conservatives think he's liberal, liberals think he's conservative and the rest still don't know."

Nixon said he had the word from a Texas conservative: "Anybody who believes LBJ is a conservative would believe Richard Burton married for money!'

ON THE SERIOUS SIDE, Nixon got his biggest applause while discussing the Viet Nam war and remarking that this is the first foreign war in which the U.S. has got no support from its European allies, "We are alone — the loneliest nation in the world."

Nixon proposed that any nation trading with the enemy should get no foreign aid from the U.S. If it's a nation not getting our aid, that nation would be denied rights to trade in U.S. ports. The applause boomed.

German Unification Proposed, but World Attitude Seems to Be 'Nein'

WASHINGTON - The majority leader of the German Bundestag, Dr. Rainer Barzel, was in town recently and had some interesting suggestions on what he thought might be done about divided Germany.

The energetic Barzel, whose star is said to be still rising in the West German political firmament, suggested in essense that Germany might be re-Soviet troo sconced on German soil "within the framework of a European security

Under Barzel's proposal (which both he and the West Germany government were quick to characterize as "personal"), the two Germanies would become one under a common government. Russia would be brought into something like NATO or its equivalent and would have the right to maintain troops in the reunited coun-

Moscow's immediate reaction to Barzel's suggestion was, as might have been expected, negative. While officially the Russians ignored the speech, the Russian press did let loose a blast or two against the idea. This does not mean that the Russians might not change their minds at some point and allow discussion of the scheme, but for the moment the idea is simply a glint in the eye of Herr Barzel.

THE GLINT AND THE IDEA are there because Herr Barzel is on the political make. He has risen rapidly in the ranks of the Christian Democratic party and those who know him say he is eyeing fondly eventual residence in the West German chancellor's chair

A good sound German political is to talk about reunification. Germany has now been divided for over 20 years, a fact which bitterly rankles the breasts of people on both sides of the unnatural border. The poality not much closer today than it was 20 years ago. For the rest of the world is on the whole content to keep

Germany divided. The United States and other countries in the West pay lip service to reunification, but the matter is not very close to their hearts. Occasionally when a Berlin crisis is heated up, there is wonderment whether things wouldn't be better if Germany were unified, but when no crisis is at hand the general attitude is that perhaps things are better the way they are and that the world is safer for having Germany split in two.

Certainly the Russians never have expressed any desire for a reunited Germany. They have been adamant ever since World War II that they would not tolerate a united Germany. They feel that their own self-interests are imperiled if the Germans form one country and their basic foreign policy has during the last two decades been to keep Germany split.

OTHER COUNTRIES in the Eastern Bloc feel similarly. The Poles and the Czechs and the Yugoslavs bear no love for the Germans and the prospect of a United Germany is for them a nightmare. A united Germany has in the past oppressed them all and in this case their memories are indeed very

Whether Germany can forever be kept split is moot. Russia, however, has tried its best to establish the permanency of the division. It has carefully integrated East Germany's economy into that of Russia and has turned away from the West. It keeps a careful eye on those who are in power in East Germany and makes sure its own hand-chosen people retain the reins of government. It reinforces these

The goal of reunification is in actuactions by having Russian troops in or close to East Germany making sure that it can move -- but fast -- should unfavorable political developments crop up in the East zone.

So, Herr Barzel's proposal was obviously made for the benefit of the Germans for they are the only ones WALTER who are ready, willing and anxious to have the 20-year split ended and to re-RIDDER unite their country.

With things going well economi-greatest political issue. Herr Barzel did good job of calling the attention of his prospective constituents and of the international diplomatic community to himself and to his ideas on reunifica-

A following decision gave encouragement for single-family dwelling owners when the court said a proper case had not been made against the landlord who had served eviction notice on a Negro tenant. But it is a confusing decision because it apparently does not apply if the property has a mortgage on it that is "public assisted"-which can mean FHA. Veteran or loans from banks or saving and loan associations where deposits are insured by the federal government.

THIS IS ALL confusing. But legislation now before Congress would be more restrictive than even the Rumford Act. It is HR 14765 and Senate 3296. In his State of the Union address the President specifically called for a new civil rights bill for legislation "resting on the fullest authority of the federal government to prohibit racial discrimination in the sale or rental of housing."

It is far more far-reaching than the Rumford Act and its "public assisted" requirements. Under the federal bill it would be assumed that any building that had any material in it which crossed a state line would come under the interstate commerce laws. It might be a nail, part of the plumbing or electrical equipment. It could mean every building ever erected in this

THERE IS A possibility that the Rumford Act or parts of it may be revised or repealed in the next meeting of the state legislature. These assemblymen and senators are aware of the fact that by a twothirds majority the voters of the state in voting for Prop. 14 were opposed to the drastic provisions federal legislation is passed it will be more stringent than is the Rumford Act.

It is now being debated in Congress. There is strong opposition to this section of the bill. But, unless the property owners let their congressmen and senators know their views, it may pass. Great pressure is put on them by the President and pressure groups, But the important pressure should come from the folk back home whom these legislators are supposed to represent.

IF PASSED it would mean a single-family or any other dwelling would be subject to federal penalties if they refused to rent or sell their property because of racial or religious reasons. You'll Never Know Until You Fight a Brush Fire

By MARK CLUTTER

"SEVERAL HUNDRED MEN are fighting desperately to bring the rag-ing brush fire under control."

That is a sentence you read again and again in California newspapers. It is routine news and does not strike a spark in the mind of the average reader. California, especially the dry Southland, is vulnerable to brush and

To understand what wilderness fire-fighting is like, you have to go

It is rougher than many an meantry battle.

During World War II the Navy called for volunteers to fight a mountain fire. Many of the students in the yeoman class, eager for any escape from those dang typewriters, answered challenge. e turned as and at I a.m., gave us a bit of breakfast, two K-rations each and loaded us into trucks. I never lonew where we went, but it was somewhere above the Los Angeles Basin, As we gained altitude the night turned cold. We huddled together for warmth, but that didn't help. We shivered and our teeth chattered. No one slept in that truck.

AT DAWN we reached the end of the road. The fire was above us, fairly close to the crest of a mountain covered with brush and a little timber. The sailors, 200 or so, marched in a column of ones along a trail, looking rather out of place in the wilderness There were hundreds of civilian volunteers, as many as could be mustered

For many of the yeomen it was the hardest physical day of their lives. Although we were strong young men who took calisthenics daily, our hands were office soft and our muscles not hard enough for the job.

When we came close to the fire, which formed a long line across the face of the mountain, we were issued picks, shovels and axes. A ranger showed us what to do. We were to chop down brush and dig ditches in the hope of stopping the blaze.

We worked. We worked, My fellow yeomen seemed to have some furious need to prove that they were as tough as other sailors and the civilians. 'Sick' of Kennedys

EDITOR:

It makes me sick at these Kennedys trying to be always in the news. Sen-ator Kennedy is now pointing his finger at LSD. (Believe me I'm not for it either) but look at the lives and homes and untold broken marriages because of liquor.

Mr. Kennedy must remember his family with their liquor interest has fostered this indirectly-much worse than the drug LSD.

THE COMING WATER FAMINE. By Rep. Jim Wright, Coward-Mc-

Last summer New Yorkers had the scare of their lives when their water supply dropped to an awesome low. We in California have long known the need to conserve the most precious of all liquids. A good part of the rest of the nation has just been finding it out. Congressman Wright of Texas has had 20 years experience with water problems across the United States; he s a ranking member of the House Public Works Committee and has been actively involved with all federal legislation on water. His is not a mere academic discussion of the problem.

He tells of the disappearing prime water supplies, in the Great Lakes, for example, and the crippling effect on that area's industries. The heedless dumping of factory wastes into the rivers and streams-the most dramatic example cited is the Hudson-which can no longer cleanse themselves, he sees as a major crime. To Rep. Wright the water problems of New York, Chicago, Washington, Cleveland, Los Angeles and the farmlands of a good part of the United States make these disaster areas that mysterious double - sealed envelopes were sent Sen. Dodd by Gen.

Ordinary letters from Klein, including those marked personal and confidential, came by regular mail. In addition, Klein sent by a special messenger envelopes especially scaled with Scotch tape. Inside were other sealed envelopes. No one around Dodd's office ever got an explanation from the senator as to what these double envelopes contained.

During the closed-door Dodd hear ings, John F. Sonnett, the Wall Street attorney now representing Dodd, became so unctuous in referring to stolen documents that Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., stopped him. Cooper moved that the words "stolen documents" be stricken from the record. Chairman Stennis, D-Miss., sustained him. No less than four senators rebuked Sonnet for his repetitious and long-winded cross-examination during the closed-door hearings, SEN. DODD'S ATTORNEYS have been claiming that the senator never delivered the speeches written for him by Klein. It is true that one speech, which we reported had been written for Dodd in August, 1959, was never delivered on the Senate floor.

The senator explained to Klein in a letter Sept. 17, 1959: "While I did not have occasion to make such a speech on the floor of the Senate during the last crowded days of the session, I did make use of this material in a congratulatory message I sent on Adenauer's (then West German Chancellor) 10th anniversary."

Two years later, Dodd claimed he made a speech which his aides now claim he didn't make. On Sept. 18, 1961, he wrote to Klein: "I am sorry I couldn't reach you late Friday as I made my statement on the floor of the Senate, as I assume you know by now. Here is a marked copy of the Congressional Record."

The senator made at least a half dozen other speeches for Klein, including one on Sept. 25, 1962, praising Klein as a man "known on both sides of the aisle as a dedicated American patriot. In 1959, Klein even arranged with the late Sen. Styles Bridges, R-N.H., to yield the Senate floor so Dodd could make a speech defending Lewis Strauss (subsequently rejected by the Senate for secretary of commerce). Klein wrote to Dodd on June 19, 1959, that he had "told Styles Bridges

President Johnson was flying to Detroit with a group of senators, including his unrelenting Viet Nam critic Morse, when the President told a story of a telephone call he recently made to the senator.

"Wayne," he said, "my ox is in the ditch, and I want you to help me get it out. I am appointing you as head of the mediation panel to prevent a strike on the airlines. I just wanted you to know it before you read it in the newspapers.

"You settled the railroad strike and the longshoremen's strike and the steel strike," the President recalled. Now I want you to help me out with the airlines."

"Wayne replied," said the President, "that he hadn't settled those strikes and that people wouldn't understand it because of our differences over Viet Nam. But I told him, 'I know you wanted Goldwater or Kennedy to be President because neither one is as smart as me. If they were President, I wouldn't be calling on you to

The senator from Oregon chuckled as the President told the story to other senators, and then he added a concluding bit.

"THE PRESIDENT asked me how my cattle were. 'Fine,' I said, 'and some morning if you get up early enough, I'll slip down to the White House and drive you out to Maryland and show you cattle the like of which you've never seen in Texas." "'We'll do that some morning when the weather is warm and the flowers are out,' the President told me."

Thus bantered two strong men who disagreed vigorously on Far Eastern policy but had the interest of the nation at heart when it came to serious labor dispute,

Dutch Miller to Retire as City Chief Lifeguard

The beach means many things.

To an artist the beach means painting seagulls. To a child it means building sand castles. To a boy it means watching girls.

But to a lifeguard it means hauling people out of the water, shouting at them to stay near the shore and warning them to keep away from the Lifeguards really don't like to haul, warn and shout, but with nearly 5 million Long Beach swimmers challenging the Pacific each summer they have no choice. And it's a good thing. Last year Long Beach lifeguards rescued 1,500 swimmers who made the trip out but couldn't make it back.

ROY (DUTCH) Miller, who has patroled the shores of Long Beach as a lifeguard since 1918,

There is no single age group or sex that gets into trouble in the water. The ones who do foolish things are the ones who forget they are in the ocean instead of in a pool where they can hang on to the sides when they get tired." As chief lifeguard, the

64 - year - old Miller says that watching "pool swimmers try out the ocean" makes up most of the lifeguard's work. "Our boys spend their time watching people go into the water up to different depths to see how they handle themselves. We watch the swimmers who seem unsteady."

Before the breakwater was added to the Long Beach shoreline in the 1930s, Miller comments, the lifeguards had an easier time watching bathers. "People were bathers. "People were afraid of the big surf and only the good swimmers would challenge it. Sure, ever: strong swimmers ran into trouble, but we knew where all the riptides were and how to make a rescue in the surf.

But after the breakwater was put in, the

BUT NOT all of the problems a lifeguard has to handle are in the water. They also have to keep the shore safe. One acquaintance tells of the time Miller spotted a group of young men roaming around the beach looking for trouble.

"Miller walked right into the middle of the gang, looked at them and said 'now why can't you boys behave?' The punks were so surprised that they didn't give Miller any more trouble."

All Miller says is, "Kids are kids. We've never had much trouble with them."

When Miller came to Long Beach from Iowa in 1906, the city was employing a single lifeguard. "There was no real need for any more. No one swam east of Alamitos Avenue and some of the hotels had their own beach guards."

There were 16 municinai lifeguards when Miller joined the staff in 1918. He now commands a force of 104 during the summer, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

COMBINED HIGH-RISE RESIDENTIAL AND COMMERCIAL New Zoning for Shore Area Pondered

By GEORGE WEEKS

The City Planning Commission has begun a study of a new zoning classifica-tion — combined high-rise residential and commercial uses — designed specifically for the shoreline area south of Ocean Boulevard hetween Alamitos and Cherry Commissioners are acting at the request of the City Council, which passed along a suggestion from the Advisory Economic Development Committee.

Councilmen also referred the proposal to their Ordinance Committee, which is expected to defer its study until after the planners report.

Chairman Virgil H. Spongberg of the Economic Development Committee said the new classification should encourage high-quality apartment, motel and hotel developments, along with sula High School.

auxiliary uses such as restaurants in conjunction with the basic improvements.

He also favored "standards similar to those of the R-5 classification." This classification is tailored for apartment buildings five stories or more in height with special requirements for setbacks and other standards of quality.

Commission staff members said some such classification as CR-5, combining high-rise residential and commercial uses, may prove feasible.

The city advisory committee headed by Spong-berg noted that the section of Ocean Boulevard from Alamitos to Cherry is now classified R-4 for all types of residential construction. The area includes a few motels authorized by variances.

It may surprise tennis officials, but tennis fans, like other sports followers, like personalities. Billie Jean Moffitt King is a personality. She is, in fact, a riot.

Billie Jean talks to herself, the ball boys, the line judges, the fans, just anyone who happens to be within shouting dis-

"C'mon, Billie Jean! . . . Why, or why, Billie? . . Miss a shot like that, why? . . . Fudge! . . What a shot! . . Nice going, Billie. . . . Get your first serve in!" . . . and on and on it goes.

judge know her disapproval of a call.

"Are you kidding?" she yelled at one judge during the Southern California Championships. "Boy, oh boy, did you miss

"I won't complain about a close shot that a judge calls against me," she says.

"but if it's that poor a call I'll say something. Once in awhile I say more than just something, too."

B.J. has been flirting with the Wimbledon championship for several years and there are some who will tell you this could be the year for the little dynamo from Long Beach, recently moved to Albambra, "For the first time in my career," she said, "I have no big weakness. I used to have only a strong net game, but now my ground strokes are much better and so is my forehand return of service. They give me much more confidence."

Now she's ready to win Wimbledon, the big classic.

"Wimbledon is the one goal of every tennis player," says Billie, "It's the livin' end in tennis."

Australia's Margaret Smith, the world's top-ranked player and defending champion at Wimbledon, and Maria Bueno, three-time Wimbledon champion, are the Wimbledon favorites. However, Billie Jean once again is the favorite with the huge Wimbledon galleries.

One must admit a Wimbledon cham pionship for Billie Jean would be most appropriate. A crown for a King.

Big Stakes for Hockey Franchise

If you can't play poker with millionaires, it still costs

So we'll be looking over the shoulders of Dan Reeves and Jack Kent Cooke for the next few months as they play their cards to a showdown for Los Angeles' franchise in the expanding National Hockey League.

Right now Cooke has the deal, but Reeves' Blades, expected to cash in their chips and fold, have refused to be bluffed out. 'It's our understanding that the NHL is giving Cooke until Sept. 15 to start building his arena," says Jack Geyer, executive director of the Blades. Where did they get that idea?

"We got it from people we feel should know," Geyer replies coolly. Of course, Cooke is weary of insisting he was bluffing about building his own arena just to get a better deal at the L.A. Sports Arena, which now has thrown in with the

"I don't know how many different ways I can say it," Cooke grimaces, "but I told the NHL I'm going to build an arena and I have never deviated from that resolve. Also, NHL president

Clarence Campbell denied in another newspaper last week that there was a deadline. But it would be embarrassing to admit that the league had so little confidence in one of its new members that it had to issue franchises with strings attached. Campbell tried to give the Blades back their $10,000 ante that it cost to apply for a franchise. They sent it right back to him, noting that because of the condition imposed upon Cooke to build his arena they feel their application is good until he does.

So what if he doesn't? The Toronto Globe and Mail quoted Campbell in reply to that very question recently:

"It (Cooke's franchise) would then be in default."

Then Campbell was further quoted:

'All I can say is that the NHL definitely will have franchise in Los Angeles in 1967-68 and I think Cooke will operate it. But we aren't going to hold up the other five clubs if he isn't ready."

What, then, would the NHL do? "It would take only 90 days to change ownership

(of the new franchise)," Campbell replied.

However, it seems most likely that Cooke will get his arena going before Sept. 15, regardless of dead-

Some say the stakes are too high for both Reeves and Cooke. They say that Reeves already is too far in bock with the Rams to duel anybody in a battle of bank accounts. They even say that all Reeves hopes to wind up

Whether such gossip is true is no longer pertinent because Reeves has cut in other financial resources in Clarence Martin, a Cadillac dealer and real estate tycoon, and film producer Tony Owen, So then they say that Cooke is having trouble arranging financing for his arena, that he doesn't want to extend his personal fortune that far. But only a fool would bid for a prize he couldn't afford to keep, and Cooke is nobody's fool.

It will be interesting to watch. Reeves has an ace in the hole . . . and Cooke has the Kings.

. A Word From the Readers

Pearls from the Sunday pulpit:

Chuck Bell, the bonds and insurance man at Ocean Center Bidg., comments thusly on the I, P-T special section last Sunday, "World of Two Wheels:" "In your effort to try and whitewash the ever-increasing Murdercycle Menace, you neglected a very important item. For every person that rides a motorcycle you will find at least a thousand persons who hate him, not only for the ridiculous way he rides and parks his bike but also how he terrorizes the residential areas at all hours of the day and night in low gear with exhaust pipes wide open. Want to do something for motorcycling? Start a campaign to put proper mufflers on motorcycles; they might gain a lot of friends that way."

.Mrs. E. Bennett, 3546 Centralia, Lakewood: "In regards to Joe Blake's statement about Vin Scully and Jerry Doggett, how come if he is such a Dodger hater, he knows so much about the announcers? I think they are the best in the baseball field. He should switch to the Angel announcers which I think are terrible."

Larry Hess, 15791 Azaley Way, Westminster: "That wise guy Joe Blake doesn't know anything at all. Scully and Doggett are the best sportscasters around. Too bad there are guys like Blake around writing stupid, corny

. James R. Peck, 1925 Daisy Ave.: "If you wanted to, you could say something nice about the Angels. The people at the Independent, Press-Telegram must not have received enough free passes to Anaheim. Ross Newhan isn't so first-class he has a right to dig the Angels every chance he gets. And Malcolm Epley knocked Leo Durocher so much this spring that we have lost the Cubs for spring training. Long Beach is supposed to be a big city, but you people of the press are very petty. The Dodgers are good and the Angels are GREAT!

(The few times Newhan might "dig" the Angels are in the interests of good reporting. As the dean of Angel reporters, Ross has a better insight to the club than any other baseball writer in the U.S. Mac Epley's single "hlast" at Durocher was occasioned because "The Lip' failed to appear at a charity banquet here that he had promised to attend. Leo deserved the knock.)

E. H. Jacobe, 2242 Belmont: "Regarding your article, 'Oakland Lets Down The Youth,' I'm like you-how can this happen in America . . . but this is not the only vicinity that voted down bonds for school. I believe our neighbor county has to cut several programs out of their school system because they voted down school bonds. But I wonder how many of these people that voted against these bonds would give up their boat or swim-ming pool to cut down expenses? Thanks for the interest you' have taken to bring this to our attention.'

THE HOUSTON ASTROS' amazing start this season can be explained in simple terms by most baseball men. All players coming away from the Astrodome moan about the playing surface. Besides balls skipping off the ersatz grass like hardwood, the players complain that the stuff gives way when they dig in. The Astros are used to the . . . Report from Atlanta: The Braves' poor start has upset the Georgia city, but to "preserve our image" the Atlanta front office has no intention of firing Bobby Bragan during the season. Some of the Braves' players will be unhappy to hear the news.

. Report from Detroit: Charley Dressen, out of commission with another heart attack, is unlikely ever to resume his manager's role with the Tigers. (And that's a good thing for Charley's sake . . . wife Edna claims Jolly Cholly spends 24 hours per day thinking about his ball club.... and for those of us who know Mr. Dressen well, that's not good, but the truth.)

Also out of commission (temporarily, he says) is the old umpire, Beans Reardon. As he counts his money from his Long Beach Budweiser distributorship, Beans roars (how else does he express himself?): "They can't keep a good man down; especially a good umpire

Keep your eyes on Mondo (as we advised you earlier); he may be the future world lightchampion. And wasn'i that TV station worried when Ramos and two other tigers ended their matches in one round? Remembrances of Wimbledon

"Playing at Wimbledon is one of the most satisfying and exhibitanting experiences a tennis player could ever have. It is without a doubt the greatest of all tournaments."-Beverly Baker Fleitz, former tennis star.

"I quit when I wanted to and I've never had any regrets. Other things became more important, like children and home life."

But it's hard to dismiss the melancholia that engulfs her when the big one comes around. This weekend she's water skiing down on the Colorado River, but part of her is at Wimbledon,

The size of today's payoffs always makes for good conversation, and Olin was glad to comment.

THE U.S. OPEN WAS SUCH a great tournament that we thought you might be interested in a few untold stories to wrap up our coverage of the event.

Billy Casper, who converted to the Mormon religion earlier this year, drew Jim Stark, a sophomore on the Stanford golf team, as his caddy. Arnold Palmer drew a Mormon youth who is the No. 4 man on the Brigham

Stark isn't accustomed to packing those 75-pound style golf bags and during his first practice round with Casper, he was having trouble bending over to pick up divots while still controlling the bag. Walking along with them was Billy Casper Jr. age

Casper Sr. overheard the transaction, however, and warned Stark not to give his son more than a dollar. "I don't want him spoiled. He'll expect it every tournament,"

After the tournament, Bill asked Stark what his fee was, and the youngster said about $7 a round . . . "but I'll only charge you $5 for the playoff since I wasn't count-

Billy smiled as he pulled a check out of his pocket with the fee already filled in . . . $2,000.

Billy Jr. quickly got Stark aside and wanted his fee. The caddy finally came up with four dollar bills, all he had, but warned him "don't you dare tell your father

Palmer, incidentally, paid his caddy $1,000.

John Miller, who finished as the low amateur, originalty signed up to caddy in the Open . . . but qualified to play in the event held on his home course.

THE OPEN WAS A SHATTERING experience for many players . . . Palmer, Gary Player, Doug Sanders, etc. And, of course, Gene Littler.

You undoubtedly read about his second-round 83 with a nine on the 11th hole after shooting an opening 68 . . . but what went virtually unnoticed in the frantic finish of the tournament was another 80 on the final round with an EIGHT on the par-four 18th.

Talk about slow play and the USGA's "speed-up" edict, Ben Hogan declared that "In my day, I was considered a slow player . . . but compared to today's players, I'm extremely fast. It seems to me the younger players are the slowest of all. They're real surveyors.

Hogan, incidentally, won an exemption from qualifying for the 1967 Open at Baltusrol with his high finish.

Jack Fleck, the man who beat Hogan in the 1955 Open over the same course, made it plain from the out-set that he was a bitter man. He feels he should have been exempted from qualifying like Hogan, who got in via a special pass. Jack also feels he never received the credit

"It's unfortunate," said Ed Furgol, the 1954 Open champ who is a close friend of Fleck's, "but that's the way he is. Jack believes the public and press never gave him his due. Just like this year, they're already saying Palmer lost rather than Casper won it. That's what they did in '55, All they talked about is that Hogan should

Most unusual sight: Seeing a woman's wig rolling down one of the course's steep hills after it had been knocked off by the milling mob during the playoff.

Dave Marr must have set a record for hitting sand traps on the front nine of the final round, and knocked his tee shot into another bunker on the 10th hole when a fellow, who had just joined a friend in the gallery, asked "is he a good sand player?"

"He is by now," answered the friend!

Cooke Heads Soccer Loop

U.S.-Canada Pro League Will Start Operations Next May

Ambitious Jack Kent Cooke expanded his sports empire in another direction Saturday as head of a new coast-to-coast professional soccer league.

Cooke, who already owns the Lakers and a "conditional" franchise in the expanding National Hockey League, led a group which won formal recognition in San Francisco Saturday from the United States Soccer Football Assn., the ruling body for the sport in this country.

The new league, to be called the North American Soccer League with teams in Canada as well as the U.S., won out for official sanction over two other proposed national bodies.

Players will be acquired through an international draft and Sunday games will be telecast nationally in color, according to Cooke.

Cities included are Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Boston, New York, Washington, Toronto and Vancouver. Two others, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, are being considered as later members.

Four of the owners, including Cooke, also own NHL franchises — George Fleharty at San Francisco, Weston Adams at Boston and the Madison Square Garden Assn. in New

Artificial Reef Plans Advanced

Artificial reefs around seven piers in Southern California will be built within the next four months, and, if the reefs are as productive for fish life as other reefs have been, fishing on those piers will be from 25 to 50 percent better. That is the way that fishing was affected at the Imperial Beach Fishing Pier in San Diego.

The California Wildlife Conservation Board awarded the $163,450 contract for the seven reefs to the Connolly-Pacific Company of Long Beach. The reefs will be constructed at Oceanside, San Clemente, Huntington Beach, Seal Beach, Hermosa Beach, Manhattan Beach and Venice Piers. The Venice Pier is called the Los Angeles Municipal Quarry rock will be used. The funds will come from the WCB's $5 million share of the California Beach, Park, Recreational and Historical Facilities Bond Act of 1964.

Raymond J. Nesbit, executive officer of the WCB, explained that a previous contract for the seven reefs had been awarded to another company, but administrative difficulties prevented it from handling the project. The plans were put up for rebid recently and the Connolly-Pacific Company submitted the lowest bid.

Installed around the outer limits of a pier in about 20 or 30 feet of water, the reefs rise only three or four feet from the bottom and offer no hazards to boaters.

ALL OF THIS BRINGS UP a question about the new Belmont Pier, scheduled for completion this fall. How about its artificial reef? Such a reef has been promised by the Wildlife Conservation Board, but there is a cheaper way that will benefit all parties concerned.

The Guy F. Atkinson Company, which is building the new pier, also has the contract to demolish the old pier. which consists of badly eroded concrete pilings and a concrete floor. In this writer's humble opinion, there is no reason why the Atkinson Company could not dispose of the old pier and form an artificial reef with the concrete.

It would save money for the Atkinson Company, the City of Long Beach and the WCB would not have to put out one dime for quarry rock from Catalina Island. It's a cinch that perch, opaleye, bass and other fish are not going to make a fuss about whether the reef is built of rock or concrete. Within a matter of weeks, marine growth will start encrusting anything that is put on the

Charles H. Turner, biologist with the Department of Fish and Game at Terminal Island, says the idea is a great one. Turner and his scuba-diving crew have been installing the artificial reefs off Southern California piers. They recently installed the artificial kelp beds off Redondo

THE TROPHY FOR THE FIRST bluefin tuna apparrently will go to Pierpoint Landing even though the actual first bluefin was caught by an angler aboard the All-America Nut Company's Goober, skippered by Barney

Tillotson, several days ago.

Bob Masters 206 Covina Ave., Long Beach, fishing on the Liberty Thursday, got the second bluefin, a 14pound, 8-ounce fish. The Liberty was Pierpoint's sundown boat and Gary LaMont was the skipper. It was just off Pt. Vicente when the fish was caught.

Inasmuch as the Port of Long Beach limits the bluefin and albacore trophies to Pierpoint and Pacific Landings, the trophy must go to Pierpoint this year. However, it would be a nice gesture on the part of the Long Beach Harbor Department to give a letter of commendation to Tillotson and the angler who really got the first bluefin.

It's later than you think regardless of the nice warm weather that we are having. The archery deer season in the coastal (or early) deer area begins July 16 and continues through July 31. Then, on Aug. 6, the early deer season begins.

It would be wise for all hunters to get their licenses and deer tags now. At the same time, pick up a copy of the 1966 Hunting Regulations so as to be prepared for all the seasons this year.

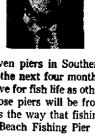

OUTDOOR PERSONALS-Three anglers on the Belmont Pier half-day boat, Queen of the Sea, were happy ones last Wednesday. Each decked a yellowtail. This is not to say that other anglers were unhappy; they were putting limits or partial limits of big barracuda and kelp

Next Thursday and Friday will climax the first period of the San Diego Yellowtail Derby when 600 to 800 anglers will compete for $8,000 in prizes. Top award will be a 1966 automobile. Yellowtail fishing off the Coronado Islands has not been too hot in the last few days. Dock total for Thursday was only 168 yellows. However, barra-cuda fishing was good, with 801. BRONCO'S STILL AROUND

Remember Bronco Nagurski? Many old-timers still claim he's the greatest ever to wear football cleats. The fabled former Minnesota Gopher, Chicago Bear still has his name in lights-at his service station in International Falls.

There's Another Nagurski in Sight

FALLS, Minn, (49)-Bronko Nagurski, the legendary pro football star whose legs worked like pistons while he burst through tackle and guard for the Chicago Bears, owns his own gas station nowadays.

He's still a hard worker. Bronko puts in 10-hour days while running the station with two part-time

His station is situated at the busiest downtown corner of this small Canadian border papermill and fishing town. It is Nagurski's hometown and he came back to it after his football days with the University of Minnisota and the National Football League Bears.

But not before the bullstrong men with the blue eyes and the mild manner inspired gridiron legends that will outlive him.

All-America at Minnesota in 1929 and all-pro three times with the Bears, 1932-34, Nagurski did things on football field men still write and talk about.

This remains a source of quiet pleasure and amusement to Bronko. When a

"Some of it's true, some of it's exaggerated," he said the other morning between car fillups.

"Sometimes, I think they're talking about the wrong guy."

The blue-and-white signs at the station simply say Bronko Nagurski's. The proprietor was sitting at his desk in his blue uniform, reading the sports page and listening to the radio, when a visitor arrived. The station walls were lined with photographs of other foot-

Men tourists, old enough to remember him, sometimes ask Bronko to pose for pictures, which he does willingly.

Bronko bought the station about six years ago, after he quit pro wrestling, which had followed his retirement from the Bears in 1943. He's 57 now, and weighs Kauai King, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preak-ness, finished fifth.

Sitting in the umpires' room during a recent tour of duty in New York, Ashford explained his gestures mannerisms from the small school that gives the big, easy-to-see - through the words of former Dodger star Roy Campanella.

"Campy said there's got to be a little boy in everybody who plays the game," Ashford said. "That's the way I feel. And if my personality and enthusiasm come out in my work - it's just me. Besides, it's something for the fan to see, and I think it helps the Ashford also ticked off the prices of various other equipment that has to be purchased, revealed that he totes around five balls in the specially designed umpires' pockets and is strictly a suspenders-only man.

"A mask goes for about $15, shin guards for about $18, special shoes for working behind the plate for $25, special shoes for working when you're on the bases, also about $25," he said. "Most of those last a whole season.'

"The number of balls an ump carries varies with the person," Ashford said, "I like to keep six around the one in the game and five in my pockets, two in the left and three in the right pocket. When I need more, I signal to the ball boy to bring me some.'

As for holding up his pants, Ashford says he perfers suspenders although some umpires use belts and some use both "as a safety-first measure.

THE NATION

Violence increased as they trudged deeper into the Delta area, but the "freedom" marchers continued toward Jackson, the capital city of Mississippi, exhorting Negroes

DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR., who took over leadership of the march after James H. Meredith was wounded by shotgun blasts at the start of the trek, led an automobile side trip 60 miles to Philadelphia, Miss., and was greeted with jeers, stones and clubs. There were no serious injuries there, but during the week, two white men were shot in incidents related to the march.

When the marchers reached Canton they pitched their tents in a school yard after being denied permis sion to do so. As they drove the tent pegs, Mississippi highway patrolmen closed in with tear gas guns and heavy boots. The marchers fled to the Negro section of town from clouds of gas, flailing boots and swinging rifle butts. Forty were injured in the melec.

Meredith, apparently unhappy with developments since his wounding, returned to the march Friday and snubbed a welcoming raily saying, "The whole damn things smells to me." He planned to walk alone from Canton to Tougaloo, where the main body of marchers had gone after the tear gas and boots fracas.

A troupe of Hollywood personalities, led by actorsinger Sammy Davis Jr., was scheduled to entertain the marchers in Tougaloo Saturday night. From Tougaloo, it is only eight miles to the State Capitol where thousands were expected to take part in an antisegregation rally

The violence along the march route was what Mississippi Gov. Paul B. Jonson Jr. had wanted to avoid. He urged patience by the state's white citizens. Said the governor, "Now, in the closing days of these weeks of provocation. I again call upon the loyal citizenry of this state to avoid all contact with these marchers and to ignore their last desperate effort to stand in the spotlight of publicity at the expense of our state.

The Delta area's militant whites refused to listen.

NEW YORKERS put away their ticker tapes, canceled a civic reception and pointedly ignored a visit by King Faisal, absolute monarch of oil-rich Saudi Arabia. The reason: The king, in answer to a White House news conference question, said: "Unfortunately, Jews support Israel and we consider those who provide assistance to our enemies as our own enemies,"

The aftermath to that statement was explusive, In New York, where there are tens of thousands of Jewsand few Arabs---Mayor John Lindsay, reportedly against the advice of Secretary of State Dean Rusk, canceled an official dinner for King Faisal and refused to send the city's official greeter to the airport to meet him. Even New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller withdrew his recognition of the king's visit.

The king apparently was not fazed. In flowing robes and burnous, he made himself at home in the royal suite

United Nations Secretary General U Thant gave a formal luncheon. A mong those attending was Arthur -Goldberg, United States Ambassador to the United Nations and a Jew. Asked why he was there, Goldberg replied, "I am your ambassador at the United Nations, Ethics Committee went into open sessions in the case of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., charged with misconduct on behalf of a Chicago public relations official, Julius Klein. The open sessions were heated and bitter as former employes in Dodd's Senate office testified that Dodd received many favors from Klein and flew to Germany at Klein's urging to try to save some German clients for

When the hearings recessed for the weekend, Dodd was charging the committee was unfair.

The committee chairman, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., disclosed that a witness against Dudd had been threat-ened and said, "The committee cannot stand by and see any witnesses coerced or intimidated."

It turned out that Dodd's sun, Jeremy, had seen one of the witnesses in the Senate cafeteria and had berated him for testifying against his father. Dodd apologized to the committee saying that his son was upset by the disloyalty demonstrated "towards me and my family."

THE WORLD

PRESIDENT CHARLES DE GAULLE of France continued to muddy international waters as he began a 12day visit to the Soviet Union in what he hoped would result in a "restoration of Europe into a single, fruitful whole." He is the first French chief of state ever to visit Russia and he and the crowds are enjoying it.

De Gaulle had several conferences with Leonid I.

Brezhnev, general secretary of the Communist Party in Russia, Nikolal V. Podgorny, Soviet head of state, and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin before going on a tour of the Soviet Union.

He proved to be the biggest attraction ever to hit the Siberian city of Novosibirsk where at least half of the city's million population turned out to welcome him. He also was the first Westerner to watch the launching of a Russian satellite.

Western leaders waited to see what kind of pact De Gaulle would forge with the Soviet leaders.

EASTERN EUROPE had another visitor this week—Premier Chan En-lai of Communist China. He was in Romania until Friday when he flew to Albania, his single true ally in China's ideological feud with Russia.

The Romanian visit appeared to be going smoothly with bear hugs exchanged by Chou and Romanian Premier Ion Gheorghe Maurer until a Thursday night "friendship rally." More than 2,000 guests and the nation's television audience were kept waiting more than two hours for the

No one is saying what went on behind the scenes, but when the rally finally got under way, it was short, frigid and diplomatically correct. There was no love and no bear hugs. Apparently Chou had failed to swing Romania from a neutral position to Red China's side in the squabble with

THE WAR

There were three fronts in the Viet Nam War last week-political, ground and air.

In the political war, combat police and Vietnamese marines moved into Saigon's Vien Hoa Dao pagoda Thursday and arrested several hundred die-hard Buddhist rebels without firing a shot. Police arrested a man with a shaved head, dressed in monk's robes, for the killing of a police man during riots against the military government of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

Vietnamese officials said the pagoda was the last significant center of political rebellion against the Ky regime. One official said that those arrested were not Buddhists, but Communists.

IN THE GROUND WAR, a North Vietnamese officer defected to the south and directed American artillery fire and air strikes against his former comrades. The pinpoint intelligence supplied by the North Vietnamese officer resulted in the deaths of at least 53 Communists-swelling the known enemy dead in Operation Nathan Hale to 380. In the air, an American F105 Thunderchief jet was shot down 30 miles northeast of Hanoi while attacking a petroleum storage area in North Viet Nam. Earlier in the week, a C123 was shot down south of Da Nang in South Viet Nam while on a defoliation mission

War casualties last week included 10 water buffalo. The Air Force announced that strikes are being made against water buffalo pack trains in the Mu Gia Pass supply route, between North and South Viet Nam, and that 10 of the animals had been killed by air action.

THERE WAS NEW speculation about peace in Viet Nam as special Canadian envoy Chester Ronning returned from a second trip to Hanoi. Canadian officials declined to say what his mission was about, but they have indicated in the past that they were trying to set up peace talks between the United Staes and North Viet Nam. Washington observers noted with interest that William P. Bundy, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, flew to Ottawa, Canada, to confer with Ronning, Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and Canadian Foreign Minister Paul Martin upon Ronning's return.

THE WEST.

Payola was back in the news last week as the Federal Communications Commission held closed hearings in Los Angeles on bribes allegedly paid to disc jockeys and program directors of radio stations in return for playing certain records on the air.

Jay A. Kyle, presiding officer at the hearings, said nothing, but one of the witnesses, Currie Grant, former record promoter, said he testified that payola given to disc jockeys included food, clothing, paint, hard cash and

WIPING TEARS FROM THEIR eyes, members of the Los Angeles County Grand Jury began secret hearings into accusations that major automobile manufacturers have conspired to delay development of smog-reducing devices of cars, It is believed the inquiry is aimed at returning indictments under violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The hearings startled auto manufacturers. From Detroit came the statement that "we know of no reason why a grand jury has been impaneled. We have cooperated fully with the Department of Justice and are confident this investigation will confirm there has been no violation Meanwhile, in San Francisco, the Air Pollution Contro) Association held its annual national convention and the dangers of smog received new emphasis. Dr. James McCarroll of Cornell University's medical school, said statistics show that peaks in the death rate coincide with periods of high air pollution.

THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY tax rate is expetced to rise 2.2 cents per $100 assessed valuation next year to finance the budget passed by the Board of Supervisors. The budget totals $1.2 billion.

Included in the budget is $2.1 million for pay raises for county social workers, many of whom struck when supervisors earlier canceled an 11% increase. The pay hike did not settle the dispute. Although back at their jobs, the social workers said they would walk out again if the board did not rescind action to pay bonuses to employes who did not walk out in the salary light.

PERSONS SUSPECTED of drunken driving in California will be required to take chemical tests under provisions of a bill approved by the State Senate last week and sent to Gov Edmund G. Brown for signature.

The bill requires a driver to submit to tests of blood. breath or urine if the arresting officer demands it. If the driver refuses, his driver's license will be suspended for six months, whether or not he is found innocent of drunken driving.

Gov. Brown promoted the bill and is expected to

A SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY

He Really Loves Old Gooney Bird

WASHINGTON (UPI)-A gentleman named C. L. Gerdes started a sentimental journey Saturday.

At 8 a.m. EDT, he boarded Lake Central Airlines

30th anniversary of the DC3 in commercial airline service American Airlines introduced the plane on June 25, 1936,

He is not trying to prove anything - except that "I just love the DC3 the way some people love the Model

IT TOOK HIM weeks to plan the journey, largely because the local service or regional airlines on which he must travel are rapidly phasing out their fleets.

The starting leg on Lake Central — Baltimore-Cincinnati - for example, wasn't confirmed for two months because Lake Central didn't know whether it still would be using a DC3 on this route by June 25.

Actual flying time will take five days; he plans to rest up in Chicago today, arriving in Seattle on West Coast Flight 399 at 9:25 p.m. PDT. Gerdes takes Lake Central from Cincinnati to Chicago, Ozark from Chicago to Sioux City, Iowa, North Central from Sioux City to Bismarck, Frontier from Bismarck to Great Falls, West Coast from Great Falls to Spokane, and West Coast from Spokane to Seattle.

THE TRIP will cost him about $250. It would cost him $144.11 to fly one-stop on a jet from Baltimore to Seattle - in seven hours. But it makes no difference ures it's a good way to honor the most beloved commercialy plane in aviation history, Gerdes' troubles in arranging the journey emphasize that the days of the DC3 as a scheduled airlines are coming to an end. For example, he originally wanted to fly from Washington to either Los Angeles or Francisco, but no scheduled airline serves the two California cities with Only 124 DC3s still are m scheduled service in the United States, a sad comedown for a plane that 25 years ago carried 90 per cent of the nation's commercial air traffic. Ozark has the most (20), followed by Trans-Texas (18), North Central (15) and Southern Central and Lake Central (14 each). Five of the 13 local service airlines have retired their DC3 fleets entirely.

Yet the grand old girl of aviation still is a long way from total demise. No less than 434 are in service for foreign airlines, with major carriers like Varig and Air France operating 40 and 25 respectively.

It's entirely possible that DC3-lover Gerdes could come close to flying around the world via the gallant "Gooney Bird."

ping center and the same exacting architectural control placed on its luxury homes will be followed in the $2.5 million area for stores.

To be known as "The Boardwalk," the 100,000square-foot commercial center will be just off Warner Avenue at Algonquin Street.

The Boardwalk" has been designed with a nautical look in keeping with its environment. Rough-sawn lumber will be used as the basic building material to lend warmth and character to the architecture.

Clifford Russell, president of Huntington Harbour, declared this shopping center probably will be the "least commercial looking" neighborhood shopping district in California.

*WE LOOK TO the Boardwalk as part of the total Harbour community as first spelled out by our land

The center with its 20 businesses, is specially conceived for our homeowners with their income, age, and family characteristics taken into consideration.

The one-story project will melt into the community rather than be a jarring glass and neon addition, Rus sell added. Special entrance designs are being prepared for the stores and the interior lighting will be tailored to particular needs.

RICHARD MAITLAND, project supervisor, announced that El Rancho Markets has been signed as the "ideal marker operation for this type of development. They have three stores in the Pasadena area and are known for high service and gourmet items."

Also signed as tenants are Security First National Bank, Gulf Oil Co., plus an exclusive men's shop, brok-Bank Gulf Oil Co., plus an exclusive men's shop, brokerage firm, beauty shops and dry cleaner, Maitland said. He expects to complete the leasing program with-

Construction is scheduled to start by Sept. 1 with the opening of the center set for next February.

While Huntington Harbour is one vast marina, the center will not be on an island or over water.

Southlanders who gaze at the appealing Edison Company office building at 100 Long Beach Blvd, in most cases do not know-or care-that in a spacious office on the fifth floor is the Tramancor headquarters.

Yet, ministers of agriculture and finance-from such countries as the United Arab Republic, Irag, Lebanon and Iran-arrive unheralded and seek out this same office.

Tramancor had its beginning in Los Angeles in the late 1940s. Its initial purpose: to recruit and train workers for major oil companies operating in the Middle East.

By this time, Tramancor had branched out fro oil field endeavor to management counseling. Would Tramancor, several of these governments asked, set up training programs to help their people help themselves?

Verospace, Electronics Spur to Southland

By KEN CHILCOTE Business Editor

While the pinch in home building is being felt in the Southland, the general economy continues on a strong basis with no immediate letup in sight.

Upsurge in the area's aerospace and electronics in dustry makes the economic outlook bright for months to come. The stepped up orders for aircraft-$220,000 in or ders for Douglas Aircraft last week alone - and the stepped up action in Viet Nam will pace much of the economy. Increased consumer spending is boosting sales at the retail level.

Robert A. Lambeth, senior vice president of finance and treasurer of North American Aviation Inc., reports that aerospace companies in this area will add 13,000 people to their payrolls by the end of this year. This will be in addition to 27,000 such jobs added the past year.

A high rate of capital expansion will continue, Lambeth said, with his own company spending $50 million this year compared to $35 million last year. Douglas is expected to double its expenditures on capital outlays.

Except for home construction, virtually all phases of the local economy picture continue to reflect a rosey hue

CHECKMATE, the protective check cashing system designed to eliminate the worry and costs of retail firms trying to collect bounced checks, has signed more than 1,000 supermarkets, hotels, restaurants and liquor stores in this area, according to Justin R. Eccles, vice president of American Certified Check Corp.

Since the plan was announced several weeks ago. some banks have come out with a somewhat similar plan of their own but because of limitations to just their own customers, the banks are beginning to find the Checkmate plan far more acceptable, Eccles said.

A computerized system, Checkmate is an identification card type of operation certifying personal checks up to the sum of $150. A retailer accepting the check, if signed under the plan, need never worry about the check bouncing and can count it as cash. Should the check bounce, it would go to Checkmate which would do the

The retailer pays Checkmate one-fourth of 1% of the amount of the check. However, this percentage is substantially less than what many merchants presently pay for the cost of cashing checks, such as maintaining check cashing booths, manager's time spent approving checks, time and costs of collecting insufficient fund checks or costs of trying to collect on bad checks.

"When a person obtains a Checkmate card it means his check is as good as cash. Many stores signing plan to eliminate all other check cashings, using just the Checkmate plan and it will eliminate a lot of other costly prob-lems at the cashier's booth," added Eccles.

MONEY MAY BE TIGHT in some circles but you will never know it this summer by the terrific flow of tourists. Never in history has tourism started off such a great year. And these aren't just little camp out trips. Travel agencies are experiencing the greatest flow of orders in years. Overseas trips will double previous years, tourist officials

At home, more and more persons are getting help in outlining long trips instead of just starting out on their own. The big tourist resorts are being booked weeks in advance and reports from more local scenes like resorts along the Colorado River say they are facing a big rush in calls for camp sites.

THE LARGEST OFFICE complex in Orange County, Union Bank Square in the City of Orange, has proven a successful venture in a big way for the David H. Murdock Development Co. The second tower, an addition of 84,000 square feet, is being completed to give the complex an overall size of 234,000 square feet.

An excellent location with respect to freeways, Union Bank Square was planned with many convenient facilities making it virtually a community in its own.

Business firms now headquartered in Union Bank Square include the Western Sales Office of Chrysler Motors Corp.: Chrysler-Plymouth and Dodge regional office; Corning Glass Co: Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., Humble Oil and Refining Co., and the President's Health Club.

Jerry Hay recently was chosen as the new project manager for the office complex.

Ultimate cost of the project will range between $20 and $30 million. First project will be development of a 250-bed hospital which is master-planned for further expansion to 500 beds. It will be on Lomita Boulevard east of Hawthorne Boulevard and will replace an existing 99-bed hospital originally built in 1925.

With its second advance in a row, the Index rallied into new high ground this week and faced the summer at its highest level ever.

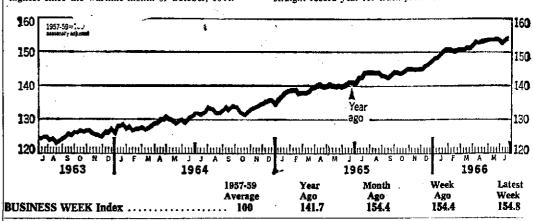

Nearly all components were ahead of last week or of the same week in 1965—and in some cases both. Electric power output gained 8% over last week and 7.8% over a year ago, as the warming weather built up air conditioning loads. Paperboard production made slight weekly and

AT THE CAPE Satellite Launch Was 'All-California' Show

By EVERETT HOSKING

The highly-successful Titan IIIC communications satellite launch June 16 at Cape Kennedy, Fla., in which seven radio relay stations were put into a 21,000-mile high orbit, may have had a Florida background but it was to all intents and purposes a California product.

The launch was directed by the Air Force's Space Systems Division headquartered at El Segundo. Both the sophisticated satellites and the huge Titan boosters were developed under SSD direction.

Technical assistance on the launch was furnished by the non-profit Aerospace Corp., also of El Segundo.

The Titan IIIC will be the space vehicle for the Doughas manned, orbiting laboratory to be sent aloft in 1969.

ALMOST ALL of the leading contractors concerned with the communications satellite phase of the launch are California-based concerns. They are:

WDL Division of the Philo Corp., Palo Alto. EIMAC Division of Varian Associates, San Carlos. TRW Space Technology Labs, Redondo Beach. Watkins-Johnson Co., Palo Alto.

The Philco Corp. developed the multiple-launch technique and the unique dispenser which allowed the eight satellites to be launched one at a time and placed into their proper orbit high over the equator.

Philco is the prime contractor for the satellites.

THE EIMAC organization under a contract from the Space Systems Division developed a new lightweight traveling wave tube amplifier for military satellite communication. The hermatically-sealed TWTA packages include a metal-ceramic traveling wave tube and a solid state power supply, with both units optimized for operation in the satellite-to-ground frequency band. TRW Space Technology in Redundo Beach has been producing the satellite structure and power subsystems for communications satellites. These in turn are incorporated into the final structure by Philon.

The Watkins-Johnson Co. has been largely responsible for the highly-successful traveling wave tube amplifier capability which was vital to the success of the mission.

CALIFORNIANS also had a bit share in the 2,400,000 pounds of thrust that hurled the Titan III and its communications package into space.

The Aerojet-General Corp. at Azusa and Sacramento furnished the liquid fuel systems which power the three stages of the Titan III.

United Technology Corp. at Sunnyvale contributed California, however, can't claim the Titan III space vehicle itself. They are manufactured by the Martin Co.,

The other reason is a greater appreciation of better lighting in general.

Two-Ply Tires in Favor

Special to the Progress Section

Today's tires are safer than ever before and a key reason is two-ply tires, which "are superior tires — a product of advanced technology, designed to bring the latest and best to the motoring public."

This was the major point of a speech by George R. Vila, chairman and president of United States Rubber Co., before the Rochester, N.Y., Rotary Club. Conceding the tire industry has not replied enough to criticisms of tire safety, Villa vigorously defended tires — particularly two-ply tires—being safe.

"The fact is two-ply tires with a four-ply rating are better than the four-ply tires they replaced." he stated. "They are an improvement brought about by technological advances and provide the motorist with a greater margin of safety."

AS PROOF, Vila cited the results of a computer study of customer returns under the company's warranty program out of a production run of several hundred thous and two-ply and four-ply tires. The tires were all made with the same design producted during the same period and released through the same distribution channels. These were the results of the study based on comparing equal numbers of tires in each group—

-Road hazard damage caused by glass, metal, stones, chuck holes, etc.: For every 100 four-ply tires returned, 93 two-ply tires were returned.

-Impact rupture: For every 100 four-ply tires returned, only 52 two-ply tires were returned.

—All other conditions such as tread separation, fabric breaks, excessve or uneventread wear; for every 100 four-ply tires returned, only 49 two-ply tires were returned.

THE OVERALL average was 69 two-ply tires returned for every 100 four-ply tires returned, Vila noted.

He also pointed out his company has found that two-ply tires are cooler running—about 15 degrees cooler at 80 nuies an hour than equivalent four-ply tires — which gives the driver greater safety against rupture and ply and tread separation. Cooler running tires are safer because heat weakens rubber, Their greater flexibility permits a lower cord angle which makes two-ply tires more stable and safely maneuverable, he said.

Burst strength — at least seven times the maximum suggested air pressure for a tire in regular operation—is the same for the two-ply as for the four-ply tire, he noted.

"These data are highly significant to the American moturnst," Vila said.

"Two-ply tires are not cheap tires. They are not thmsy tires. They are not unsafe tires. They are not inferior tires in any respect. In fact, they are superior tires."

TO ENSURE the continuing safety of its tires, U.S. Rubber spends over $12 million a year in development and testing, he stated. Tires are run about 400 million miles a year at the company's tire-proving ground in Laredo, Tex., on test wheels and in fleet tests throughout the country.

At Laredo, tires are driven hetween 60 and 140 miles an hour and eventually will be tested at speeds up to 200 miles an hour with driverless automated vehicles, Vila said. Tires also are skid tested on polished skid slabs and run over cobblestones, gravel and crushed rock courses. By the end of this year the company will start building the first live miles of a 20-mile private est highway where cars will be driven along straightaways at unlimited speeds and tround curves at 100 miles and hour

WITH ALL THE tire improvements, tire costs have decreased, he said. In 1950, a cir's tires cost an average of $1.37 for every 1,000 miles of diving. Last year, the cost was only $3.09 per thousand miles—a decrease of 15%.

During the same period of tine, the overall consumer price index has gone up more than 30%.

Inside these gates your own private world of Ciudad Capistrano

A wonderful world of secluded patios, gardens, and atriums enclosed within eight and ten foot high Spanish walls. Hidden from public view you will enjoy your outdoor living areas as never before — lounging by the pool, dining on the terrace, walking in the garden. Cludad Capistrano is a private community within the quaint village of San Juan Capistrano. There are no ordinary streets in Ciudad — instead there are landscaped courtyards around which the homes are situated. It's safe to say you've never seen anything like it. The California-Spanish architecture and the unique land plan have already received over twenty national and regional awards. The larger homes are called casas — the smaller homes, which are completely maintained by the homeowners association, are called casias. The residents of Ciudad are a rather continental lot. Some are people who must work in Los Angeles but don't choose to live there. (Los Angeles is less than an hour away — it's freeway all the way). Some are retired. Some are busy executives who want a secluded hideaway for the weekend. Some have purchased for price appreciation and tax shelter. They'll lease their casa September through June and use it themselves during the summer. (The beach is only 5 minutes away). Older California families will remember San Juan Capistrano for its old world charm, beautiful mission, white sand beach, and wonderful, wonderful climate. None of this has changed, but the San Juan area now has four golf courses, a new tennis and riding club, a new shopping plaza, and several fine restaurants. And soon one of the largest marinas on the coast will be completed at Dana Point, five minutes away. Why not drive down the coast this weekend to see Ciudad Capistrano. Take in the mission while you're here and finish up with a candlelight dinner in the village. Come expecting a delightful surprise and you won't be disappointed.

MRS. SANDRA HANO . . . 'Students Are Paid'

USSR Goal: to Be Totally Communist

By ELLIOT ZWIEBACH

A three-time visitor to the Soviet Union says the U.S.S.R. does not claim to be a Communist country

"They say they are a socialist country and will not be a true Communist nation for another 10 or 15 or 30 years." Mrs. Sandra Hano, an instructor in Russian at Santa Ana Junior College, told the Long Beach Community Forum.

Her statements on the Soviets' view of themselves were based on lectures she heard while attending Moscow University the past three summers.

THE LECTURES on life in the Soviet Union also tended to demythologize American stereotypes of Russian culture, Mrs. Hano said.

"They told us banks give 3% interest, that Soviet citizens can buy on credit and that they can change jobs whenever they please," she went on.

"Students are paid to go to school," she said, "and the more A's a student gets, the more money he

"THERE ARE NO fraternities, no scholarships, and no sports. Students go to school in lemm." Mrs. Hann deplored the inefficiency of Russian hureaucracy, in which "everything must go through

She cited shopping as one of the best examples of Soviet inefficiency, saying that a customer must stand in one line to select his purchases, another line to obtain his purchase tickets, and a third line to receive his groceries. "It takes hours to shop," she

Some Companies Abandon 'Male-Female' Want Ads

As a result of the new Civil Rights Act, many companies have changed employe policies and practices to avoid charges of discrimination against women. This conclusion is drawn from the results of a pilot study just released by the Administrative Management Society.

The purpose of the study was to find out the effects of the equal employment opportunities provisions of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act on current policies. Title VII specifies that there shall be no discrimination against employees because of race, color, creed, or sex.

ACCORDING TO the study, the main policy changes appear in employment practices toward women.

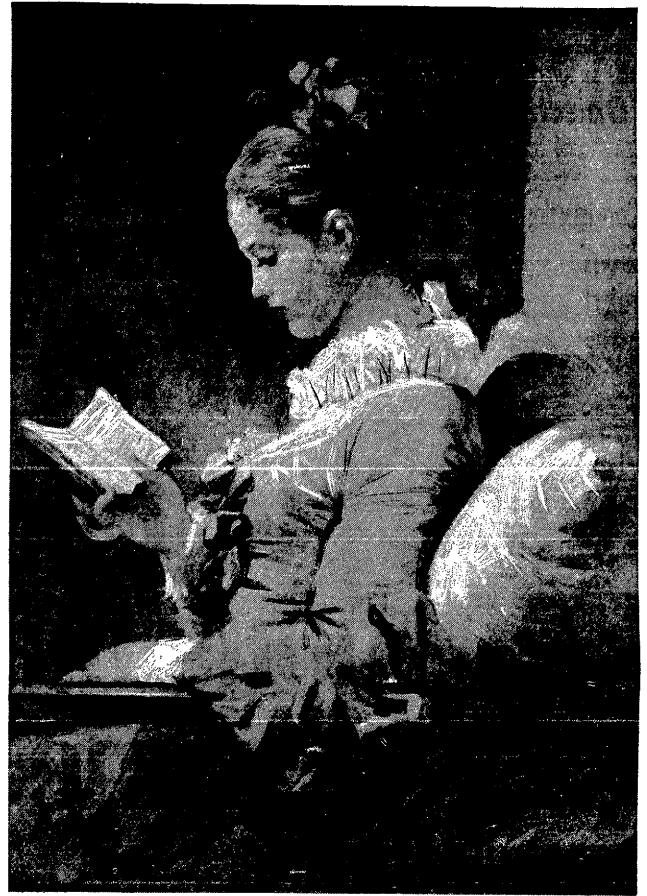

Here are some of the policy changes listed by the participating companies: some of the companies have abandoned the use of separate "male" and "female" help want ads; other companies have begun to include women among its management trainees, while 30% of the companies have changed one of their benefits from a "widow's benefit" to a "survivor's benefit."

GRAND OPENING

That's what you'll say about the Great Master Series of Influential Homes in Anaheim. As master artists set trends for good art and modern design, we now project their thinking and accomplishments into a new trend of modestly-priced homes. Taking a lesson from da Vinci, who believed that an artist must understand objects in order to paint them successfully, our architects conducted extensive research to understand what you need and want from a home. Then, with an artist's eye, they designed these wants and needs into a masterpiece. Underground utilities follow Cezanne's trend in consideration of space. As Rembrandt respected privacy, a decorative block wall is on your side and rear yards.

Your TERRACE KITCHEN® is as bright and cheery as a Brueghel. The love of Renoir for natural light was our inspiration for the sliding glass door and service windows that bring your outdoors inside.

Step inside and recognize De Goya's richness in the lush carpeting, exciting flooring and paneled rooms.

Van Gogh's trend of dynamic patterns leads your eye across the large and well-proportioned living room to the custom-coordinated fireplace and outside terrace. D Monet's lush garden paintings influenced the large planting areas. D Daring light effects such as your luminous kitchen ceiling follow a Degas trend. - The simplicity of Rousseau is imitated in your children's bedrooms and their adjoining play areas. a Lavish attention endows your master bedroom with the grand style of Gainsborough, a You'll find warmth and beauty in stone, as did Michelangelo, in your cultured marble pullman tops and elegant exterior masonry.

The overall effect has the serenity of a Raphael.

These are the broad strokes. To this we have added other master touches: concrete driveway, elegant Waste-King double oven, built-in electric can opener, custom lighting fixtures, intercom and outercom pre-wiring and prepared for air-conditioning. Frame ail of this in the City of Anaheim, an established community of increasing value which is short on commuting time and long on entertainment— The Angels, Disneyland, Melodyland, parks, golf courses --mould it by experienced developers-back it with a full one-year warranty—then offer it for a price $3,000 less than any comparable home in Orange County—and you have a masterpiece.

— We urge you to come and see for yourself. The opportunity to view a masterpiece doesn't happen often—and it should not be missed. The chance to buy a masterpiece, at a price you can afford, is an even rarer experience. This is your time. Give your family a masterpiece which they can prize over the years.

Aug. Construction Start for California Exposition-Fair Project Scheduled

Project plans and financing for the new California Exposition and Fair have been approved and announced by the Exposition's executive committee in

The committee action clears the way for siteclearing, ground-breaking and construction activities to begin in late summer to expedite engineering and construction in time for the Exposition's opening on its 630-acre site bounded by Sacramento's Arden Way, Interstate Highway 80 and the American River.

DESIGNED AS a showplace for California's penple, heritage, industry and agriculture, and to provide new and modern quarters for the state's 108-year-old California State Fair, the grounds will be open yearround with a continuing cycle of attractions.

An extensive feasibility analysis indicates during the Exposition's first twelve years of operation it will host almost 50 million visitors and will have a total economic impact on the economy of California of $1

PLANS APPROVED for the Exposition reveal a unique concept in the composition of landscaped grounds and buildings. The central portion of the Exposition approximate the area of the successful Seattle World's Fair. Parking area, golf course, race track and other outdoor recreational areas increases this several times.

Elements of the Exposition include:

Exposition Center-The integrated complex on a nine-acre plot houses exhibits and displays on California's resources, herltage, culture, agriculture, in-dustry, art, travel, and historical sites. It is a combination of enclosed, roofed, and open landscaped areas.

Fair Activities Complex—This is an inter-related series of ramp-connected buildings to house all of the features of a modern state fair and exhibits;

Recreation Park-A fun-park of simulated mountains, seacoast, desert, forests and valleys to show California's natural resources; it is the nucleus of a chain of amusement rides and attractions like a boat trip "around the fair" and an unusual "sky tower." Two of California's finest golf courses will be built

Race Track—This will accommodate both race and show horses, and its facilities include exercise rings, tack and feed rooms, and related quarters; racetrack and grandstand are designed to accommodate 24,000

Industrial Exhibit Area—Here planned permanent year-round displays will supplement those in the Exposition Center, and will emphasize California industry. This area will contain industrial exhibits and buildings developed by industry itself, under direction of the Exposition.

VISITORS MAY easily walk through the main areas in a single day's tour, according to Eugene R. and Fair Corporation

In addition, a variety of transportation means will be available to them. A boat canal, a minirail, and a skyride will supplement pedestrian and ground transportation with vista tours for easy transit between exhibits, parks, and other areas,

Waiting for housing prices to come down?

By 1970, they may be 20% higher than today.

Every buyer would like to see lower prices for a change. But will he? Check the record. House prices in the Los Angeles area have gone up about 15% since 1958, says the U.S. Department of Labor. Now they're rising faster. Local authorities estimate that increasing labor and materials costs are adding about $1,000 a year to the price of a $20,000 house.

At this rate, the price level could easily be 20% higher than today by 1970. And what is to hold it down? Newcomers keep flocking to Southern California, bidding against each other for a spot in the sun. New suburbs, shopping centers, and business and industrial sites keep gobbling up the shrinking supply of available land.

All this, plus the inflationary impact of the Viet Nam war, points to one conclusion: the longer you wait to buy a house, the more

Waiting for interest to come down?

The recent upward tilt in mortgage rates may worry you as much as house prices. That's only natural. But what does higher interest really cost you? A typical 1/2% rise runs to 30¢ a month for each $1,000 you borrow on a 25-year loan. That's $6 a month ол $20,000.

it's no fun paying even this much more. Yet rates may go still higher, like everything else. Many experts predict they will. A reassuring note: by buying now, you're dovered against further interest hikes. That could be important protection.

Buying vs. renting: which costs less?

The equity you build up as an owner certainly beats collecting rent receipts. In addition, mortgage interest and property taxes are deductible on your Federal income tax. And a house (especially in booming Southern California) is a great hedge against inflation. In an area everybody else wants to move to, house values historically rise faster than other prices.

Available to smart shoppers: bargains

Good buys can be found today because there's never been such a great selection of houses in Southern California. Many new homes can be bought with little down, and long-term loans. Many not-so-new homes offer most attractive mortgages, at interest rates below the prevailing level, in addition to good locations and lots of living space.

Security Title suggests that instead of waiting for housing prices to come down, it's more realistic to move into your own house now and watch it go up.

Your real estate broker knows the best buys in your area. His professional knowledge about values, financing, taxes, local schools and other matters can be most valuable. Look him up. With his help, you'll find that now's the time to buy!

I, for one, am afraid of Virginia Woolf, but . . .

Premieres are still glamorous

JACK OAKIE, CAROL CHANNING ... Carol wears newest architectural haircut

Director, Women's News Everybody's asking "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" The answer: practically everyone.

Hollywood has never made a movie even faintly resembling Edward Albee's study of marital frustration and savagery . . . never before has such searing drama, laced with outrageous comedy, been viewed on a movie

But the movie's world premiere at the Hollywood Pantages had all the glamor and glitter of the film capital's

Only thing missing was appearance of the two stars—Liz Taylor and Richard Burton, currently in Italy for filming of their latest picture, "The Taming of the Shrew.

But all the rest of Hollywood's

Everyone wanted to see if Warner Bros.' controversial film lived up to its reputation.

They came in their Rolls Royces and Cadillacs, their Bentleys and chauffeurpiloted limousines to make up their own minds about this much-publicized "new milestone in motion pictures."

AS KLEIG lights pierced the night. crowds of onlookers and autograph seekers crushed their way closer to the theater to catch glimpses of Hollywood on parade.

They squealed at Academy Award winner Julie Andrews, who shunned flash bulbs and TV cameras ... whistled at Carol Channing's shenanigans, sequined flapper dress and kooky architectural hairdo . . . cheered such old favorites as Gregory Peck and Cesar Romero . . . oh-ed and ah-ed at the sedately glamorous beauty of Merle Oheron and Jane Wyman.

One Hollywood veteran compared it to that eventful night in the 20s when the world premiere of "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, brought sound to the silver screen.

OF COURSE, even the most moviestruck onlooker is forced to admit that Hollywood Now is different from Hollywood Then.

Hollywood Then had an almost exclusive monopoly on glamor . . . on solid gold Cadillacs, champagne-filled swimming pools, jewelled gowns and full-length minks.

Hollywood Then was a celluloid never-never land, the only glamor for millions in the workaday world of

Not so in today's affluent times. America's garages are filled with shiny new cars . . . jewelled gowns and full-length minks hang in many a closet swimming pools no longer make a big splash in the status-symbol de-

EVEN SO, attending a Hollywood black-tie premiere is an exciting experience—anytime!

When the film colony turns out for a gala, you can bet your premiere tickets (they're difficult to come by!) that you'll see some of the most glamorous AND kooky fashions this side a studio wardrobe department.

Take, for instance, some of the starlets at the "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" spectacular,

Apparently the young Hollywood set is more concerned these days with looking different than being glamorous. The going "coiffure" is to pile hair high, then let part of it fall down. There's no particular pattern for this fall of the coif . . . it may be a few unraveled curls, or it may be deliberate chans.

With the young crowd, flapper dresses are more for evening than the long jewelled creations worn by the Janet Leighs and Jane Wymans.

But no one out-flappered Carol Channing. Her blond mane was blunt cut at mid-ear on one side, chin-length on the other. For a surprise exit: three sharp points dipping at the nape. Her short-short dress, a solid armour of silver sequins, was low-helted and flounced with egret feathers.

Wild-haired Phyths Differ created quite a stir, too, in an unfitting long satin gown of black and white awning

An attractive note about the men: many wore satin vests under their tuxedo jackets, a welcome relief from those cumbersome cummerbunds

ALL IN ALL, the audience was quite a contrast to star-performer Liz

Duo-pianists Ladd Thomas and Robert Prichard, guest artists for Tuesday night's Starlight Serenade in Recreation Park, began their professional association casually.

Each had a growing reputation as a concert artist-Thomas as pianist and organist, Prichard as pianist, organist and harpsichordist. The two dark-haired young men knew each other in many musical organizations. One day Prichard said to Ladd, "Let's try two pianos."

Since that day two years ago, they have been in increasing demand as duo-pianists. Several of their concerts have been with conductor Lauris Jones. They were so warmly received in February when they played with the Long Beach Symphony with Jones conducting that they have been invited back for Tuesday's important engagement. The program, which will begin at 8 p.m., marks Long Beach's farewell to its conductor-this will be Jones' last scheduled concert with the Long Beach Symphony.

Since they were founded July 24, 1962, by Mrs. Herman H. Ridder, who still serves as honorary chairman, the admission-free Starlight Serenades have become synonymous with summer.

Previous concerts have been played in Bixby Park, but because of landscaping under way there, Tuesday's program will be in the more spacious Recreation Park on E. Seventh Street at Park Avenue. The same acoustical shell used for previous concerts will be on the stage of the bandstand which is being extended and re-enforced to support the weight of the soloists' two Bluthner concert grands. There will be seating for 4,000.

To make certain the music can be heard clearly the city is installing sound equipment; special lighting will add to the visual effect. An area will be designated for blind listeners.

THIS YEAR'S chairman is Mrs. Alex J. Kadvany and it was in her home, 3334 E. First St., that the two pianists talked about their

WILD WAYES It's all so gay for those at play desert resorts

By Iola Masterson I, P-T Society Editor

A SHIP'S sailing party, given by Lee and Mary Anne Ison, was so big they had to take over the Lurline's ballroom to accommodate their 150 guests. They're going over to Hawaii by boat because Mary Anne never has had a ride on a luxury ocean liner. But they'll fly back after two weeks on Oahu, Maui, Kauai and Hawaii.

Chatting to the accompaniment of tinkling ice cubes during Mary Anne's and Lee's pre-sail cocktall whee were such friends as John and Anne Bowler, Ray Kealer, Lee and Donna Faust, Dr. Richard and Pauline Kelvin, Dr. Ralph and Lei Smith, Warren and Barbara Eckert.

Others wishing they'd made arrangement to have a place saved for them at the luau were Spiros and Katherine Douglas, Pat and Jerry Phelan, Bob and Marvelle McNulty, Jim and Evelyn Pine, Jim and Pauline Worsham, Dr. Ed and Jackie Neushutz, Onas and Ann Lindsay and Dr. Bob and Carlie Fox.

DON'T SUPPOSE anyone actually did kick their shoes off and romp around the patio Saturday night at Ed and Margaret Stepp's home, 290 St. Joseph Ave. However, the Stepps had made such gaily informal plans for a bon voyage party for Elmo and Mary Adams, wouldn't be a whit surprised if several didn't WANT to do just that.

It was cocktails and dinner for close friends of the Adamses who leave July 3 on their first trip to Europe. They'll fly over and then dawdle and ogle their way all over the continent until mid-September.

IT WAS fiesta bright Thursday when Connie (Mrs. Cliff) Reiman, Nancy (Mrs. Myrl) Ott and Thelnore (Mrs. Max) Nichols had a Mexican-themed brunch at League House from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The hostesses were dresses in vivid Mexican colors as did assisting hostesses, Bindy Vossburg, Nancy's daughter, Mary Ann McCauley, Connie's ditto. They used flowers in brilliant colors everyplace there was room to park a bouquet and served Mexican food, muy callente, to complete theme, deliciously!

AFTER FIVE years spent in Omaha, Neb., Mary Jo and Ken Lyons are home. Only it isn't just plain Ken anymore but Dr. Ken Lyons, MD. That's the reason for the years in Omaha, where Ken attended Creighton Medical School and interned there, as well. For the time being, with their three children, Jim. Kathy and Kevin (4, 3 and 1-year-olders, in that order) they'll divide time between her parents, Cliff and Frances Rodgers, 3357 Easy Ave., and his folks, Bill and Jean Lyons, who recently moved from LB to 10840 Janine Lane, Cypress.

Unfortunately, Ken can't start a practice (to put into practice what he has practiced so long) because the U.S. Air Force Medical Corps has indicated they'd like the pleasure of his company for a couple of years, beginning about September. At the end of service he'll hang up his shingle in Long Beach.

SUMMERTIME and the living is easy for Edwina and Jack Smith. Not only is it easy but it probably prove to be among the better ones of their lives. MOST OF us have known about Greg Killingsworth and his gang of teenagers who belong to the Virgina Country Players (numbering about 50 strong and 50 enthusiastic). This past week, however, VCP hit the national spotlight with a two page spread of pictures and story in House and Garden in the current (July) issue. It tells how Greg showed his folks, Architect Ed, and singing star, Laura, how they could utilize their gardens and terrace for an outdoor theater for group's annual summer productions and how the scheme was put into action. This story so intrigued Raiph Story of KNXT television he has set up three filming sessions for a documentary on the players scheduled for airing July 24.

This summer's show (and the one Story's program will cover) is an original, "The Late Marty Washington Might As Well Be Dead," and has to do with an airline pilot who is always late. It is based on a script and lyrics written by John Harding, 19. Music was composed by Bruce Polay, 16, who will also conduct the orchestra. This show opens July 23.

The House and Garden bit was started two years ago when they took pictures for a creative garden feature. Then the writer became intrigued with the theater bit. Not only did the New York editor come take a look-see but the West Coast editor and a crew of four spent a full five days filming the Killingsworths last summer, from dawn to dusk. "They must have taken 250 color shots," Laura told me, "then did it as a black and white layout."

HEADED for Indian Ford Guest Ranch near Sisters, Ore., are Paul and Kit Staley and their own four little Indians, to spend a week in that plush, green forested area. The Staley boys, aged 12 and 9, will have their own wrangler and program to keep them busy, while the pre-schoolers, aged 5 and 3, will be occupied from sun-up to bedtime by a special program geared to their interests. This will leave Mom and Pop free to lounge or join ranch activities planned for adults to hearts' content.

WHAT'S KEEPING Treuman Katz in Paterson, N.J., an extra year? Well, it just so happens "Treu" received a fellowship from the American College of Hospital Administrators for an extended year of residency at Barnert Memorial Hospital there where he has been administrative resident for the past year. "Treu's" mother, Carlyn Marks tells me he is working toward his masters degree in hospital administration so this extra year should come in mighty handy. His wife, Ellen Jo, has a job at the hospital, too, working in its record department.

AUGUST WILL be a blinkin' dream-come-true month for Reg and Mary Barden. They'll be on a month's vacation to Europe their first trip abroad. Having seen their share of this continent, they decided it was time to see how the other side of the world lives. They'll visit big cities but want to explore the out-of-the-way places too.

They're hoping to confirm reservations for a stay in a castle on the Rhine and get tickets to see a performance of the famed dancing horses in Austria of which the legendary expression, "horses that dance on the air." is about.

In addition to England, France, Austria and Germany, they'll be in Italy, Switzerland and Holland.

DUE HOME as of this weekend are Lee and Roberta Wakefield and daughters, Nancy and Carol, who have been vacationing at a place called Rankin Ranch up in Sequoia country.

Popcorn concert area artists in New York exhibit lures youngsters ree

By ELISE EMERY Arte Pege Editor

Three local artists are moresented in the "Crafts-atten USA '66" exhibit which will continue at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts, New York, through Sept. 11. They are Chris Sublett, 10471/4 E. Third St., Steve Connell, 4725 Livingston Drive, and Joan Austin, Torrance. The three were among those selected at the South west regional competition at Los Angeles County Museum Feb. 9 to March 13 and their creations went on to compete with winners from five other regional con-.tests.

Says William J. Barrett, president of the American Craftsmen's Council, "With this national competition the council continues its program of conducting nationwide surveys of the outstanding work of American artist craftsmen. Craftsmen USA '66 is literally an exhibition of crafts across America. It is an excellent demonstration of the council in action and its effort to encourage and bring forth new works and new craftsmen, and to indicate possible trends and directions in the crafts movement.

"From a total of 6,054 nieces from 2,287 craftsmen, -1,038 were accepted for the local exhibitions. From this number a total of 268 pieces were designated National Merit Awards which consti-[tute the present showing,"

Duo-piano music is written on four scores, each pianist playing a different part. The literature is not extensive, but more contemporary work is being composed and commissioned.

The program Tuesday will include Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" and a new work by Morton Gould, to be heard for the first time in this area, "Dance Variations" for orchestra and two pianos.

OTHER NUMBERS will be selections from "Mary Poppins," "West Side Story" and "Do I Hear a Waltz?"; Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty Ballet" and Khatchaturian's "Sabre Dance."

As in past years, many families will arrive in late afternoon with picnic sup-pers, blankets to spread on the wide green lawns, cushions for benches. Ages will range from tots in strollers to seniors in autoettes. Several bus lines go to Recreation Park and there is free parking.

"We hope everyone knows about the change of loca-tion for this concert," said Mrs. Kadvany. "Recreation Park this time—not Bixby!"

Today's candidate for Chef of the Week, Richard Codd, is associate administrator of St. Mary's Hospital, a position to which he was appointed five years ago, and now is concentrating on expansion-development of the hospital.

Since entering hospital management, Codd has served at Daniel Freeman Hospital, Inglewood, and Queen of Valley, West Covina, before coming to Long Beach.

BORN IN Spokane, Wash., he completed high school and two years at Gonzaga University, Spokane, before enrolling at the University of Washington. Seattle. He graduated with a bachelor's degree in eco-

Several years with Union Oil Co. and two with the U.S. Army Medical Corps preceded his joining the Red Cross overseas. For the next 13 years he worked closely with its blood program.

Active in the American Hospital Assn. and the Public Relations Assn. of Southern California, Codd is a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Torch Club, for after-dinner speakers.

The Codd family includes Stephen, 17—a student at the University of California, Santa Barbara—, Mary Paula, 13, and Colleen, 9, SWIMMING and golfing have been their fore-most hobbies. Now they're busy concentrating on the port and starboard side of a sailboat.

Codd is an authority on pipes, too! But by the time he remembers where he leaves them-has them thoroughly renovated, stuffed and stoked, there isn't much time left for enjoying a smoke.

PEAS 'N CREAM SOUP

- 1 pkg. (10-oz.) frozen peas
- ½ tsp. celery salt
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 4 tsp. dried dill weed
- 4 slices crisply fried bacon

To serve soup cold: pour into refrigerator container and chill. Top each serving with a sprig of watercress. Serves 4.

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S INLAND PASSAGE

The new shortcut to Alaska

By Fred Taylor Kraft Travel Editor

VICTORIA, B.C.-A new 330-mile ocean highway stretching through one of the most beautiful and unspoiled wonderlands of North America awaits Southern Californians who visit British Columbia this summer.

This travelers' nirvana is the majestic Inland Passage, and it became a reality when British Columbia Ferry Authority Fleet, largest of its kind anywhere, recently inaugurated service of its spanking new $6 million ferryliner Queen of Prince Rupert from the bustling Vancouver Island port of Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert, situated on the province's mainland, only 25 miles from the southern tip of Alaska.

Not only will visitors find this highway system to the sea cuts 800 miles off the driving route to northern B.C., Alaska and the Yukon: they will travel in high style during the overnight cruise that takes them through an area seemingly as primitive as when it was first visited by a white man-Sir Francis Drake - almost 400 years

MOST Californians who visit B.C. drive first to Vancouver, Canada's third largest city, see world-famed Stanley Park and other eyepopping attractions before proceeding to Kelsey Bay from which they begin their drive to the Inland Passage.

To do this you motor to Tsawassen, 23 miles south of Vancouver, where you put you car (if you are driving) and yourself aboard the first British Columbia's Ferries' "Queen" for a miniature ocean cruise across the Gulf of Georgia,

In less than two hours you are in Victoria, capital of B.C. whose British atmoelegance. Pause long enough absorb the atmospherelike paying a call on the ohso-British Empress Hotel and being served tea and crumpets on white linen naperyand by having the grand tour which may begin press on one of the parlour coaches of Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

It is easy to have a smooth lovely complexion, despite the skin-coarsening effect of a ummer. The pores open much wider in the heat so it's essential that they have free movement to open and close without being closged. Protect from cosmetic pigments, dust, and powder by smoothing on your oil of Olay. This will also protect the complexion against harsh sun rays and will give the skin a milky bloom even on the hottest days. Use your lemon Jelvyn daily to refine and tone.

It was played in a team of four match between England and Scotland.

THE SCOTTISH experi decided quickly that his best chance was a successful dia mind finesse.

He tried and lost. East led a Record club and the hand

The time and thought proved well worthwhile because he came up with a play that was certain to win for him provided diamonds broke 3-2 and trumps brinke 3-1 or better.

You are looking at all the rards. See if you can come up with this play.

He started by leading a diamond to dummy's ace. Then he ruffed a diamond with a high trump. This was the first key play. The second was to lead a low Trump Toward dummy.

WEST WENT up with the iack and forced duning with or mid bih te tud dula s good. South rufferl another diamond with another high trump. This set up the rest of dunmy's diamonds.

Then he drew West' wo trumps by leading his last high trump and the low trump he had kept carefully to put dummy in to run off the rest of the diamond suit

Mr. Ingram did not mention the name of the declaror but we rather think that he himself played the handi and modestly refrained from mentioning it

Once upon a time a dog had a dish and a collar and maybe a leashand that was it. But high fashion has come to dogdom and today the family pooch may have a wardrobe of accessories as extensive as some breadwinners, such as the proud fellow on today's cover who shows off in hat and vest. He didn't don his boots because he knew he already was in trouble with his girl friend, the white poodle beside him, for showing off. For the story of fashion's invasion of the canine world, read "A Dog's Life? You May Want to Trade Places," on page 5.

A FOUR-LEGGED "walking" truck and a set of "mechanical muscles" giving an ordinary man a giant's strength are new research projects that may start a revolution in the "heavy work" trades in factory and foundry and in specialty jobs like underwater salvage operations.

Both of these unique machines, using an advanced system of levers, control linkages, and servo-mechanisms, can mimic-and amplify - the movements of operators, dramatically extending strength and endurance. The man-machine 'marriage" will combine the operator's dexterity, brainpower and all-round versatility with the machine's size, strength and rugged-

WORN LIKE an external skeleton, the "mechanical muscles" machine, nicknamed "HardiMan" by General Electric's Research and Development depart ment, will permit its operator to lift a 1,500-pound load while exerting only a fraction of this force. He will be able to perform general load - handling tasks, including walking, lifting, climbing, pushing and pulling, It will be attached to the operator at the feet, forearms and waist.

The prototype will be connected to a separate power supply by means of flexible hydraulic lines, but later models will have self-contained power units.

The operator of the walking truck, by manipulating controls attached to his arms, legs and torso, will be able to maneuver the 10x4feet body in any direction. Astride 6-foot legs, the 10foot tall vehicle will be able to transport a quarter-ton load over extremely rugged terrain impassable to just by stepping over obstacles that would block the hicles, at speeds up to 5 mph.

If a wheeled vehicle was to move through soft soil for 1,000 feet, it would have to compact the soil for the complete 1,000 feet, However, the walking truck will only have to trample down the dirt where the operator places its feet. As a result. the new truck will require less horsepower per pound than a conventional vehicle.

WITH THE ABILITY to operate independently of the weather and in all types of terrain, future models of the walking truck could be used as a cargo or troop carrier. a portable mount for artillery or ship-to-shore shuttle. At the same time the Land Locomotion Laboratory of the U.S. Army Tank-Automotive Center began research on the feasibility of walking machines, prompted by a need for a vehicle that could transport heavy loads over rough terrain.

The House Magic Built

... With a Little Help From Some Spooks

By Bonita Lynch

YOU remember the first magic show explore its three stories of hidden passage you ever saw? Will you ever forget your first incredulous wonder at seeing a beautiful girl locked in a shiny cabinet only to reappear within seconds from the wings? Do you still feel a thrill whenever you read a poster that says: "See the Mysterious Merlin saw a woman in half RIGHT BE-FORE YOUR EYES!"?

You're not the only one who answers to the ancient lure. From the dim reaches of antiquity the art of sorcery and trickery always has captured the imagination of man and woman alike.

Today, a house of illusion known as the Magic Castle is attracting to its doors in Hollywood, Calif., increasing numbers of the great, near-great, and just plain magic buffs from al! parts of the world. There is no place quite like it anywhere in the U.S.

Perched on a hilltop, just a few blocks off busy Hollywood Boulevard, this gray. mysterious Victorian mansion is an anachronism in the midst of modern apartments, it is the only private club in the country especially fashioned for magicians. magic lovers, and their guests.

IF YOU ARE lucky enough to wangle an invitation from a member (of which there are now nearly 1,400) and manage to cross its cerie threshold, there on any given night you might rub elbows with Cary Grant or Charlton Heston, or maybe a German countess or U. S. Navy admiral, all waiting to be thrillingly frightened, or awed at some feat of legerdemain.

There are approximately 400 amateur or professional magicians who are regular members, the remaining thousand are aficionados from the sports, entertainment and business worlds, professional people and industrial tycoons, all brought together by their mutual love of the mystic.

Just five years ago William Larsen, now an executive for CBS, and his brother, Milt, a TV writer, both talented amateur magicians like their father, decided this gingerbread, rambling residence built in 1907 could be a living shrine to the fastdisappearing cult of necromancy.

They rescued the turreted and musty house, situated on Franklin Ave., from demolition, spent endless hours in restoring it, enriching it atmospherically with dim lighting and a 19th century atmosphere. Then opened it in 1962 with 64 members,

Downstairs, just off the bar and lounge and the ever-burning fireplace, are the rooms where two house magicians (Jay Ose and Dave Vernon, who are considered the greatest "card men" in the business) give special shows hourly. Most interesting is the fact these artists frown on trick decks of cards, and want to be judged solely on their prowess as expert sleight-of-

This is a game we call "Eat it next summer," and it encourages qualities of willpower, thriftiness, helpfulness and anticipation, By foregoing an occasional treat or luxury, and putting the money, instead, into a vacation fund—to be used the following summer, we all share in the spirit of saving and the fulfillment of more pleasures on our vacation.

Our vacation budget provides for healthy and pleasant accommodations, adequate travel expenses plus necessary clothing and equipment. But the little 'extras" that pop up are the ones which make the discernible dent in the billfold.

The extras, then, are the ones for which the special vacation fund provides. In this little game the saving is painless at the time but worthwhile in the end!

The out-of-school phase, which still has many openings, currently provides a unique educational opportunity for nearly 2,000 youths besides the 193 enrolled locally.

"In Long Beach we have had 750 youths go through the program since it began over a year ago," said Dwight Welch, NYC Coordinator. The greatest problem connected with the out-of-school program is contacting the youths who need the help, he added.

There now are 100 openings in the local out-of-school program, and youths who have been out of school for six months and need a job should contact the Youth Opportunities Center at 1318 Pine Ave.

As to the program's successes, Welch noted that local enrollees earned a total of $21,319 in April.

"When we were-ready to go to bed," the wife testi-fied at her divorce hearing, "he would tie all my shoes together, even the slippers, to make sure I wouldn't go out after he fell asleep."

But what Judge Francis admits is difficult to describe adequately was the pride in the woman's voice as she told of her husband's jealousy.

Her husband was 80, and she was 77!

In two minutes they called the builder and were able to arrange the purchase and even to have a voice in some of the construction.

As Mrs. Giffin says: 'In a way we built it, but in a way we didn't!"

The lot is enormous; so large, in fact, that it took 58 trucks of topsoil just to begin landscaping.

THE DECISION to build a terraced patio instead of a pool was easy. Actually, they prefer the beach and Giffin says he was tired of "pool sitting." They love the beach so much that they have spent the past five va-cations on Waikikil

These truly are Californians, not only by birth but also by way of life. Everything revolves around the summer and outdoor living. They just tolerate winters and begin to feel relaxed only when the sun shines brightly.

Their house reflects this way of life. The architecture generally is provincial with a shake roof and dual facade of batten board and shiplap with touches of used brick. The 35x35-foot semicircular concrete patio was designed for dancing. It overlooks a lovely sloping garden area with much room for badminton, croquet and even luaus! The Giffins have been known to give parties outside for as many as 75 people!

The grounds are beautifully landscaped, with sidewalk contours softened by Gazania and Natal plum growing both front and back. They have used eastern birch and western rubber tree to complement each other.

THE GIFFINS still felt the need of water, so the landscape architect gave them a waterfall. This is particularly lovely since the

The home is large enough to accommodate two very busy daughters. Both girls are active in school and are quite creative. They were given sole rights to their bedrooms. They decorate, move furniture at will, have private phones and personal televisions. What more could 18- and 13-year-old young ladies wish for?

Glenda, who plans to be an elementary schoolteacher, obviously loves violets and pansies for she selected shades of lavender and purple. The complete room, from the royal purple carpet to the violet and organza print bedspread, was furnished in her choice. Her furniture is all white sparked with gold.

Gayle is "little miss pink and white." This is the horsewoman in the Giffin family and her latest and greatest desire is for her own horse. As any parent knows, there are many stages and fads - and they always pass, The Giffins still remember vividly the day

THE LIVING room has a slightly formal approach in furnishings. The room gained its color scheme from an oil painting which Mrs. Giffin particularly likes. Predominantly electric blue, the scene is the New York skyline and building lights actu-ally turn on. This is most effective at night.

The antique white silk, circular sofa and the gold. leaf demitasse tables provide a perfect foreground for the painting.

The fireplace is a raised, used-brick focal point surrounded by bookshelves. The introduction of electric blue in accessories is done with taste and has a dramatic effect.

The only help the Giffins had with decorating was a suggestion or two from a

The kitchen is functional with a provincial touch. The old wall phone radio, the Pennsylvania Dutch hex design wallpaper and usedbrick steps invite you into the family room.

There is a subtle change to contemporary in this room with its molded leather chairs and a practical Naugahyde sofa in aqua. The wrought-iron candiabrum is one of the many accessories the Giffins brought back from San Luis, Baja California, on short vacations.

Dahlia Culture

Dahlias may be planted from tubers, according to flower form and color, or from seedling flats generally available only in mixed colors. The latter are the small border species. The larger forms are usually planted from tubers.

The seedlings may be planted and treated as any annual might be, though they produce tubers which can be planted again the following year. The tubers, however, deserve some special care

Plant them in full sun along the coast (where they are at their very best, incidentally) or with some parttime shade inland. Wherever you plant them, however, don't overdo the shade.

Set the tubers about four or five inches deep. In harder soils, it is well to dig down another six inches to loosen the soil before planting. If the taller varieties are planted they will have to be staked and the stake should be set in at planting time so as to avoid later damage to the tuber. The growing eye should be placed toward the stake.

Water frequently, but don't feed dahlias until they have grown up 12 inches or so, at which time you should both feed and top them to encourage side branching and increased bloom,

The instrument is an accordion, for the most part, but a very special type accordion, for it is mounted solidly on its side - doing away with both holding and squeezing. Then it is hooked in electronically with a vacuum pump-like setup to the loudspeaker system.

The player sits in front and fingers it while using foot pedals like a miniature organ. The loudspeaker attachment makes it an ideal instrument for "happy hours" in taverns and dinner music in restaurants.

CARL SAYS learning to play the new instrument is easier than the regular accordion. And he ought to know. He helped the inventor sketch the idea back about 1929 when the two men were friends in Colorado. He's played them all from the first commercially unsuccessful model down through the newest, that Bonmancial is planning to sell from his base in Italy, where for the past ten years he has owned an accordionmaking company.

Who Needs Common Sense?

ADY JANE FRANCESCA Wilde, "Speranza" as she liked to be known, and mother of Oscar Wilde.

was a celebrated champion of Irish folklore. She and her husband, Sir William Wilde, an eye surgeon, wrote three books on the subject. Lady Wilde noted the well-known Irish predilection for supersti-tion, and as American folklorist Richard Dorson says in his foreword to "Folktales of Ireland" (University of Chicago Press, $5.50, edited and translated by Sean O'Sullivan) she ascribed it to "an instinctive dislike for the narrow limits of common sense coupled with a passionate yearning for the vague, the mystic the invisible."

Sean O'Sullivan (to speak the Gaelic truth he is Sean O'Suilleabhain) of the Irish Folklore Commission went fishing in the more than a million and a half pages of Gaelic manuscript on file in the commission's archives and he has hooked a big basketful of beauties.

COMMON SENSE? Leave that to the tidy tales of the Teuton. You'll find a little of it in this collection by O'Sullivan, but you'll have fun.

These are tales told by the Irish, so it is somewhat redundant to point out that the eight longest and best stories are of warriors and kings.

In the tale of "Young Conall of Howth" is this situation to delight an Irishman's heart:

"'I suppose it is you who has taken my wife from me, you blackguard'," said the big man.

'Not to make you a short answer'," said Conall, "'you had no wife that I could take. You took MY wife from ME.'

"THEY ATTACKED EACH other. For two days and nights they fought, and Conall's fury was increasing all the time. No matter how he tried, the big man could not strike any blow on Conall. . . . On the evening of the third day, Conall delivered a warrior's blow so weighty and fierce that it twisted the big man around and he fell on his back."

In the tale of Ceatach, that king's son fights the Great Hag of the Hills for seven nights and seven days and cuts off her head on the eighth day. "The head was whistling as it rose in the air, and it was humming as it fell, hoping to join the body again. But Ceatach was ready. He kicked the head with his big boot and sent it across a ridge and seven acres of ground.

"'Twas well for you you did that,' said the

Cothburn O'Neal's novel probes the morality of the money-raising business, a big business. Through the medium of Larry Shelton, who talks the town of Corinth into believing it needs a million-dollar gymnasium for the President's Physical Fitness Program, all the trickery, all the gimmickry and the good works too of professional fundraising are exposed. The amalgam of badgering and arm twisting, and honest hard work behind a fund-raising campaign is revealed.

A Look at Lean Years

By Forest Jordan

THE AMERICAN WRITER AND THE GREAT DEPRES-SION, Edited by Harvey Swados. Bobbs-Merrill $7.50.

THEN AN earthquake shook down the towers of Wall Street and the aftershocks rumbled across the land for a full decade afterward, Americans were left, at first, in a state of shock which later turned to fear and then cold despair as the months of struggling for existence in economic and social darkness turned into

A generation has now grown up under the warm. friendly skies of prosperity without ever having felt the cold, hostile grip of hunger. It is true that in the 60s, the shadow of the bomb hovers on the horizon. But we turn our backs to it. In the 30s there was a different spectre which did not hang at the far corner of vision, but covered the sky. It was hard times. It was real. And it was now.

FOR THOSE who remember and for those who would like a panoramic view of the era, editor Swados presents this anthology. Swados sets forth two aims: to convey the impact of the depression on the life and thought of the American people and to present what he calls "a cross section of the good writing of the period." The anthology is part of the new American Heritage Series.

The list of writers is a roll call of leading literary talent of the 20th Century: Sherwood Anderson, John Steinbeck, Erskine Caldwell, James Agee, James T. Far-rell, Edward Dahlberg, Edmund Wilson, Nelson Algren, E. E. Cummings, Marc Blitzstein, John DosPassos, Nathanael West, Archibald MacLeish, Thomas Wolfe and a number of others.

SOME OF them did their best writing during that period and subsequent efforts of theirs have never quite measured up. Steinbeck, Farrell and DosPassos come readily to mind in this category. Some fine writing also was done by unknowns who were chronicling the American scene either from garrets and park benches or under the helpful wing of a government assistance program for writers.

Some of the most accurate, forthright accounts of the depression come from these struggling beginners. The book is segmented, with portions covering, among other things, the industrial scene, the rural life, and political ideologies that

ANTIQUES _ ~

Heirloom That Invites Respite

By Helen L. Gillum

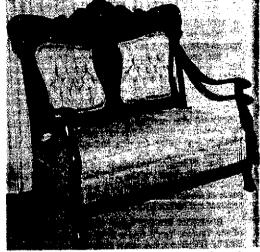

TREASURED FAMILY possession in the form of a pretty little love seat occupies a sunny corner in the living room of the Long Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Kinzie. Like other fine antiques in the home, it is quaint and old-fashioned in design and appeal.

Interestingly, though, with a growing popularity of love seats in modern home furnishings, the small sofa takes on a new, contemporary air. Attractively arranged with a pair of comfortable chairs and a beauti-ful "pie crust" table, it becomes what might be called "modern utilitarian," inviting conversation and respite from care with its tempting 'tarry a while" atmosphere.

The love seat dates back to at least 1880, and came from Kinzie's ancestral home in Virginia, It is 4 feet, 5 inches long, and 30 inches high from the seat to the top of the back. Stylish finger-carved ornamentation is a feature of the carved back band; the wooden frame carries the mellowed sheen of age and good care. The seat and back is upholstered in a pale green, brocade-like "antique" ma-terial. It is in such good condition that it looks as though it might only recently been purchased.

"LOVE SEATS" have been described as "large upholstered chairs or small sofas" intended for two persons. They are not to be confused with the "conversa-tion chair," which was an S-shaped chair built for two persons to sit side-by-side facing each other.

Nor is a love seat a true "sparking chair," large enough to accommodate two persons only if they sit very, very close together, thus encouraging the pastime for which it was named. Another small settee of this type was the French "con-versation sofa," with rounded ends partly enclosing the front, making for cozy communication before a blazing fire on a cold winter's night. The Kinzies are members of the recently-formed Los Cerritos chapter of the local chapter was named after Rancho Los Cerritos, the pioneer Bixby home now serving as Long Beach's historical museum and the little early-day settlement that once existed in North Long Beach.

What's different about blacksmithing now and then? "Well," they say, "We used to repair a lot of wagons and buggies. We haven't had a wagon or a buggy in here for a long time. We used to make a lot of ear and truck springs, and we used to straighten car frames. In those days when a car was wrecked in an accident it was taken to a blacksmith shop to be fixed."

The brothers used to employ six men. They take things easier now. They handle the work, and the shop is open only 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. five days a week.

How do they get along all these years in business together?

"Fine. We've never had a serious quarrel.'

The event will end at' 10:30 p.m., but dogs not needed for further judging will be excused at 6 p.m.

A dog show such as one of this magnitude is a good place for the whole family to go, and especially if it has: its mind set on obtaining a puppy. A puppy definitely should be a family affair. If Dad wants a hunting pal, he should be willing to take time to train it and understand that field dogs are happier if busy. The whole burden of any puppy should not fall on mother. In some instances combinations of currently available protective chemicals increase protection without in-creasing toxicity.

Chronic use of protective agents appears to be out of the question, however. from Down Under, they tolerate the extended drought of summer months and anpreciate year-round temperate weather. You can give them any degree of sun and all the neglect you wantthey'll produce their annual crop of blooms without complaint.

For Off-Beat Beauty Try the Bottle Brush

bigger and brighter blooms than the others. It is this one which members of the California Association of Nurerymen refer to as the Red Bottle Brush and needless to say, it is the most widely sold member of the family.

It is an upright shrub-or upright as any Bottle Brush can be, for the natural tend-nurseries trained as an espatier and also offered as a standard tree, pruned up to a single erect trunk. These are highly useful against a sunny south wall or against the south side of a fence in full sun. The narrow leaves are loosely carried, giving the shrub an airy and open structure. Annual pruning will help to keep foliage full and the pattern of growth as you like it. Prune to renew these shrubs in the late sum-

THE PROSTRATE Bottle Brush seems to have vielded to the family's natural tendency to sprawl. It is not a ground hugging shrub, but more in the manner of the Santa Cruz pyracantha, being low-growing and wide spreading in proportion to the over all bulk of the plant. This is an excellent choice for a hot, dry hillside where other covers sulk and refuse to grow, The flowers, again, are smaller than those of the Red Bottle Brush, but they are in abundance. The leaves are quite narrow, even more so than with the Red Bottle Brush

The narrowest leaves in the family belong to the Pineleaf Bottle Brush, a shrub whose common name pretty well describes its foliage. The red blooms of this one are offset by prominent yellow stamens. This is a littleknown Bottle Brush and well worth some increased attention.

There are other Bottle Brushes, including one with purplish flowers and another with red flowers tipped with gold. They are rare and are not widely grown.

MUMS ... are sun loving bushiest, shapeliest, compact grew more like vines! Worse plants with foliage almost to the ground! Best of all, , many more branches will blossom with flowers on them - and you probably won't have to think of tying them up before buds form. If you continue cutting the branches back you'll have to stake them up a couple of months before buds set and continue to tie them up.

Add more new varieties of mums in your mum garden, or sunny annual or perennial garden, Grow some in pots. As they start to blossom put them in the natio for color. on the sunny porch, or set the pots in the garden where color is needed.

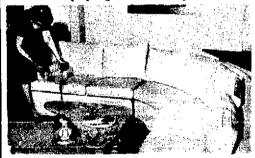

Fertilize them every three weeks to a month, but don't continue feeding them a high nitrogen liquid fish fertilizer. A home gardener we know fed his potted mums all summer long with such a fertilizer, No wonder the plants still, the flower stems were weak and the blossoms didn't stay fresh long. Use fertilizer containing more phosphorus than nitrogen to avoid these unpleasant developments.

Leaf hoppers are one of the worst pests that attack mums, along with other plants too. They suck the plant sap juice, causing folage to wilt and discolor. This pest also transmits virus, fungus and bacterial diseases, and is considered a vector-or carrier of plant diseases. Aphids, thrips, leaf miners, spider mites, and leaf tyers are other possible pests.

There are several insecticide sprays that control them. Add a little horticultural spreader to the dilutedwith-water insecticide spray or add a little oil emulsion spray. This combination makes the insecticide spray more effective.

SOME PERENNIAL edging cover the planted area. There plants gradually disappear from gardens because preparation. First of all the they don't bloom long enough, the flowers may not be attractive or they just aren't pleasing with various other plants. People don't buy them and therefore, nurserymen discontinue growing them.

One of the edging plants that continues to increase in popularity is the quite hardy Bergenia cordifolia "rock foil," grown in rock gardens, as edging plants, mass plant-ing or a few plants set out in the perennial garden.

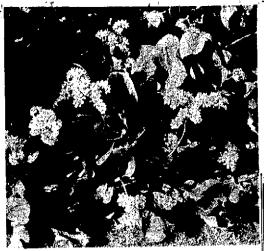

These desirable plants grow about a foot high with roundish heart-shaped leaves. clusters of cup-shaped rose color flowers and bloom through the late winterspring season.

The most thorough method for level or nearly flat ground would be to prepare the whole area by spreading a 2-inch layer of pre-moistened sphagnum peat moss over the ground, then an inch or two of lawn grade weed-free treated steer manure over it. Dig or plow the materials in twice, at least 8 to 10 inches deep. Soak down well. Water again several days later, A week or so still later, plant the ground cover plants.

Another method is to put the same type of two materials, pre-moistened peat moss and manure, in rows about a shovel width wide age appears in spring, depending upon the variety you choose. As the foliage ages, the greens deepen and the purplish-red gives way to a greenish-bronze. The autumn finale is copperythen the leaves disappear for the dormant season. At this time the graceful sithouette of the delicate branches and small twigs becomes apparent, to delight the eye during winter.

Exciting Maples

Even though they lose their leaves in winter, the Japanese maples have something exciting to offer the gardener the year-round. They have the further advantage of fitting into gardens of all sizes, from the smallest to the largest.

GROUND COVERS may be planted anytime of the year. Generally, spring and summer are the best planting seasons because the plants are set out during increasingly warm-to-hot weather that means they start to grow as soon as they are set out. Additionally these planting seasons are the most advantageous for planting on slopes, burms --- (artistic mound of soil built up for landscape decoration purpose) or banks plantings because there is no likelihood of rain storms severe enough to wash down the new plantings.

Soil preparation is of utmost importance if you expect the plants to grow easily, thrive and quickly

The fastest method, although not the best, yet one that helps the plants, is to mix in a handful of premoistened sphagnum peat moss or one of the several prepared planter mix mulch materials into hole for the individual plants. This soils preparation method is the only practical way for slopes, burms or bank plantings.

OUTSTANDING

Those guests, knowledgeable about dining out pleasures, have praised - year after year - the sauteed green onions which accompany every Apple Valley steak. No other restaurant in town offers that particular gourmet touch. I don't know why. I do know, however, that those charming little onions make every mouth-ful of top sirloin or New York cut a savory treasure. Executive chef Don Gay uses the tenderest green tops, sautees them briefly in butter and adds salt and pepper. He claims that's all he does to them, but I'm sure there must be more to the process than he cares to reveal.

Surprisingly it's the small louches-original and unique

Those smiling new faces which showed up at the Steak House this month belong to new owners Marc Hulsman and Chris Metkovich, who purchased it from Oscar Contratto Sr. Both are food experts, with years of experience in the industry, and also sportsmen. EDDIE WANTS OWN TV SHOW

Feels He'd Be 'More Ready' Second Time Around

By VERNON SCOTT

OLLYWOOD (UPI)—EDDIE FISHER opened at New Yorkin Parising 1979. York's Persian Room recently coming full cycle in his tempestuous two decades as a singing star.

He would like another crack at his own television show.

"I want a TV show of my own because I think I'm ready for it now," he said. "I have the temperament for it. Previously I was going on sheer guts and didn't know what it meant. I didn't understand the responsibilities.

"All I did on my shows was stand up and sing. There's more to it than that. I listened to a lot of advice instead of using my own judgment."

It was back in 1947 that the tousled-topped Fisher first appeared at the Copacabana as a production singer with billing just above the chorus line.

In the intervening years Fisher has touched all the bases, hitting the highs and lows with the abandon of a runaway space missile.

HIS PRIVATE LIFE and career careened unbelievably: a saga of what can happen to a nice young guy caught in the maelstrom of the spotlight.

In the beginning Eddie was the nice young boy next door---the shy grin, the big voice. Television and a dozen consecutive hit records propelled him to the very top of show biz and everybody was happy for Eddie Fisher.

Then came a stint in the Army and it was Pvt. Eddie Fisher, the boy-next-door in uniform. The country followed his star, applauding him at every turn.

After returning to civilian life, he married Debbie Reynolds to become the All-America young married man. He had his own television show, lived in Hollywood, and became the father of two beautiful children. Hooray for

The divorce papers from Debble were hardly dry when Liz became Mrs. Fisher,

ENTER RICHARD BURTON. Down in flames went Eddie. No more television show. The records weren't selling. A lesser talent might have evaporated from the scene altogether. But if Eddie is nothing else, he is a survivor.

Even Frank Sinatra hasn't encountered the headlines and romantic escapades that have befallen the nice guy from Philadelphia.

So where does Eddie stand now? What kind of man is he at 38 in the year 1966?

Eddie is still endowed with youthful charm although he is wary now. He answers questions guardedly.

In Hollywood he is a man-about town, dating the prettiest young girls on the scene. He's a regular at the Daisy Discotheque which have become his private hang-

He makes a great deal of money singing in clubs-Vegas, Tahoe, Philadelphia, Miami and Los Angeles. He appears frequently as a guest with Dean Martin, Andy Williams, Ed Sullivan.

He visits his son and daughter by Debbie and is on good terms with his ex-wife. He seldom discusses Miss Taylor of Burton, and when he does it is usually with humor, tinged perhaps with a trace of bitterness.

He would like to marry again.

"I don't particularly enjoy being single," he says. "There's no feeling like being in love. I'm searching for the right person, just like everybody else. Love is very hard to find, especially after you've been there and know what it is."

EDDIE FISHER ... Touched All Bases

One gets the distinct feeling that he still cares a great deal for Miss Taylor, but he takes pains to hide it.

Fisher is convinced his career is on the upswing again. He'll be cutting more records, activating his production company and taking aim on that television series.

And if he finds the right girl, he'll be completing another cycle. No matter what, Eddie Fisher is still going strong.

To me, one of the most beautiful things on TV is the narrated poem, "High Flight," accompanied by a soaring jet.

Is there any way I could obtain a copy?

Mrs. C. W. Shallcross, Long Beach

Channel 9 execs believe the poem was part of a special program called "Flight of the Magellan."

The tape of the program was erased and there was no script.

Sorry about that,

Who is the TV father of Zorro? Is it Cesar Romero or Britt Lomond?

Pam Barner, Long Beach Neither. The TV father of Zorro, who is played by Guy Williams, is Geoge

Somehow, Cesar Romero never managed to get into the act.

BALDNESS Like Time Waits for

Most people don't stop to realize that in 95% of the cases where a person is on the road to baldness, common sense on his or her part could prevent tragedy.

People simply do not get around to doing something about their balding condition until, in many cases, it is too late. Yet, in the years that they have the danger signals of approaching baldness, such as excessive hair-fall, dandruff, itchiness, dry scalp, thining or bald spots—in those years they probably spend substantial sums on their teeth and general body health. Yes, it is peculiar, but because oncoming baldness doesn't hurt like most parts of the body that are wasting away, many people simply let it go too long. go too long,

Bert's Eye View

TT WAS THE DAY BEFORE Zsa Zsa Gabor's lulest wedding-would you believe five?-and sister Eva was late to her "Green Acres" series rehearsal. Pat Buttram didn't think practicing for the wedding was a legitimate excuse for Eva to be tardy.

"If you're going to be late every time Zsa Zsa gets married," he joked, "we're never going to get anywhere with this show."

Eddie Albert was confused.

"I thought they were already married," he said. Eva attempted to straighten him out.

"No. dollink," she said, "they just got divorced."

There was room for confusion. Zsa Zsa had filed for a marriage license with millionaire oilman Joshua Gosden a day after she put in for a Mexican divorce from indostrialist Herbert Hutner.

The marriage, which had been planned for a Monday. was delayed two days until the Mexican divorce decree could become final.

"I TOLD HER to do it on a Saturday," said Eva, "but she couldn't wait. "I'm a little mixed up, too. I think I'm the bride. I bought six gowns and I can't make up my mind which to wear."

Afterwards, Eva said that although she was clated she really wasn't mixed up as to who was the bride.

The CBS-TV star, who feels very much married, has been wed to stockbroker Richard Brown since Oct. 5, 1959. He is her fourth husband.

The longevity of her present marriage qualifies her for expert advice on the subject of matrimony.
"To get married, to fall in love is easy," said Eva.

"To stay married is an art. It is worth the while to put effort in."

That "effort" takes various forms and it helps of course, if one of the forms is the kind that Eva physically

"A MAN MUST HAVE something new when he comes home," she said. "My husband never knows what hits him when he comes home.

"I'm always a different woman, It's not difficult--I'm so changeable.

"No, I can't give you examples. It's not a pattern. not something you study. It's just something you do "It's unpredictable. Maybe that's what a woman should be-unpredictable.

"Never have a man take you for granted. And never take a man for granted. There's always another woman who wants him.

Eva feels the "being someone new" daily is toughest for the housewife. But the housewife is used to the toughest. For it is she, in Eva's opinion, who works the hardest of all women and gets the least credit for it.

If the housewife does find it difficult to be changeable, there still remains a minimal step she can take when the breadwinner arrives home.

"FIRST, AT LEAST, give the guy a drank then the bad news.

The most important thing necessary to keep any marriage intact, in Eva's opinion, is a sense of humor "For the man, too," she clarified.

The Hungarian beauty doesn't think that most American housewives dress up to their best advantage. They can, she believes, do so in this country very inexpensively. "Plainness is the answer to being very chic," she said. Also, there are good things to be brought out and little things to hide "It may be nice to have diamonds, but a string of pearls is always the smartest."

THE ACTRESS confessed that she doesn't always limit her own tastes to the inexpensive. "My hat and bag and shoes must be the best" she

Indicating the coat she wore, she said

"It's junior size, very chic and only cost $70. My het (a pink bonnet) cost more than that."

Eva has no compunctions about offering advice for other femmes because:

"Dollink, I really like woman."

She's convinced the affection is reciprocated. Her evidence is that her matinees, when she appeared in a Broadway play, were principally attended by women.

Further, sponsors of her television series took a survey to see if women would accept her in her current role and she came off with "flying colors."

"I can sense a woman who is witchy and would like to try to take away your husband," she said. "I can also tell when a woman is real. Most of them are and I like them,"

'Never Marry Actress,' Advises Man Who Did

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA)-Ladies, do not abandon hope. You do not have to be an actress to snag a handsome French actor. In fact, Jacques Bergerac says he will never again marry an actress.

"They can only think of themselves," Bergerac says. "They have nothing left to give anyone else."

Bergerac is a veteran of marriages to Ginger Rogers and Dorothy Malone. He was in town for a few days, visiting his two daughters (Miss Malone is their mother) when he got all this off his great Gallic chest.

"THE MORE SUCCESSFUL an actress gets," he says, "the more unhappy she is. When she is not working, she is unhappy. And when she is working, she complains that the part is not good enough or the photographer does not know his job or the hairdresser is ruining her, so she is unhappy,

"I do not know of one happy marriage with a girl who is an actress. Not one,"

Bright Star

Chase Crowley, who plays Jane Hayes on "The Guiding Light," won Phi Beta Kappa honors at Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., and studied acting with Gertrude Lawrence at Columbia University.

AN ESSAY ON HOTELS

—Following in the same vein as his earlier acclaimed vein as his earlier acclaimed "Essay on Bridges" and "Essay on Doors," Harry Reasoner today takes a lighthearted look at the kinds of places people call home when they're away from home, covering the history of hotels and motels, and reviewing the argument and reviewing the argument about the advantages of each. A crew of 10 camera-men filmed hotels in 50 cities for the 10 p.m. hour, ch. 2, with rates of rooms filmed ranging from $500 a day to $1.10 a day (they didn't check in either), and interviews including belldidn't check in either), and interviews including bell-boys, maids and elevator operators who candidly discuss their guests. Among other things, Reasoner wonders why hotels give so many towels and such little cakes of soan and boy it is cakes of soap, and how it is possible for "wake-up" operators to be so cheerful at dawn.

CRITICS' CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Program: "The John Gary Show," premiered last Wednesday on channel 2.

It would be nice to think that in the year 1966 a fine, low pressure singer-and a quietly gracious host to boot could have a successful new television series.

Which is another way of saying the John Gary Show bowed in on CBS-TV Wednesday night, replacing the Danny Kaye hour for 12 weeks this summer.

The show lacks wham and zap because Gary is not a pow, wham and zap performer, being rather a throwback to the more genteel school of supper club entertainers who rely on taste and adult audiences. His customers are more likely to order champagne than soda pop. Critic Rick Du Brow musical numbers, most familiar songs, were fine. The settings were handsome. But a late-evening variety show really needs some lively and stimulating comedy if it wants to keep the viewers from nodding in their armchairs,

And where the new "John Gary Show" may fall down is in its concentration on music - there was nothing else for at least the first

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

A mildly interesting documentary on the Ventura School for Girls, an institution for delinquents,

I have no major quarrel with the production except that it really added nothing new to our knowledge of how California, a pioneer in the field, attempts to rehabilitate rather than imprison in the stronger sense of the latter word.

Certainly the objective, as specified by Mrs. Beatrice Dolan, superintendent, is noteworthy. That objective:

"To make a girl feel like a person with a future."

He had no answers to the questions, but he raised juestions around the quesions-China's encirclement, the unacknowledged spread of fighting by Americans outside Viet Nam's borders, the way we are fighting the war. He disagreed with much of Washington's viewpoint, but he was neither optimistic nor despairing.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP Eric Sevareid, one of my favorite thinking reporters, demonstrated his excellence anew in a half-hour program Johnson became President. emphasizing fact, rather than rhetoric.

He pointed out that it cost the U.S. government a million dollars last year for each enemy soldier killed - a rather cold-blooded statistic.

For every 10 million doliars the enemy spends, we spend 15 billion dollars.

Among U. S. troops in Asia, there are now 20,000 in Thailand, more than the entire amount there were in Viet Nam when Lyndon

No Chinese soldier has ever been found in the ranks of the North Vietnamese.

Of the 65,000 American military men actually in combat—his estimate—each has a 50-50 chance of being wounded or killed,

Along with fact, there was Sevareid's personal opinion, qualified by the statement that he was not an authority on Asia nor an expert on war.

It was his opinion that until the U.S. became involved. Viet Nam was essentially a civil war. Viet Nam, only a society, not a nation, has no strong national sense not strong national leader.

The deepest force moving Asia today has little to do with military power, including the nuclear bomb. The deepest force - China included-is the modern industrial revolution,

SPECIAL WAYNE & SHUSTER

An affectionate look at W. C. Fields, considered by many to have been Amer-ica's greatest comic artist, is taken by Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster as they get behind the image of the "insulting tippler" to show why his comedy was so bitwhy his comedy was so bit-ter. Films trace his career from a newsboy at 11 (after running away from home), through stints as a juggler in Europe and Ziegfeld Fol-lies shows from 1915 to 1921, to his eventual tri-umph in Hollywood movies. Included during the CBC-Included during the CBC-produced hour at 10 p.m., ch. 2, are the proposal and honeymoon scenes with Mae West from "My Little Chickadee," excerpts from his Charlie McCarthy radio feud, his pool-playing sketch, talking dog and carnival ticket/seller bits, and scenes in which Fields turns his comedic genius to such pur-suits as golf, table tennis and cards. (Next week's pro-file: the Marx Brothers.)

Mitch Makes Star-Spangled Appearance

Mitch Miller, star of NBC-TV's repeat "Sing Along Mitch Miller, star of NBC-TV's repeat ong rooms with Mitch," recently appeared at Chicago's Comiskey Park for a special salute to "The Star Spangled Banner.

The Miller appearance, arranged through the NBC promotion department, resulted from a three-week poll conducted by Ed Short, general manager of the Chicago White Sox baseball team, to determine whether the national anthem should be replaced by 'God Bless America" before each White Sox home game.

Believing it would encourage greater fan participation, Short had substituted the latter for the national anthem at the start of the season and the decision set off a storm of controversy.

CBS Seeks Original TV Dramas

CBS-TV has earmarked a half-million dollars for the writing of dramas specifically for television.

In making the announcement, John T. Reynolds, network president, said:

"The enthusiasm for significant drama on television was apparent in the response to our presentation of 'Death of a Salesman.'

"Looking beyond next season's presentation of other proven great theater, such as Tennessee Williams The Glass Menagerie' and Arthur Miller's The Crucible,' we are determined to find and present the very best of original drama as well."

Large size canvos beach umbrella available in choice of gay colors . . . why blister when you a n enjoy cool confert and the beach ible,' we are determined to

For each drama commisstoned, CBS-TV will pay up to $25,000. The sum, Reynolds noted, is approximately twice the budget allocated for former "Playhouse 90" scripts.

"WE HOPE that some of the great writers who left television for other areas will be tempted to return, just as we hope many new writers will produce challenging ideas for us.

Once a writer's work is commissioned by the program department, he will receive full payment without restriction on the length of his drama and without any time limitation on completion of the final script.

"We will fit our schedule to the writer's schedule."

Program title for presen-, tation of the dramas will be "CBS Playhouse." The plays will be aired in prime time.

Mamie and Ike today and on their wedding day 50 years ago when he was a 1st lieutenant.

Mamie & Ike talk about 50 years of Marriage

by ROSALIND MASSOW

n July 1, 1916, a pretty 19year-old girl exchanged "I do's" with a handsome 25-year-old Army lieutenant in a simple ceremony in the parlor of the bride's home in Denver, Colo.

The bride was the daughter of a wellto-do family. The groom was a graduate of West Point. The local newspapers duly noted the event with a story in the social columns.

This Friday, a half-century later, that same couple, Mamie Geneva Doud Eisenhower and David Dwight Eisenhower, known as Mamie and Ike to millions of people in all parts of the world, will mark their Golden Anniversary again with a simple family celebration.

What happened between 1916 and 1966 is a far cry from those simple beginnings. It encompasses a career that includes two of the nation's highest honors—the Presidency of the United States and the achievement of the rank of five-star General of the Army. If that weren't enough there were other important accomplishments — Eisenhower's election as Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe and his tenure as president of Columbia University.

What effect did this outstanding career of public service have on that nice young couple who married in 1916? PARADE visited the General and his lady at their peaceful 189-acre farm here for a look back in time and memory.

Mamie and like sat side by side on a slipcovered lovescat on the glass-enclosed sunporch of their stately old colonial farmhouse overlooking the Gettysburg battlefield and rolling hills of fresh green. She wore a bright orange knit suit with matching orange shoes. Her hine eyes sparkled with health and vitality. Her hair, a lustrous honey blonde, was dressed with the familiar fluffy hungs. The General relaxed in a blue tweed sports jacket and gray elacks.

Red and yellow roses, Mamie's favorite flowers, were arranged in vases around the room. An aminished and still-wet landscape by General Eisenhower lay atop a table. Other canvasses, finished but unframed, stood on the floor behind a chair.

I asked the General: If he had it to do over again, would be marry the same girl?

He threw back his head and laughed the famous Eisenhower laugh. His blue eyes twinkled. "That's the worst question! ever heard," he said. "There's only one possible answer."

Then he turned serious. "As a matter of fact, I wouldn't want to live my life over again. I've mode my mistakes, my errors and blunders like everyone else, but to go buck and start again at, say, 20—no. Look what I would have missed. Everyhody has to live his own life and take his share of the problems."

As the recalled it, his first problem after being introduced to Manie was getting a date with her. They had met at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., while she was there with her family on a winter holiday.

"He was different from anyone else I knew "

"I was going on guard tour when I was called across the street by a lady who lived on the post," he said. "I walked across and chatted a minute. There was this attractive-looking gal. She was wearing a great big flowered skirt that came up to here [The pointed to a high waistine]. I didn't know how long she was staying, but I invited her to take a walk with me.

"I found out later that she didn't like to walk, and that was a long walk we took."

"Aw, it was just the maiferm," [he said, grinning.

However attractive Mamie may have found him, it was quite a while before he received her undivided attention. There was much competition from other young men. To deal with it, the remembers, he worked out a clever strategy.

"When Mamie had another date, I went to visit her mother. I liked her mother very much. I'd hang around until midnight and let the guys see me there when she got back." After a while Ike had won over her parents and discouraged the other young men. In a few months, on Valentine's Day, the couple became engaged, and eight months after they met they married.

They set up housekeeping at Fort Sam Houston in a two-room apartment with no kitchen. The flat was the first of a series of homes for the couple. During the next 25 years they lived the life of a typical Army couple — in the United States (he was commander of Camp Colt in Gettysburg), France, Panama and the Philippines. They were years of tragedy and of happiness. The couple's first son, Doud Dwight, nicknamed "lchy," born in 1917, died three years later of scarlet fever. A second son, John, arrived in 1922. He is now 44.

Not long after their marriage, Mamie remembered, she got her first taste of the compelling sense of duty that was in carry her husband to great heights. "He was ordered out of San Antonio for a short time," she said."We had very little storage space in the apartment, and He had to keep his bedroll and pistol under the piano out of sight. I was watching him gather up his helongings, and I guess I was complaining. All of a sudden, he turned to me and said, 'Mamie, this you must understand. My country comes first. Ton come second.' That has always stayed in my mind."

Mamie also came to learn about her husband's ambittions. "There wasn't much chance of lke's being promoted in those days," she said, "yet he used to read and study until 2 or 3 in the morning even though he had to be in the field at 7."

The interrupted to explain his diligence. "You see," he said, "I was not a very good cadet. I finished 125th in discipline out of 162 in my class, and there was even some doubt whether I would be commissioned, because I had a leg injury. But I got my commission after all. From that moment on I decided that I was going to do the best job I knew how. In those days it was impossible to become a general in peacetime. And I wasn't too concerned about promotion -I was more interested in doing my job well. Later when my son John wanted to go to West Point, I told him never to think about promotion but to do his job well and make every boss surry when he leaves."

"When Mamie had another date I visited her mother ??

I asked the General what, in those early days, he had learned about his bride. What kind of housekeeper was she? Was she a good cook?

Mamie interrupted. "I'm not a cook. I was never permitted in the hitchen when I was a young girl."

"You could make mayonnaise and fudge," the General said with a grin. He went on to say that he did the only thing a fellow could do—he became the cook.

To this day, Mamie admits she is not overly fond of cooking. She can manage steak and potators and several other dishes like likes, but she's unenthusiastic about the kitchen. During the war, she confessed, she often ate candy rather than cook a meal for herself.

Often in those days she and other military wives would get together and take turns doing the cooking. Mamie always drew KP—she preferred washing dishes to preparing meals.

Looking back, those first 25 years seemed pretty happy to the Eisenhowers. I asked which assignment brought them greatest happiness. They looked at each other and tried to decide. The General suggested their first tour of France in the late 20's: "We had a nice life and a nice group of friends," he recalls. "Our son John was going to a good school, and we had lots of fun and lots of company."

Mrs. Eisenhower said it was very difficult to pimpoint a place where they didn't have a wonderful time.

"I don't think we've ever left any post that we didn't have a feeling of reluctance to leave," she said.

Life changed drastically for the Eisenhowers in 1941. Ike was promoted to Brigadier General, later to become Assistant Chief of Staff to Gen. George C. Marshall, then commander of the North African landings. Thus began the Eisenhower public years. Supreme Allied Commander of the European Invasion. he was next appointed Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army and went on to become president of Columbia University, Meanwhile, he was appointed Supreme Commander of Allied Powers in Europe, after which he achieved the greatest honor of them all, President of the United States.

The couple remembers their home at Columbia as the most pleasant place they ever lived —even more so than the White House. "John and Barbara came down from West Point where John was an instructor, and we saw a great deal of our grandchildren," they recalled.

As for the Eisenhower political career, that, too, brings back personal memories.

Because Mrs. Eisenhower was ill, she missed one of the most exciting days of her life—the day lke was nominated. As the General recalls it, "She was sitting in the apartment sick or something, and I was sitting up in a room with my brother and other people. I went back to see her every once in a while. I was kind of hored with the whole nomination business, but then Minnesota changed its vote and I was nominated. I went back to tell her. She looked up from her pillow and said, "That's nice."

Mrs. Eisenhower hastened to explain that she had been given medication—she's allergic to all medication—and as a result couldn't comprehend the immensity of the news.

The Presidential election in 1952 proved just how popular Eisenhower was. He won by a landslide, and Mamie and Ike moved into the White House, January 20, 1953.

Mrs. Eisenhower, accustomed to making a home wherever they went, settled into her new job as First Lady with ease.

Strange as it may seem, the White House was the Eisenhowers' first permanent home — they lived there eight years, the longest period they spent anywhere. It was, the General recalls, like moving to another post. "I had had certain duties, and I did them, and Mamie had her duties, too. We always managed to have good friends around. In many ways the White House was easier to live in because we had so much help, but it really wasn't any different from any other place we lived."

Today the Eisenhowers can look back on their life with objectivity and pursue their interests with greater freedom; however, being in the public eye means they can never have complete freedom.

I asked if they ever resented sharing their lives with millions of people.

"Sometimes we wished we weren't so famous 22

The General answered: "There were times when we wished we weren't so famous. Mamie and I have talked about this many times. Sometimes we wish we could go into the five-and-ten—or even Cartiers—without people knowing who we are, but then people are so kind. They want a picture of us; they tell me they voted for me twice or that their son served with me. When I consider the life we've lived, which took us to places of considerable prominence, we stop complaining. Suppose people didn't like us. That would be terrible, wouldn't it?"

These days the General, 75, and his bride, 69, follow a more leisurely pace, although they rarely stay put. They are always going somewhere—Washington; New York; Palm Desert, Calif.; Augusta, Ga.; or Phoenixville, Pa., where John and Barbara Eisenhower now live.

the explained that he is writing another book, a small one of personal essays. He also paints and makes a few speeches here and there. Although they see their grandchildren less than they used to, Dwight David, Barhara Anne, Susan Elaine and Mary Jean are still their greatest joys.

The first thing you may notice is scratching without any fleas. Or maybe a dull, brittle coat. Both are often early signs of diet deficiencies that can lead to more serious problems. New Pet'm* Coat and Skin Daily Food Supplement helps guard against these diet deficiences. It supplies essential polyunsaturated fatty acids and vitamins that even canned and packaged foods may lack. Vital nutrients all pets need every day for bright, glowing coats and healthy skin.

Just squirt new Pet'm Coat and Skin Daily Food Supplement on your pet's food. It's that easy. Dogs like the flavor. Cats, too. So give your pet a chance at the coat and skin he could be showing. One bottle lasts the average dog for thirty days. Then, if your pet doesn't look better and scratch less, we'll give you your money back. Just mail us the empty bottle. What can you lose? Nothing but your dog's dull coat and dry, itchy skin. If new Pet'm Supplement doesn't help, the problem may not be diet deficiencies and your veterinarian should be consulted. So if you love your pet, Pet'm.

Mamie thinks there should be only one

The General and his lady at ease and relaxed at their Gettysburg farm.

"I just love having them around," says Mamie. "The girls try on my clothes and watch TV with me. We do a lot of talking and laughing."

Dwight David, the only boy in the family, is one of Ike's favorites. "When he was smaller we spent more time together," Ike explains. "Today, he likes baseball, football and soccer, like other boys his age, but these are things I can no longer do with him. I do go fishing, skeet shooting and play golf with him. And often we just sit around and talk seriously."

No one has to ask the Eisenhowers to what they attribute their marital happiness. One has only to observe them to know why they have endeared themselves to millions of people. Mutual respect, humor, great warmth and interest come through when you see them to-

If anyone has the right to give advice to young married couples, it's Mamie and Ike. Perhaps the best advice the General can offer is to keep a sense of humor, be ready to give and take. He feels it's more important to be understanding than always right.

"Being right all the time is perhaps the most tiresome quality anyone can have," lke comments. "Mamie and I have had our difficulties. We were both strong-willed, and there was a great difference in our background. I was a boy in a family of six boys, and she was a girl in a family with three other daughters. She used to make a great deal about birthdays, anniversaries and holidays. Now. I keep a record of every birthday and every anniversary. It's a good thing I have a secretary," Eisenhower said with a broad grin.

"For any marriage to be successful," Mamie chimed in, "you must work at it. Young women today want to prove something—all they have to prove is that they be a good wife, housekeeper and mother. There should be only one head of the family—the man."

"And as for spats," she goes on, "if a quarrel develops, one should leave the room," Mrs. Eisenhower advises. "It takes two to quarrel," she added with a wink.

The one recorded quarrel the Eisenhowers had was years after they were married. They were visiting with Ike's family in Abilene, Kan., and Ike went out to play some cards with a few of his cronies. When he didn't come back by midnight, Mrs. Eisenhower phoned and angrily demanded he come home. Ike listened but didn't comply. He was playing poker and had lost $600. "I wasn't going to leave until I made up my losses, he said. By 1:30 A.M. he had won back the money he lost. The way he figured it, she would have been much angrier if he were out $600 than a few hours late getting home.

The Eisenhowers also have some advice for grandparents.

"Grandparents should be helpful," Ike says, "but not busybodies. They should help out with their grandchildren's education if they can, but under no circumstances should they get in the way and become prime ministers for them. That's the one way to ruin your children's marriage."

When you're married a long time, you run out of ideas for gifts, and the Eisenhowers are no exceptions. At this late date, they may have bought anniversary presents for one another, but if they did they weren't talking about it.

"One trouble, nowadays, is to find a gift for one another," Ike says. "It's very hard because neither of us has extravagant tastes. Mamie uses a 1955 car and she won't part with it, so how can I buy her a new car?"

Mamie touched his arm and said softly, "The one gift I want from you is to be a good boy and keep well."

Of the gifts the Eisenhowers have given to one another, the one lke loves best is a watch Mamie gave him for their first anniversary. "It still runs," lke says. And Mamie prizes the wristwatch she received from him on their 25th anniversary and a tea set he was years collecting for her.

Mamic and Ike will receive gifts from family and from each other when they mark the day they were married 50 years ago at the home of their son John in Phoenixville. It will be strictly a family affair.

As they pass the golden milestone, the Eisenhowers know that their devotion to each other and to their country is returned by the millions who wish them the full cup of their viotage years.

"NO FINER GIFT"

You can help honor General and Mrs. Eisenhower on their Golden Wedding Anniversary this Friday.

With the Eisenhowers' consent, a national tribute is underway. Comedian Bob Hope and former Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson are cochairmen. The campaign will collect gifts for the undertaking the General says is closest to his heart: the establishment and advancement of Eisenhower College at Seneca Falls, N.Y.

The liberal arts college (first described in PARADE, January 9, 1966, "Eisenhower College: A New Idea in Education") will receive its first students in September 1967. A unique school with international emphasis, it will reflect the General's lifelong interest in world events—and in young people.

All gifts to the national tribute—which are tax-deductible—will be recorded at the college, and special gifts will be inscribed on a Golden Wedding plaque in Founders Hall. The Post Office Department has agreed that contributions may be addressed simply: Eisenhower College, c/o Postmaster.

"For a beloved leader," the tribute committee has declared, "there can be no finer tribute, no more cherished gift."

Bob Hope and Eisenhower break ground for Eisenhower College, dear to lke's heart.

be constant traffic in the halls is one of the first things a visitor to George Washington High School notices. It's a byproduct of a break with educational tradition.

At George Washington students come and go as they please when they do not have classes. Unscheduled, unsupervised, they have the run of the building. They can experiment in a lab, drop in on another class, talk, sleep, goof off.

"A lot of them goof off," says administrative assistant Richard Hunt, "but one of our key phrases is 'toward self-direction.' We believe it's something they must learn through experience."

A lot of them do not goof off, and the result is that educators from all parts of the country have been coming to Charleston to see what is going on at George Washington. Another result is that George Washington has won a 1966 Pacemaker award.

A Pacemaker award is given annually by PARADE and the National Education Association to honor a pioneering school or school system in each state. Across the country forward-looking educators are experimenting with hold, new concepts; it is the intention of PARADE and the NEA to encourage them.

For example, there's the North-Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, N. C., the country's first state-established, state-supported school for the performing arts, where the entrance examism audition. Like George Washington, it's a 1966 Pacemaker.

COMPUTENZES

There are many others—like the Altoona School District. Altoona, Pa., where seventh-graders are taught to operate computers, and the Vestal Central Schools, Vestal, N. Y., where students stay after school every Tuesday to discuss Plato and Shakespeare and e. e. cummings in noncredit seminars.

The full list of Pacemakers is published on page 11. All will receive Pacemaker plaques at the NEA convention in Miami this week.

As for George Washington, it is a pacemaker among Pacemakers. Although the building was designed to fit an educational program, there is nothing about its exterior to suggest the ayant garde.

The school sits in a clearing on a mountaintop on the south side of the Kanawha River. To reach it, a car winds through an exclusive wooded residential section. But GWs students also come from poverty pockets beyond. "We have a few kids who come from homes with no floors," says Hunt.

The school is a three-level, flat-roofed brick structure that hovers between plain and modern and could pass for an armory or a dormitory. The inside walls are cement block, functional rather than fancy. But it is architecture with a purpose. Less than two years old, the school was built, at a modest cost of $1.7 million, to house a dream.

In 1960 Kanawha County was preparing to build three high schools. L. K. Lovenstein, then superintendent of coun-

THEY LEAD THE WAY IN EDUCATION

by GEORGE KISEDA

ty schools, wanted one of the schools to explore new ideas in education. So the Kanawha County school system, the West Virginia State Department of Education and the College of Education at Ohio State University got together and blueprinted a pilot school. There were cummittees piled on top of committees, of Ohio State professors and county and state administrators in West Virginia, and coordinating them was a young, aggressive principal named Gene Stanley. Stanley had been recruited from a Ford Foundation post in Florida.

He spent two years at Ohio State with the planners, all the while shuttling back and forth to Charleston, and then he spent another year recruiting a staff.

The planners broke with the traditionalists in two major areas. They discarded the standard six-, seven- and eight-period school day for a flexible schedule broken into 20-minute segments, and they moved away from the fixed class of 30 to classrooms of varying sizes.

Every 20 minutes someone changes classes at George Washington, but some classes run 40, 60, 80 and 100 minutes. The teachers in a subject area determine the length of their classes. "Our French teachers think 40-minute classes are most effective," says Hunt. "Our Latin teachers prefer 60-minute classes." Instead of fitting the subjects to a schedule, George Washington fits the schedule to the subjects, using a computer to get everybody in the right place at the right time. "I don't know any two students who have the same schedule," says Hunt.

There are small classrooms for semimars (12 to 15 pupils), medium classrooms for academic labs (30 to 35) and large classrooms for lectures (150 or more). "The class of 30 was an arbitrary anachronism," says Stanley. "There is no real good reason for a class of 30. It's too small for a good lecture. A teacher who lectures on the same subject five times to groups of 30 is wasting his breath. And a class of 30 is too large for good discussion."

A typical English student at GW will have six classes a week — two large group lectures in which the subject matter is introduced, two academic labs where the students pursue it further through supervised research and study and two seminars where the students learn through an interplay of ideas.

"MYCLYES" STUDENTS

"We find the seminars are probably the strongest part of the whole program," says Stanley, "They're involving students as I think they haven't been involved before in public schools."

The academic labs surround the library and are extensions of the library, containing tapes, records, films, anthologies and other materials in specific subject areas. In world literature, for instance, there are 20 sets of materials worth approximately $150 spiece. "And the door to the library is open if this is inadequate." says Stanley. It's a library that gets used, and, in keeping with the easygoing, permissive atmosphere of the easygoing, permissive atmosphere of the categories, it is not conspicuous for silence. "I just try to keep things reasonably quiet," says librarian Mrs. Helen Martin-

Free time may comprise 10 to 30 percent of a student's schedule. Because of the timesaving group lectures, teachers, too, have free time, and it is not unusual to see students and teachers conferring over some problem or project. Both are enthusiastic about GW's approach.

"It's a tremendous challenge for those students who want to be challenged," says Miss Jan Penix, journalism, French and English teacher. "I wish every school were like George Washington."

Cessa Movin is an exchange student from Copenhagen, Denmark, and she appreciates GW. "In Denmark," she says, "you're kind of looked after all the time. Here you have an opportunity to take care of your own time. It's good preparation for college."

"It's great," says Yale-bound Vernon Jones. "You can go as far as you want."

George Washington's Pacemaker program has been so successful that it may cost the school one principal. "I'm getting a lot of job offers," says Stanley.

Amphitheater is used for lecture at George Washington High School. Classrooms come in all sizes, depending on purpose of course. The school was designed to fit curriculum.

Sometime soon, Carol Hansen's fiancé will ask himself if he has enough life insurance.

(And how much is enough, anyway?)

A timely question. Not only for a husbandto-be, but for anyone with new responsibilities. You perhaps?

A quick answer is a minimum of four to five times annual income.

A better one is it all depends. On the size of the family, as well as income. On the financial responsibilities still ahead. On how far other assets will go towards meeting them.

Chances are you've already decided that your other resources can't do the job alone. Especially if you have a family to support. Kids to put through college. A mortgage to pay off. Retirement ideas that call for more income than social.

That's why you own life insurance. You realize it gives you an important advantage over all other types of thrift: the full amount is guaranteed right from the start. It's unique that way.

FRIENDSHIP. Is a sincere, enduring friendship possible between a white man and a native? It's possible, believes anthropologist Robert Edgerton of UCLA, but not very probable. Writing in the Southwestern Journal of Anthropology on his experiences with Menomini Indians in Wisconsin and colored tribes in Uganda, Kenya and Tanzania, Edgerton points out that most such friendships go through the following four definite stages:

(1) The Native's Lament in which the native describes his previous painful experiences with other whites and waits for the declaration by his new friend that he is "really different."

(2) The Traditional Test in which the native asks his white friend to do something illegal such as smuggle liquor onto an Indian reservation.

(3) The Hinting Period in which the native makes constant hints for more favors.

(4) The Outrage in which the native, testing the limits of his new friendship, commits a transgression that the white man equates with outrage.

Edgerton believes white-native friendships end on the downgrade because they are founded on artificial, pseudorelationships between unequal partners. The white man enters the friendship with power, position and prestige the native cannot even approach. The white man is moreover prejudiced by the sterectype image of the native, and the native is burdened with the stereotype image of the white. The white regards natives as stupid, shiftless, sexually promiscuous, lazy. The native regards the white as rich, greedy, selfish, powerdrunk, exploitative. There is no mutual understanding of the other's culture. Having been exploited for centuries, the native, refusing to believe the white man's altruism, his offer of friendship and help without strings, is driven to acts that will define the extent of the white friendship. When these tests result in The Outrage, the white man regards the native as a hopeless ingrate, and the native retreats, convinced that his tribe is right in its assessment and suspicion of the white man. Asked whether these observations apply to the relationship between Americans and Vietnamese, Dr. Edgerton answers, "Never having been in Vietnam, I wouldn't know, but there may be similarities."

MEDICAL MONITOR. Scientists from the Philco Corporation have developed a chair that monitors vital functions of the human body -- pulse rate, respiration, heart sounds and impulses -- with no sensors attached to the person being examined. Anyone who has undergone an electrocardiographic examination and has waited for the technician to apply paste and strap on electrodes to record the heart impulses knows how complex the measuring of physical functions can be. Philco's Automatic Medical Monitor could make such procedures obsolete. The upholstery of the chair contains a series of electrical pickups that conduct the impulses of the human body to electronic units that produce the data on a series of graphs. Philco demonstrated the chair a few months ago at an aerospace medical meeting. and the worldwide response has been excellent. The Automatic Medical Monitor is not yet in production, but the company is conducting a marketing survey and will probably produce first models for sale some time next year. Probable selling price: $3000 to $4000, making it the most expensive chair in the world, but well worth it.

NEGROES IN VIETNAM. or the 250,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam at this writing, approximately 37,500, or 15%, are colored. In the top fighting units, however, such as the airborne troops, the proportion is frequently

50%. The war in Vietnam is the most integrated war U.S. servicemen have ever fought.

PREPARING FOR WAR. More than 17 years after its creation, Israel is still regarded by the Arab world as an intolerable intruder. Israeli proposals for peace talks have been met by constant Arab hostility. The two-year-old Unified Arab Command, established to coordinate Arab preparations for war against Israel, is a military planning staff whose work is hindered by internecine political suspicion. It does, however, recommend that individual Arab states arm for war, which they are doing as follows:

JORDAN recently acquired 50 to 100 Patton tanks from the U.S., is bargaining for supersonic fighters from Britain, France, the U.S.

LEBANON recently obtained from Jordan 40 British Charioteer tanks, has tripled its air force with the purchase of 12 new French Mirage III supersonic fighters.

SAUDI ARABIA has negotiated a deal for British jet fighters, radar networks, plus American Hawk antiaircraft missiles.

As for ISRAEL, France is said to be supplying her with rockets capable of carrying atomic warheads. It is widely believed that the Israelis, using the French-built atomic reactor in the Negev desert, will be able to produce an atomic device within three years.

WANTED: MALE MODELS. British automobile manufacturers no longer want their new cars presented in show-rooms by glamorous young women. Reason: foday women play the decisive role in the purchase of an automobile, and they are more likely to be tempted by personable, handsome young men. British Motors Corporation has decided to replace its pretty, long-stemmed beauties with men outfitted by Pierre Cardin, who has come up with a new line of male apparel.

My Favorite Jokes

by Jeremy Vernon

Entron's note: Jeremy Vernon, hailed by critics as one of the brightest new comics in show business, was born in New York City 26 years ago. "I was originally named Jerry," he says, "but there are so many Vernous in show biz-Jackie Vernon, Matilda Vernon, Joe Vernon, Mount Vernon-that I decided to change my first name to Jeremy. Sounds very British, no?" Vernon wanted to become a serious actor. but the Army assigned him to its Special Services Division where he developed comedy rowtines to entertain the troops. Following his discharge, he attended the American Theatre Wing, starred while looking for jobs, decided to make comedy his forte. Young Vernon has appeared on several TV variety shows, has also worked such nite spees as the Aladdin in Las Veges, the San Juan in Puerto Rico, the Shereton Park in Washington, D.C. Herewith some of his best jokes:

The wife of an alcoholic decided to scare her husband into quitting the bottle once and for all. When he came home drunk one Friday night, she was waiting for him, a white sheet covering her head and body. She began to make eerie, screeching, ghostlike sounds.

Who are you?" her husband asked. "I am the devil," she wailed.

"Shake hands, devil," he offered, "I married your sister."

A college student was undergoing his physical at the Army induction station. Said the doctor, "I'll whisper a number from the far side of the room. If you hear it, please repeat the number to me." The physician then shouled at the top of his lungs, "Fortyseven." The sound was so loud the college boy winced. But he thought a minute, then said, "Thirty-six."

"Close enough," said the doc. "1-A."

Another college student, this one a beardnik, raced up to the psychiatrist at his Army physical and pleaded, "Take me right now. Forget about basic training. Just give me a rifle. Send me to the front, I'll kill every Viet Cong singlehanded, Send me, I am power, I am strength. I am the conqueror."

Said the doctor: "You're crazy."

Immediately the beardnik calmed himself. "Write it down," he urged. "Write it down."

I recently took an air trip around the world and recorded the announcements of the various airline stewardesses. In Germany I heard, "Good evening. Welcome to the works most superior airline. Please march to your seats, sit without squirming, ring for your hostess only when absolutely necessary." In Israel the stewardess said: "We shall be flying at an altitude . . . you wouldn't believe it! Under your seat is a life jacket. You should wear it only in good health." In Madrid the stewardess said, "Have a most pleasant flight, and please, pray for clear skies. Because the planes in Spain fall mainly in the rains."

It was the lunch hour at the elegant Four Seasons restaurant in New York, A leading matinee idol walked in with a heautiful red-

"Boy!" exclaimed one press agent to another. "Who's that beautiful dish?"

"That's his wife."

"His wife?" repeated the first press agent. "Boy! What a publicity stunt!"

Anecdote of the Week

Mrs. Henrietta Garshin of Bromley, near London, notified Scotland Yard recently that her husband had disappeared. "If you find him," she pleaded, "please, please tell him that my mother has given up the idea of coming to live with us."

Green Bay is famous for football, but not for coffee.

It doesn't have MJB.

Talk about David and Goliath! Little old Green Bay (population 62,288) regularly shellacs cities ten, twenty, and a hundred times its size, and currently holds the World's Championship. It's a wonderful town for football, but don't go there for coffee. Green Bay just doesn't have the heart-warming goodness of the country's best coffee. The MJB people made up their minds back in 1881 to make the best coffee in the country, and they do. This requires searching out the finest coffee beans grown, blending them with utmost skill, roasting them with care, and then grinding and packing the coffee the very same day it's roasted. Always! Now this kind of painstaking care makes great coffee—the best in the country, as a matter of fact-coffee that gives you first-cup-in-the-morning flavor all day long, but it does limit the amount of MJB they make. So be glad you're in The West, Coffee-lover. (And just think what Green Bay might do if it had MJB!)

n and a second

What's one of your favorite cities that's deprived of fine MJB Coffee? Why don't you write the MJB people, 665 Third St., San Francisco, and tell them about it.

To the bride June means "forever," and to her dad these French Pronuptia models will mean a pretty penny (I. to r.): "Soleil" (satin), "Orphée" (satin, lace) and "Laurence" (organdy).

Brides Are Big Business

by LLOYD SHEARER

efore this year is out approximately 1,800,000 American women will become brides.

And of this goodly number only 15 percent will elope or get married in simple ceremonics.

The remaining 85 percent or 1½ million will shoot the works in a showy, formal, ritualistic, once in-a-lifetime wedding complete with bridesmaids, flowers, ushers, the whole traditional kit and caboodle.

It is the annual crop of 1½ million dewy-eyed brides which has given rise to the $7-billion-per-year U.S. wedding industry.

Do you have any idea how much the average church wedding with a country olab or hotel reception afterward costs the father of the bride? It runs from $2500 up, and frequently the poor guy can't afford it. But how many men have the courage to defy sentiment, social pressure and the dribbling tears of a darling daughter?

Not many, which is why once a daughter's engagement is announced, the wedding industry moves in for the kill. Photographers phone, printers solicit; travel bureaus, department stores, carhire services, honeymoon hotels, florists, caterers, recording engineers, furnitume salesmen, insurance salesmen, real estate salesmen, bakers, orchestra leaders—the whole Pandora's box of economic opportunists empties out.

JAME MESTSELLERS

Manufacturers of wedding dresses in the U.S. are relatively conservative compared to their counterparts in France. In Paris, for example, the Promptia chain has a fleet of advertising trucks that cruise the city streets, displaying the latest in wedding apparel. The photos on this page show the June bestsellers from the Promptia line. They range in price from $50 to $500.

Last week these were the typical wedding expenses a Chicago factory foreman who earns $13,500 a year paid for his daughter's "big day":

The total came to $2891.25 or almost 25 percent of the poor guy's annual income. Was it worth it? Or would it have been more sensible and possibly more fun for the bride and groom to have bought a ladder at the hardware store and then eloped? Generally it depends on how long the marriage lasts. But is there any bride who on her wedding day doesn't expect her marriage to last "for-

"Do this," Christ said, "in remembrance of ME"

Sitting through Mass in a Catholic Church for the first time, people are often impressed by the ceremony and the quiet piety of the worshipers.

But they could scarcely feel, what Catholics believe, that the Son of God is truly present on the altar... that He is, in facz, acting as the high priest in a holy sacrifice in which He is also the victim.

"Jesus Christ," they may say to themselves, "made a complete and finished sacrifice when He died on the cross. Why do Catholics claim that our Lord's sacrifice, already consummated, is repeated again and again every day in Catholic Churches everywhere?"

No one believes more firmly than Catholics do, that Christ's sacrifice was finished and complete when He gave up His life on the cross. We agree that He died but once, and He is not nailed to the cross and crowned with thorns again and again. Yet the Catholic Mass is not a substitute....not a mere imitation ... but a true and holy re-enacrment of the sacrifice offered by Jesus Himself.

If this sounds confusing and hard to believe, think for a moment of the Last Supper. The crucifizion and the Mass are one and the tame sacrifice. At the Last Supper, our Lord offered Himself when He changed the bread and wine into His own Body and Blood, the price He would pay for the redemption of men's sins. Only a few short hours later, He was to repeat this sacrifice in the bloody consummation of the cross.

Jesus clearly indicated at the Last Supper that He wanted His sacrifice to be perpetuated...so that all future generations might have the same suitable gift to offer to Almighey God. So, having changed the bread and wine into His own Body and Blood, He said to the Apostles: "Do this in remembrance of ME." They were to repeat His sacrifice-and they did so. They said Mass and consecrated the bread and wine as our Lord had done ... and just as Catholic priests the world over have been doing for the nearly two thousand years since. This we call the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass ... this is the heart and core of our Catholic Faith.

FREE — if you would like to read the whole wondrous story of the Mass and its vast significance, write roday for our free pamphlet. State Poll Has Reagan Over Brown by 11 Pct.

Republican Ronald Reagan enjoys an 11% lead over Gov. Edmund G. Brown, according to The State Poll survey conducted less than two weeks after the primary election. In all of the other statewide races, the incumbents are running ahead of their challengers.

More than 1,200 representative Republicans and Democrats were interviewed last/week to ascertain how they intend to vote in the general election next November. The respondents were scientifically selected so that they formed a representative cross-section of the California electorate.

The outcome of the statewide sampling for Califor-

Don't know	15%	18%	11%	16%	15%

Reagan, fresh from his impressive primary victory over former San Francisco Mayor George Christopher, enjoys the support of almost one-quarter of the registered Democrats in addition to his solid Republican support. On the other hand, Brown is supported by only 58% of the Democrats, and a small minority (7%) of Re-

For the sake of comparison in the analysis for this survey The State Poll questioned the voters of California concerning the probable gubernatorial contest between Brown and Reagan on June 3 and 4, 1966, immediately prior to the primary election. The results of this heretofore unpublished survey are:

43% 46% 11% Don't know ... 15%

A review of the party breakdowns in previous State Polls indicates that Brown currently receives less Democratic support than has been the case in the past, However, the figures do not substantiate the supposition by many political analysts that the Democrats who voted for Brown's primary opponent, Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty, have bolted their party en mass to vote for Ronald Reagan.

Brown Jabs at Reagan

FRESNO (UPI)-Gov. Edmund G. Brown sharply attacked actor-politician Ronald Reagan Saturday as the two competed for the gubernatorial endorsement of the Mexican-American Political Association (MAPA).

Eight of the 12 major candidates for statewide office appeared before the organization in the first direct confrontation of nominees for the November election. Brown addressed a luncheon meeting of the group.

Pistol Sales in L.A. Soar

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Los Angeles area residents are now buying handguns at a rate more than twice that of last year, it was re-ported Saturday.

In 1965, the State Criminal Investigation and Iden-tification Bureau estimated handgun sales here were in "excess of 13,700." Sales took a big spurt after the August riots in Watts last year. Sales now run at a rate which would mean a total of 31,000 for 1966.

Al Ferrone, member of the Los Angeles Police Department robbery detail which processes sales of concealable weapons, said residents are "running scared.'

He blames continuing tensions spawned by spora-dic racial violence here and throughout the nation.

During the week of June 8-14. Ferrone said, sales of concealable weapons to-taled 635. Forty-four were purchased by persons with criminal records, he said.

Optimism Rises Over Viet Scene

By ANDREW BOROWIEC

SAIGON (A)-Optimism about the Viet Nam scene is evident among Saigon and American officials this weekend to a degree unparalleled in recent years.

There was a reflection of this in remarks by U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to newsmen Saturday at dedication of a Saigon dormitory for war orphans, built as a volunteer project by U.S. Army engineers.

"On the military side, the government is going particularly well," Lodge said, and has scored "a solid political victory in the recent situation here." The optimism is based on a series of factors. Among them:

SACRAMENTO - Students on trips don't get all their kicks on Route 66. Nor from LSD.

Legislative researchers, probing LSD-type drugs, have learned that college students recently uncovered a "Scotch Broom" plant which causes hallucinations comparable to the "trips' of outlawed LSD,

Some state officials are red-faced over the dis-"Scotch closure that Broom" is in the LSD class. It grows in abundance along California highway routes in mountains and foothills. And inadvertently, "Scotch Broom" was featured in the dominant scenic picture in the 1966 State Official Highway

In a pictorial scene witha forest of yellow Scotch Broom in the foreground and a winding highway in the background, the 1966 State Highway Map has a caption saying:

"Scotch Broom displays a spectacular burst of early spring color throughout the historic mining areas along State Route 49."

Actually, State Highway crews try to wipe out

Scotch Broom as a weed pest. But until the legislative investigation, no one apparently had bothered to tell them about its more sinister uses for drug "trips." In some ways, the

The newspaper, in a three-column front-page display of the picture, and an ac-companying story, described "sunlighted part" of the photo as the northern hemisphere from North America in the west to western Stberia in the east, and from the North Pole south to the Indian Ocean and the Sahara.

The picture caption said that "clouds cover about 80% of the surface."

The photographs were said to have been taken of the earth from outer space and sent by the Soviet Union to an astronomy magazine published in St. Louis. The pictures, the Post-Dispatch said, showed the earth as it appeared from 25,000 miles.

The newspaper said the photos were taken by a special television camera on the Soviet communications satellite Molniya 1 (light-ning) and transmitted to earth May 30.

Optimism Soaring Over Viet Situation

THE MACHINERY for holding a national election is gradually being put in motion. The election, scheduled Sept. 11, will name a constituent assembly which. in turn, is to draft a national constitution as a step toward the return of civilian rulė,

The Viet Cong failed to exploit the spring political turmoil to any great extent and drew no visible profit from the Buddhist dissidence in the northern provinces. One American offi-cial said: "We had braced for the worst and we are still stunned by the enemy's failure to cash in on that situation."

The massive presence of American servicemen --now about 271,000 strong - is clearly showing re-sults. Viet Cong movement of both troops and supplies has been seriously hampered by U.S. air and ground pressure.

In this atmosphere Vietnamese and American officials speak confidently of victory, although the Americans, taught by the lesson of premature optimism in the past, are careful not to speculate on a timetable.

Premier Ky himself has promised victory in 1967. Ky's advisers say they believe the war can gradually dwindle within a year to a police action. This might isolate die-hard Viet Cong in largely uninhabited jungle and mountain areas without hampering the na-tion's life as a whole. These officials admit, however, that such a police action might go on for years.

Both Americans and Viet-namese authorities are preoccupied with launching a reconstruction and social affairs program to sap Viet Cong influence.

It was the first visit by the South Vietnamese leader to Hue, 450 miles north of Salgon, since the anti-government crisis erupted last March.

"After three months of turmoil, I ask everybody to forgive each other and forget the misunderstandings of the past," Ky said in a plea for unity, appears to be at a slightly higher level than it was prior to the primary. But there is no discernible mass move-"ment of the Christopher voters away from Resgan at this time. Brown draws approximately the same percentage of Republican voters as he did in most of the State Polls prior to the primary.

The effect of this year's primary is not unlike the aftermath of the 1964 primary election. Plerre Salinger's unexpected victory over Alan Cranston for the United States Senate Democratic nomination gave him a lead in the early general election polls. This year Reagan de feated Christopher by a larger margin than policical observers expected. The notoriety he gleaned from his impressive victory might partially explain his increased DEMOCRATIC LT. GOV. Glenn M. Anderson currently leads Los Angeles attorney Robert Finch by a 17% margin. Anderson, unlike Brown in the gubernatorial contest, attracts almost three-fourths of the Democrats while surrendering only 13% of his party's support to Finch. At the same time, 19% of the Republicans cross party lines to vote for the incumbent.

Anderson emerged the victor in a tough primary fight over State Board of Education President Thomas Braden and United States Ambassador Lloyd Hand. However, the charges made by Anderson's opponents apparently had little effect upon Anderson's support within the Democratic Party.

The campaign for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor on the other hand was conspicuously a non-contest. On election day, Finch received 63% of the Republican vote. His nearest opponent, Riverside County Supervisor Norman Davis, received 17% of the vote. The lack of fireworks in Finch's primary should be considered when studying the current standings of the two candidates for the lieutenant governorship.

IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, Anderson's lead is less than half what it is in the northern portion of the state. Almost 50% of California's 7.8 million voters reside in three Southern California counties: Los Angeles; Orange, and San Diego. Southern California will be the battleground, not only in the Anderson-Finch contest, but also in all of the statewide races.

At this time Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan, the only Republican of the six statewide officeholders, is running ahead of Asst. United States Atty. Gen. Norbert Schlei by 13% of the total vote. However, the contest for secretary of state has one of the highest "don't know" factors encountered in the survey.

The results last week were: Dem. South North Tot. Jordan (R) 44% Schlei (D) 31% 24% 49% 34% 28% Don't know 25% 27%23% 21%

Jordan enjoys solid support among Republicans. He also attracts 24% of the Democratic vote. If it were not for Jordan's incumbency, Schlei would conceivably receive more Democratic support than is now the case. The impact of "slate voting" could affect Jordan's position in

AS THE INCUMBENT, Jordan will be listed on the ballot. Many Democrats inadvertently vote for all of the incumbents. In the last two elections, Jordan has been re-elected in the face of Democratic sweeps of the other statewide offices.

Assemblyman Houston Flournoy trails State Controller Alan Cranston by the largest margin of any of the races measured in the survey. More than three-fourths of the registered Democrats interviewed support Cranston. No other Democrat enjoys higher support within his own party. In addition, Cranston attracts the highest Republican vote of the Democratic incumbents.

Cranston's name has appeared six times on a statewide ballot. In contrast, Flournoy won a little publicized primary in his first statewide effort and lacks a statewide

IN THE CLOSEST contest for statewide office, Democratic State Treasurer Bert Betts leads former Treasurer of the United States Ivy Baker Priest, by a scant 7% of the total vote. The "don't know" factor-the highest encountered in the survey—is 27%.

Both Betts and Mrs. Priest were unopposed in the pri-

Although their names appeared on the ballot, neither extended much more than a token effort during the campaign. As a result, neither can be considered as well known by the California voter.

Because neither of the candidates became widely recognized as a result of the absence of a primary campaign, the Democratic preponderance in registration exerts itself in the race for state treasurer. Both candidates enjoy approximately the same amount of support within their own party, and both draw from the opposing party by the same percentage of the registration.

As the campaign evolves, the state roll will periodically survey the electorate to ascertain the progress of the candidates, and specifically to observe voter trends.

Monday the State Poll will report its finding concern-

Duty-Free Liquor Goal for Border

The first assembly of 10 U.S. and Mexican states ending a three-day meeting here Satur-day called for more discussions of new federal duty-free liquor controls.

bombshell resolution aimed at eventual halting of federal restrictions on the sale of liquor across the U.S.-Mexico border was introduced Saturday by Martinez Cadelegate of Sonora, Mexico.

The resolution said federal restrictions on the amount of liquor that can be brought across the border were damaging the entire economic structure of the border states. The amount had been one gallon of liquor per person until reduced last year by the 89th Congress to one quart.

Martinez said "the sale of liquor along the border represents the purchasing power of our people. It has not only affected liquor sales but hotels and restaurants in border cities."

Mexican and U.S. delegates registered at opening ceremonies Thursday.

THE ASSEMBLY ALSO called on a more uniform imposition of U.S. state taxes on Mexican products. It said excessive examination of groceries taken back over the border to Mexico from the United States should be cur-

NOVOSIBIRSK, USSR (UPI)-President Charles de Gaulle toured Russia's supersecret space center in central Asia Saturday and became the first known foreigner to witness a Soviet satellite launching.

His Communist hosts arranged the spectacular blastoff of a Cosmos earth satellite as a possible prelude to joint French-Soviet space shots. De Gaulle pledged France to an agreement of cooperation with Russia in the space field during talks in Mos-cow earlier last week. The two nations already have a pact to cooperate in space communications. Russian Volniya l sputniks have made live broadcasts from Moscow to Paris.

It was the 122nd in the data-gathering Cosmos series. De Gaulle's visit to the Zvezdograd "City of Stars was an DE GAULLE unprecedented deviation from Soviet security rules which previously barred all outside eyes from the Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin flew south from Moscow to join De Gaulle who interrupted his 5,000mile flying tour of the Soviet Union to spend nearly 10 hours at the Zvezdograd installation—a complex of rocket sites, dormitories, hangars, shops and control bunkers located in an isolated region near Bkonur in the Central Asian state of Kuzakhstan.

Ship Blast

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) An explosion ripped the U.S. Navy minesweeper Stalwart at its mooring in San Juan harbor Saturday but none of the 61 crewman aboard was injured. The ship capsized and hurned and one Navv fireman was hurt fighting the blaze.

"It was miraculous nobody else was injured," a spokesman at the San Juan Navy base said. The injured fireman was overcome by smoke.

The Stalwart, a wood-en-hulled vessel, is normally based at Charleston, S.C., and was in the Caribbean on maneuvers.

Navy spokesmen said the cause of the fire was undetermined although it was believed to have broken out in the boiler

Vatican Pact

BELGRADE (UPI) -The Vatican healed a rupture of 14 years standing Saturday and signed an agreement reestablishing diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia, The Communist nation pledged freedom of worship and recognized the Holy See's limited authority over Yugoslav Catholics in religious matters.

In return, the church agreed not to interfere in Yugoslav political affairs and to confine activities of its priests "within religious and church frameworks."

The important accord healed a rift opened in 1952 when the government of President Tito broke, off diplomatic relations with the Vatican because Pope Pius XII elevated the late Alois Stepinac to the rank of cardinal while he was in jail serving a 16-year sentence for alleged collaboration with the Nazis.

Harney said some of the teen-agers who broke through police guards, trampled spectators and beat on the Rolling Stones' cars with two-byfours "weren't any worse or better than the spectators at a football game." In spite of the three arrests for drunkenness, the police official said, there was "actually very little sign of drinking. Here we usually get an older, more raucous crowd,"

Mumps Vaccine CHICAGO (UPI) -

Mumps, long tolerated as virtually inescapable childhood disease, may be wiped out by a newly developed vaccine, a medical researcher said Saturday.

Dr. Maurice R. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Saturday the United States should welcome a move to ward neutralization of Southeast Asla if it develops from French President Charles de Gaulle's Moscow talks.

Senate Democratic leader said in an interview it seems obvious to him that De Faulle has discussed with Soviet leaders "ways and means of how the conflict in Viet lam can be terminated."

Mansfield did not go far as to predict De Gaulle will offer some concrete proposal but made clear he hopes the French leader will do so.

"IF ANY move materializes as a result of these talks," he said, "I assume it will be on the basis of De Gaulle's stated policy for the neutralization of all of Southeast Asia.

"I for one, think that is a sound doctrine and good polcy, provided there can be guaranteed neutralization with withdrawal of all foreign troops from the area."

He said the guarantee would have to be in the form of big-nation pledges to en-force neutrality in the area.

Mansfield thus sided with Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Ful bright has argued that the ad-ministration's policy of containment of China won't work and that neutralization of the whole area is the answer to the problem of Viet Nam.

MANSFIELD said that despite his criticism of American policies, De Gaulle seems to be interested in trying to get negotiations started. He noted that the French president had dispatched a trusted subordinate to Pcking and Hanoi before leaving for Moscow.

"De Gaulle's fingers seem to be reaching out in many directions," Mansfield said, and among the matters to be considered in his talks with the Russians Viet Nam is not

by De Gaulle Highly Unusual: Pullout Stirs Castro Is Silent Dominicans

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Whether or not Premier Fidel Castro turns up again at the helm of the Cuban government, U.S. officials believe he faces major difficulties.

More than a week ago, on June 16, the State Department publicly noted that Castro had not been "in the foreground of events" in his own country since his last major speech May 1.

The lack of response from Cuba to the department's taunting statement has heightened the mystery about Castro's status.

The only reaction so far noted here was a brief commentary on Radio Havana. June 19. It called the State Department's remarks "absolutely absurd." It said Castro had been "seen by everyone" at a June 4 public meeting in Havana launching training for reserve troops.

U.S. officials were well aware that Castro attended the June 4 meeting. But they wondered why he sat silently on the platform while President Osvaldo Dorticos made a major policy speech and why Castro had not been seen in any prominent role in Cuba recently. "Cuba-watchers" have noted that in the six weeks following May 1, Castro was less frequently mentioned in the Cuban press than during the six weeks before May 1.

FIDEL CASTRO

The Cuban sugar crop is expected to be less than 4.5 million tons this year, compared with 6.1 million tons last year. This year's goal had been 6.5 million tons.

Castro is believed to be a cool $1-billion in debt to Communist countries for past economic aid and past trade deficits. He is probably running a $90-million trade deficit with the Soviet Union this year.

The need to maintain high exports to Communist countries has created shortages in the Cuban domestic economy, Refugees coming out of Cuba still tell of food rationing and long waits in line even for rationed foods. They report shortages of such basic foods as rice.

There has been an increase in police state methods, evidenced by a recent widespread purge of government employes, most of them accused of too much suft living.

Peace Talks MEANS SOMETHING Peace Force

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (A)—The imminent withdrawal of the Inter-American Peace Force from his troubled land has aroused both fear and hope among Doninicans.

The Organization of Amerian States (OAS) voted without dissent in Washington Friday night to withdraw the remaining 8,000-man peace force, and there were reports the first U.S. contingent would lepart next week. There are 6,800 U.S. soldiers here and 1,200 men from other Latin-American countries, mostly Brazil.

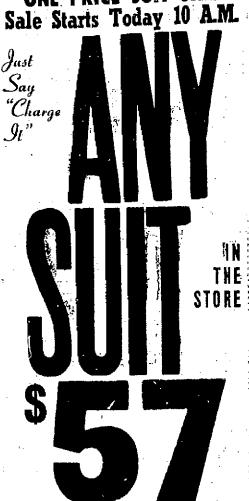

President-elect Joaquin Balaguer will be inaugurated July and the Dominican Republic has asked that the withdrawal start before then.

THE DECISION to pull out the peace force has rekindled speculation over what might nave happened if American troops had not landed April 28, 1965, one of the most critical days in the political storm that erupted four days earlier.

Many Dominicans argue that U.S. intervention was illegal and violated sacred prin ciples in the charter of the OAS, specifically that refering to nonintervention in the domestic affairs of member

But except for the small fringe of violently anti-U.S. nationalists and their political stepbrothers, the left-wing exremists, most Dominicans seem to agree the action was necessary to prevent a chaotic bloodbath of unknown proportions and indeterminate consequences.

THE NATIONALISTS exress belief the constitutionalist forces would have quickly triumphed if the Americans and not arrived and democratic rule would have been as wiftly restored with a lot less expense and effort on the part of the United States and the

MIAMI BEACH (A)-Members of the nation's largest educational organization gathered here today with teacher militancy and complex civil rights problems likely to be the leading issues of a week-

"Teachers today are unwilling to accept things the way they are," said William G. Carr, executive secretary of the National Education Association, in a pre-convention interview.

While teacher strikes and collective bargaining disputes are part of this new picture, Carr said "there is a deeper kind of militancy that is not economic. It is a desire to be recognized, to have status, not to be pushed around."

"IT IS ALL RIGHT for them to be militant, but I hope they will be militant about the right things," Carr said, "I hope teachers recognize that militancy carries with it a measure of responsibility."
The NEA includes both teachers and school administrators in its membership of nearly a million. About 10,000 members are here for the group's 104th annual meeting.

John W. Gardner, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, addresses the first general session Monday, pointing up another comparatively new factor in education—the government's in a ssive involve-

Desegregation, Northern and Southern, remains one of the knottiest problems of the schools, but Carr said civil rights is not an issue in the NEA itself except for one area that "persists to plague us."

"THE NEA has always been open to anyone," Carr said,
"We were one of the first large organizations not to pick any city for a meeting without identical facilities for all our members. We integrated Miami Beach in 1953,"

But in 1951, Carr said, the NEA began to take on as affillates the separate Negro teacher organizations that existed in the Southern states. This was regarded then as "a sound," liberal policy," Carr

Opinion later shifted and in 1964 the group adopted a resolution calling for abolition of all racial barriers in state affiliates and complete merger of Negro and white teacher associations, July 1 is the deadline, the day this convention

While the membership barriers have been removed in the state organizations, Carr said "the merger plans have not been forthcoming" in some Southern states.

CARR SAID he didn't ex pect the use of federal funds in local schools to arouse much discussion this, year. That is an issue of the past.

But he said "there will be a lot of discusion of teaching the culturally handicapped. After all, the federal funds are aimed at helping deprived children."

He recalled that 10 years ago the theme of the NEA meeting was "proud to teach, and now it is "free to teach."

"We take it for granted now that people are proud to teach," he said.

"But to be free to teach—to have the equipment, respect and enough time to do a bit of reading, to keep up with the subject-to be free in this sense is now what teachers

By WEBSTER K. NOLAN

OAKLAND (UPI)---An anguished mother sat in her apartment waiting and hoping for some word from her son-a young man who walked out of a bank two years ago carrying a small fortune in a brown shopping bag.

"You know," said Mrs. Sophic Lajeunesse, "we were thinking of moving, But I can't. Who knows—maybe he might walk in the door some night."

The son, Theodore Nelson, who was employed as a messenger for the Oakland Bank of Commerce, has eluded police and the FBI successfully since the morning of June 23, 1964.

On that day, authorities said, the curly-haired 20-year-old messenger put $187,440 in small denominations in a shopping bag, exchanged a joke with a guard and casually sauntered out of the building.

ON ONE OCCASION the FBI came within 48 hours of catching Nelson. That was in the summer of 1964 when it was learned that the baby-faced young man was living in an apartment near Santa

It was a pleasant interlude for Nelson, who had changed his name to Dennis Portoian. He had made friends with several students at the local University of California campus. He treated them to expensive dinners and tipped waiters lavishly. He bought jewelry for the girls he dated.

At times he would rent a chauffeur-driven limousine. He also occasionally rented a bike and pedaled down to the beach for a day of sunshine.

The FBI traced the youth but when agents arrived at his apartment they discovered he had left two days before, after telling his friends he was unsure where he was going—persaps to Hollywood, he said, maybe to Spain.

If, since then, there have been any clues to his whereabouts, authorities have kept them a secret.

IMMEDIATELY following the theft, the young man lived in an apartment he had previously rented near the Berkeley campus of the University of California. He used the alias of Dr. Warren Campling and told the landlord he was doing research work at the school.

A few weeks later, he moved to Santa Barbara. He also took an apartment in Hollywood and traveled between the two residences by bus. During the interval, he had dyed his dark hair red, grown a beard and lost 20 of his 165 pounds.

His distressed mother is almost convinced he is mentally ill. "He probably doesn't even know hes' Ted Nelson," she said.

"Maybe he thinks I don't care for him any more. But I haven't lost my love for him. It doesn't make any difference what happens so long as he

The Water of Act

THE OTHER day, in a sort of offhand way, I asked people who have vacations on schedule this summer to let me know by postcard if they're going back to an old home or, if not, to what other place they plan to travel for a holiday,

Returns have been coming in on this rather loose poll. I hope to get a lot more but the first sampling is enlight-ening. It shows that among those who have taken trouble to answer, a majority are going on a sentimental journey back to an old home, It may change, but that's how things stand now.

The way to do it is to write YES if you're going to any place of former residence, NO if you're not and in either case, if you wish, indicate your vacation area or spot. (This might even help some people make up their minds.) Send card to Beach Combing Vacation Poll, IPT.

Policemen Don't Hunt Trouble

POLICE BRUTALITY has become a sort of catch-word, a rallying cry among certain elements of our society.

And few will deny, including police, that an occasional officer has used more force than later scemed to have been required.

But there is another side to brutality - civilian brutality.

The boundary between savagery and civilization is easily crossed and it rests upon the ability of men to satisfy their needs without damaging other people, Religion, education, custom, manners set out the general guidelines for civilization.

Specific legal guidelines are set forth in law and are enforced by policemen. These officers thus become society's front-line troops in defending peaceable citizens from the savagery of mankind.

POLICEMEN, by the very nature of their work, deal constantly with the raw edges of society, with the ill-mannered, the misfits, the vicious and the thoughtless.

These peace officers are human beings - on the whole quite idealistic human beings - and they get their bellies full of trouble. They don't seek trouble. It seeks them. Officers don't walk up to peaceful, law-abiding citizens and push them around. Officers don't enter quiet

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO - The shadow of controversial Proposition 14 already hangs over the 1967 legislature.

It was in 1964 that California voters overwhelmingly approved Proposition 14. They thus amended the state constitution to provide that no law may be enacted which restricts the right of property owners to sell or rent, Opponents called it a racial-discrimination amendment.

California Supreme Court subsequently ruled Proposition 14 unconstitutional. And if the federal supreme court agrees, the issue of fair-housing vs. property rights again will be before lawmakers.

A TIPOFF on the future: California Real Estate Association has asked the 240 nominees for the legislature to say whether they would support repeal of the Rumford Fair Housing Act in 1967.

The Rumford legislation was the prime target of Proposition 14. Enthusiasm 'All-Out' at Long Beach's Ann Bowler, GOP national committeewoman, presented a bouquet to Mrs. Reagan "on behalf of millions and millions of California grass roots workers as the first lady of California."

Nixon endorsed the tribute by saluting "Governor Reagon." TV personality Art Linkletter, master of ceremonies, affirmed that Republi-cans here are 100% behind Lady Bird's campaign to beautify America: "They want to put handsome Ronald Reagan in the governor's chair in

Linkletter got a laugh asking if Sen. Tom Kuchel were in the audience, then speculating that he may have made a wrong turn on the freeway and ended up speaking in South Dakota. Kuchel's course with regard to Reagan's run is still an unknown

However, Senator Murphy reported that Kuchel had undergone dental surgery that day and so was unable to attend, Murphy said Kuchel enthusiastically looked forward to getting Republican victory not only in California but across the nation.

REAGAN, in his introduction speech for Nixon, said the state GOP holds "the power and the responsibility not for just tory, but our task is to raise a standard to which wise and honest men can repair.' Nixon said that through 20 years of speaking in all 50 states, "this is without question one of the greatest political gatherings I've ever been privileged to address." President Johnson's "political slip is beginning to show," said Nixon, and what's more, "I don't think he comes over too good on TV. Come to think of it, I don't think Brown comes over too good on TV either - but that Ronnie Reagan, wow!" Johnson had it all his own way in 1964, said Nixon - conservatives thought he was conservative, liberals thought he was liberal and the rest didn't know. In 1966, conservatives think he's liberal, liberals think he's conservative and the rest still don't

Nixon said he had the word from a Texas conservative: "Anybody who believes LBJ is a conservative would believe Richard Burton married for money!"

ON THE SERIOUS SIDE, Nixon got his biggest applause while discussing the Viet Nam war and remarking that this is the first foreign war in which the U.S. has got no support from its European allies, "We are alone - the loneliest nation in Nixon proposed that any nation trading with the enemy should get no foreign aid from the U.S. It it's a nation not getting our aid, that nation would be denied rights to trade in U.S. ports. The applause boomed.

key emotional issues, they are likely to be dumped from office.

So be they bigots or liberals, you can look for growing legislative sup-port for repealing the Rumford Fair Housing Act. The reason: the tremendous margin racked up by Proposition 14 and the political heat that still is generated by its supporters.

Seldom does a professional politician have an opportunity to take the temperature of his voters on a breadand-butter issue. Polls are half-hearted attempts at this goal. But they represent only a small sample and always are subject to some question,

No politician can disregard the strong expression of the electorate without some political risk. On a key emotional issue such as racial discrimination versus property rights, the elective official has little choice. That is one reason why a number of lawmakers who last time supported the Rumford Fair Housing Act are prepared next time either to repeal it or to revamp it drastically.

Both Assemblymen Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, and Joe A. Gon-salves, D-Norwalk, have indicated new positions on the subject,

IN KENNICK'S 44th Assembly District, Proposition 14 carried 79,825 to 21.951. The margin was even greater in territory to the north which includes a new Senate district where Kennick is the Democratic nominee. In the Gonsalves 66th Assembly District, the margin on Proposition 14 was 57,000 to 15,000.

Both Kennick and Gonsalves voted for the Rumford Fair Housing Act

when it was enacted in 1963. It took considerable political courage for them to acknowledge a 1963 mistake by proclaiming a new position in 1966.

The real estate association has been subject to considerable scorn by some state legislators. They resent being blackjacked into a firm legislative position seven months before the 1967 session convenes.

Some are refusing to answer the association's query. Others still are championing the Rumford Fair Hous-

BUT IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS, no position ever remains unalterably firm, And no legislator ever should be condemned for trying to represent the will of his constituents.

Sometimes the best act of statesmanship is to represent one's voters. A legislator can lead only so far, Kennick and Gonsalves analyze that their voters have spoken loudly and clearly in Proposition 14.

They intend to heed the call,

German Unification Proposed, but World Attitude Seems to Be 'Nein'

WASHINGTON - The majority leader of the German Bundestag, Dr. Rainer Barzel, was in town recently and had some interesting suggestions on what he thought might be done about divided Germany. The energetic Barzel, whose star is said to be still rising in the West German political firmament, suggested in essense that Germany might be reunited with Soviet troops still ensconced on German soil "within the framework of a European security system." Under Barzel's proposal (which both he and the West Germany government were quick to characterize "personal"), the two Germanies would become one under a common government. Russia would be brought into something like NATO or its equivalent and would have the right to maintain troops in the reunited coun-

Moscow's immediate reaction to Barzel's suggestion was, as might have been expected, negative. While officially the Russians ignored the speech, the Russian press did let loose a blast or two against the idea. This does not mean that the Russians might not change their minds at some point and allow discussion of the scheme, but for the moment the idea is simply a glint in the eye of Herr Barzel.

THE GLINT AND THE IDEA are there because Herr Barzel is on the political make. He has risen rapidly in the ranks of the Christian Democratic party and those who know him say he is evelng fondly eventual residence in the West German chancellor's chair.

A good sound German political ploy is to talk about reunification. Germany has now been divided for over 20 years, a fact which bitterly rankles the breasts of people on both sides of the unnatural border. The political aspirations of most Germans are to have their country one again and any politician who holds out some hope of achieving that goal is bound to be listened to attentively by the German people.

Germany divided. The United States and other countries in the West pay lip service to reunification, but the matter is not very close to their hearts. Occasionally when a Berlin crisis is heated up, there is wonderment whether things wouldn't be better if Germany were unified, but when no crisis is at hand the general attitude is that perhaps things are better the way they are and that the world is safer for having Germany split in two. Certainly the Russians never have expressed any desire for a reunited Germany. They have been adamant ever since World War II that they would not tolerate a united Germany. They feel that their own self-interests are imperiled if the Germans form one country and their basic foreign policy has during the last two decades been to keep Germany split.

OTHER COUNTRIES in the Eastern Bloc feel similarly. The Poles and the Czechs and the Yugoslavs bear no love for the Germans and the prospect. of a United Germany is for them a nightmare. A united Germany has in the past oppressed them all and in this case their memories are indeed very long.

Whether Germany can forever be kept split is moot. Russia, however, has tried its best to establish the permanency of the division. It has carefully integrated East Germany's economy into that of Russia and has turned it away from the West, It keeps a careful eye on those who are in power in East Germany and makes sure its own hand-chosen people retain the reins of government. It reinforces these

But it is a confusing decision because it apparently does not apply if the property has assisted"-which can mean FHA, Veteran or loans from banks or saving and loan associations where deposits are insured by the federal government.

* * * THIS IS ALL confusing. But legislation now before Congress would be more restrictive than even the Rumford Act. It is HR 14765 and Senate 3296. In his State of the Union address the President specifically called for a new civil rights bill for legislation "resting on the fullest authority of the federal government to prohibit racial discrimination in the sale or rental of housing."

It is far more far-reaching than the Rumford Act and its "public assisted" requirements. Under the federal bill it would be assumed that any building that had any material in it which crossed a state line would come under the interstate commerce laws. It might be a nail, part of the plumbing or electrical equipment. It could mean every building ever erected in this

It is now being debated in Congress. There is strong opposition to this section of the bill. But, unless the property owners let their congressmen and senators know their views, it may pass. If the person who claimed discrimination was unable to employ an attorney the government would supply one. But the property owner would have no such benefit.

It is rougher than many an infantry battle.

During World War II the Navy called for volunteers to fight a mountain fire, Many of the students in the yeoman class, eager for any escape from those dang typewriters, answered the challenge. They turned us out at I a.m., gave us a bit of breakfast, two K-rations each and loaded us into trucks. I never knew where we went, but it was somewhere above the Los Angeles Basin. As we gained altitude the night turned cold. We huddled together for warmth, but that didn't help. We shivered and our teeth chattered. No one slept in that truck.

AT DAWN we reached the end of the road. The fire was above us, fairly close to the crest of a mountain covered with brush and a little timber. The sailors, 200 or so, marched in a column of ones along a trail, looking rather out of place in the wilderness. There were hundreds of civilian volunteers, as many as could be mustered in wartime.

For many of the yeomen it was the hardest physical day of their lives. Although we were strong young men who took calisthenics daily, our hands were office soft and our muscles not hard enough for the job.

When we came close to the fire, which formed a long line across the face of the mountain, we were issued picks, shovels and axes, A ranger showed us what to do. We were to chop down brush and dig ditches in the hope of stopping the blaze, We worked. We worked, My fellow yeomen seemed to have some furious need to prove that they were as tough as other sailors and the civilians. Rangers and Navy chiefs strode from group to group urging greater efforts. There was so little lime to stop the fire. Sweat rained from us and our canteens were soon empty, More water was brought, During our brief, infrequent rests we nibbled at K-rations.

By noon the temperature was above 100, but we kept working. Our hands blistered and bled, but we went

WE MARCHED AWAY in a single column. Had we done any good? I never knew. A tall tree close to where we had labored burst into flames like some monstrous fireworks display.

We were driven to a rough firefighters camp in a forest. After the usual wait in line we were served steak and eggs. We sat on the ground and ate, swearing it was the best food we ever had tasted,

Then we huddled in the truck, numb with fatigue but sleepless because of the cold. We were permitted to sack in the next day, Our muscles ached for several days.

Congressman Wright of Texas has had 20 years experience with water problems across the United States; he is a ranking member of the House Public Works Committee and has been actively involved with all federal legislation on water. His is not a mere academic discussion of the problem.

He tells of the disappearing prime water supplies, in the Great Lakes, for example, and the crippling effect on that area's industries. The heedless dumping of factory wastes into the rivers and streams—the most dramatic example cited is the Hudson-which can no longer cleanse themselves, he sees as a major crime. To Rep. Mystery Envelopes Figure in Dodd Case that mysterious double - scaled envelupes were sent Sen. Dodd by Gen. Julius Klein.

Ordinary letters from Klein, including those marked personal and confidential, came by regular mail. In addition, Klein sent by a special messenger envelopes especially sealed with Scotch tape. Inside were other scaled envelopes. No one around Dodd's office ever got an explanation from the senator as to what these double envelopes contained.

During the closed-door Dodd hearings, John F. Sonnett, the Wall Street attorney now representing Dodd, became so uncluous in referring to stolen documents that Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., stopped him. Cooper moved that the words "stolen documents" be stricken from the record. Chairman Stennis, D-Miss., sustained him. No less than four senators rebuked Sonnet for his repetitious and long winded cross-examination during the closed-door hearings,

SEN, DODD'S ATTORNEYS have been claiming that the senator never delivered the speeches written for him by Klein. It is true that one speech, which we reported had been written for Dodd in August, 1959, was never delivered on the Senate fluor.

The senator explained to Klein in a letter Sept. 17, 1955; "While I did not have occasion to make such a speech on the floor of the Senate during the last crowded days of the session, I did make use of this material in a congratulatory message I sent on Adenauer's (then West German Chancellor) 10th anniversary.

Two years later, Dodd claimed he made a speech which his aides now claim he didn't make. On Sept. 18, 1981, he wrote to Klein: "I am sorry I couldn't reach you late Friday as I made my statement on the floor of the Senate, as I assume you know by now. Here is a marked copy of the Congressional Record."

The senator made at least a half dozen other speeches for Klein, including one on Sept. 25, 1962, praising Klein as a man "known on both sides of the aisle as a dedicated American In 1959, Klein even arranged with

"Wayne," he said, "my ox is in the ditch, and I want you to help me get it out. I am appointing you as head of the mediation panel to prevent a strike on the airlines, I just wanted you to know it before you read it in the newspapers.

"You settled the railroad strike and the longshoremen's strike and the steel strike," the President recalled. "Now I want you to help me out with the airlines."

"Wayne replied," said the President, "that he hadn't settled those strikes and that people wouldn't understand it because of our differences over Viet Nam. But I told him, 'I know you wanted Goldwater or Kennedy to be President because neither one is as smart as me. If they were President, I wouldn't be calling on you to

The senator from Oregon chuckled as the President told the story to other senators, and then he added a concluding bit.

"THE PRESIDENT asked me how my cattle were. 'Fine,' I said, 'and some morning if you get up early enough, I'll slip down to the White House and drive you out to Maryland and show you cattle the like of which you've never seen in Texas.'

" 'We'll do that some morning when the weather is warm and the flowers are out,' the President told me."

HIS LEGACY TO SWIMMERS: CAUTION Dutch Miller to Retire 🤚 as City Chief Lifequard

The beach means many

To an artist the beach means painting seaguils. To a child it means building sand castles. To a boy it means watching girls.

But to a lifeguard it means hauling people out of the water, shouting at them to stay near the shore and warning them to keep away from the Lifeguards really don't like to haul, warn and shout, but with nearly 5 million Long Beach swimmers challenging the Pacific each summer they have no choice. And it's a good thing. Last year Long Beach lifeguards rescued 1,500 swimmers who made the trip out but couldn't make it back.

ROY (DUTCH) Miller, who has patroled the shores of Long Beach as a lifeguard since 1918,

says:
"There is no single age group or sex that gets into trouble in the water. The ones who do foolish things are the ones who forget they are in the ocean instead of in a pool where they can hang on to the sides when they get tired."

As chief lifeguard, the 64 - year - old Miller says that watching "pool swimmers try out the ocean" makes up most of the lifèguard's work. "Our boys spend their time watching people go into the water up to different depths to see how

Beach shoreline in the 1930s, Miller comments, the lifeguards had an easier time watching bathers. "People were afraid of the big surf and only the good swimmers would challenge it. water became so calm that a lot more people began swimming. The lifeguard's job became tougher." Although Miller doesn't say much about himself, those who knew him in pre-breakwater days say no one was better at making a rescue in heavy surf.

BUT NOT all of the problems a lifeguard has to handle are in the water. They also have to keep the shore safe. One acquaintance tells of the time Miller spotted a group of young men roaming around the beach looking for trouble.

Councilmen also referred the proposal to their Ordinance Committee, which is expected to defer its study until after the planners report.

Chairman Virgil H. Spongberg of the Economic Development Committee said the new classification should encourage high-quality apartment, motel and hotel developments, along with sula High School.

A King Seeks Crown at Wimbledon

'Best Tennis of Life'

fending champion Roy Embrilliantly overpowered Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., and Billie Jean Moffitt King of Alhambra, Calif., rallied from behind win in fourth round matches Saturday in the rain-shortened Wimbledon tennis championships.

The rain, which has marred the tourney from its beginning, cut play short and left several matches including the fourth-round encounter between Cliff Richey of Dallas and second-seeded Tony Roche of Australia — to be resched-

Dennis Ralston, who has already made the quarterfinals, and Richey are the last. U. S. players left in the men's singles. Two U.S. women were beaten Saturday-Mimi Arnold of San-Barbara, Calif., and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, Nancy Richey, Cliff's sister and the fourth seed, led Kathleen Harter of Seal Beach, Calif., 6-2, 2-0 when the rains came.

Smith, former U.S. junior champion, played well enough to be satisfied with his game, but Emerson was great and won 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. The Australian, seeking his third successive Wimbledon title, said he played as well against Smith as he had ever played against any-

Many of Smith's best shots-and they were good ones - were turned into points for Emerson, whose booming smashes fairly

Smith's only chance was to roar his first service deep into the corners and hope the Aussie would return short or overhit. But when that first service did boomed the second and continually caught Smith out of position with smashes up the line or delicately placed angling crosscourt returns.

"I played some of the best tennis of my life out there," Smith said sadly, "and it was all thrown back at me.

"This was my best form of the tournament," Emerson said. "I think I'm play-ing just as well now as I ever have. I didn't make any mistakes."

Mrs. King used her wiles. to defeat Karen Krantzcke, the 19-year-old Australian junior titlist, 9-7, 6-2. The 6-foot-2 Aussie was murdering the 5-foot-5 Californian with her blazing forehand. Miss Krantzcke jumped

Emerson Wins With Barry Billie Jean Already Gallery's Champion

What spunky Billie Jean Moffitt King does to the sophisticated game of tennis

No doubt some of tennis' high and mighty frown at her court antics, but not Billie Jean gives tennis something it too often lacks—spark!

It may surprise tennis officials, but tennis fans, like other sports followers, like personalities. Billie Jean Moffitt King is a personality. She is, in fact, a riot. Billie Jean talks to herself, the ball boys, the line judges, the fans, just anyone who happens to be within shouting dis-"C'mon, Billie Jean! . . . Why, or why, Billie? . . . Miss a shot like that, why? . . . Fudge! . . . What a shot! . . . Nice going, Billie. . . . Get your first serve in!" . . . and on and on it goes.

Billie doesn't hesitate letting a line

judge know her disapproval of a call.

"Are you kidding?" she yelled at one judge during the Southern California Championships, "Boy, oh boy, did you miss that one!"

"I won't complain about a close shot that a judge calls against me," she says,

"but if it's that poor a call I'll say something. Once in awhile I say more than just something, too."

B.J. has been flirting with the Wimbledon championship for several years and there are some who will tell you this could be the year for the little dynamo from Long Beach, recently moved to Alhambra. "For the first time in my career." she said, "I have no big weakness, I used to have only a strong net game, but now my ground strokes are much better and so is my forehand return of service. They give me much more confidence."

Now she's ready to win Wimbledon, the big classic. Wimbledon is the one goal of every tennis player," says Billie, "It's the livin' end in tennis."

Australia's Margaret Smith, world's top-ranked player and defending champion at Wimbledon, and Maria Bueno, three-time Wimbledon champion, are the Wimbledon favorites. However, Billie Jean once again is the favorite with the huge Wimbledon galleries.

One must admit a Wimbledon championship for Billie Jean would be most appropriate. A crown for a King.

ON THE court, Billie Jean Moffitt King is one of most vibrant players in tennis. She talks to herself, fans, judges-and it makes her favorite everywhere.

Big Stakes for Hockey Franchise

If you can't play poker with millionaires, it still costs nothing to kibitz.

we'll be looking over the shoulders of Dan Reeves and Jack Kent Cooke for the next few months as they play their cards to a showdown for Los Angeles' fran-Chise in the expanding National Hockey League.
Right now Cooke has the deal, but Reeves' Blades.

expected to cash in their chips and fold, have refused to he bluffed out.

"It's our understanding that the NHL is giving Cooke until Sept. 15 to start building his arena," says Jack Geyer, executive director of the Blades, Where did they get that idea?

"We got it from people we feel should know," Geyer

Of course, Cooke is weary of insisting he was bluffing about building his own arena just to get a better deal at the L.A. Sports Arena, which now has thrown in with the

"I don't know how many different ways I can say it." Cooke grimaces, "but I told the NHL I'm going to build an arena and have never deviated from that resolve."

Also, NHL president Clarence Campbell denied in another newspaper last week that there was a deadline. But it would be embarrassing to admit that the league had so little confidence in one of its new members that it had to issue franchises with strings attached, Campbell tried to give the Blades back their $10,000 ante that it cost to apply for a franchise. They sent it right back to him, noting that because of the condition imposed upon Cooke to build his arena they feel their application is good until he does.

So what if he doesn't? The Toronto Globe and Mail quoted Campbell in reply to that very question recently: "It (Cooke's franchise) would then be in default."

Then Campbell was further quoted:

"All I can say is that the NHL definitely will have a franchise in Los Angeles in 1967-68 and I think Cooke will operate it. But we aren't going to hold up the other five clubs if he isn't ready."

What, then, would the NHL do? "It would take only 90 days to change ownership

(of the new franchise)," Campbell replied,
... However, it seems most likely that Cooke will get his arena going before Sept. 15, regardless of deadlines, and the Blades will have to haul the NFL into court to pursue their claims of territorial rights-their ace in

Some say the stakes are too high for both Reeves and Cooke.

They say that Reeves already is too far in hock with the Rams to duel anybody in a battle of bank accounts. They even say that all Reeves hopes to wind up with is a fat settlement for fading away.

Whether such gossip is true is no longer pertinent because Reeves has cut in other financial resources in Clarence Martin, a Cadillac dealer and real estate tyccon, and film producer Tony Owen. So then they say that Cooke is having trouble arranging financing for his arena, that he doesn't want to extend his personal fortune that far, But only a fool would bid for a prize he couldn't afford to keep, and Cooke is nobody's fool. It will be interesting to watch. Reeves has an ace in the hole . . . and Cooke has the Kings.

BILLIE JEAN Moffitt King is as determined as she looks.

Her ambition is to win at Wimbledon, which she calls

"the livin' end in tennis."

IT LOOKED MORE LIKE a convention than a play at first base when Jim Northrup of Detroit hit dribbler Saturday. Dodgers Suffer Dark Day, Night

By GEORGE LEDERER

ATLANTA-The lights in Atlanta Stadium failed briefly in the ninth inning Saturday night, but for the Dodgers it was a dark day from beginning to end.

The world champions lost a day-night doubleheader to the Braves, 5-4 and 4-3.

It was not a total power failure for the Dodgers because they matched the Braves' three home runs. It was, however, pitch-black. Don Drysdale, now 4-10, absorbed his sixth consecutive loss in the night game, won by Tony Cloninger (8-7). Rookie Don Sutton (7-7) took his third loss in a row in the day game, while 33-year-old Ken Johnson knuckled down to his sixth win in 11 decisions.

In describing this one, Drysdale always will be able to say, "That's the way the ball bounces."

Aaron started the inning with a single off Jim Le-febvre's glove at third. After a force out, Carty's third hit and Torre's second make it 2-0 and brought Alston to the mound, Drysdale was allowed to continue and retired Denis Menke, then left after hit-ting Woody Woodward with a pitch, filling the bases.

Cloninger was given a I-0 edge in the first inning on singles by Mathews, Aaron and Carty.

Cloninger was to take the worst part of the bounce on Lefebyre's single in the seventh. Lefebvre's hit sent Tommy Davis to third and Cloninger to the dugout for a quick examination and massage.

Bragan decided to let Cloninger continue and John Roseboro made the most of the opportunity. He drove a 400-foot home run off the back wall in right-center bringing the Dodgers into a challenging position at 4-3. It was Roseboro's fourth of the

Remembrances of Wimbledon

"Playing at Wimbledon is one of the most satisfying and exhibitanting experiences a tennis player could ever have. It is without a doubt the greatest of all tournaments."-Beverly Baker Fleitz, former tennis star.

An American blows a match because his wife isn't there to watch.

An English girl loses, then accuses her American opponent of faking a leg injury just to upset her.

A Yugoslav, annoyed when the crowd applauds only for his opponent, applauds himself for every good shot all sure signs that the peak of the tennis year was at hand, the all-England lawn tennis championships-Wimbledon!

"It's nerves," says Beverly Fleitz with sentimental memories of the days when she played before royalty, when she lived day to day from baseline to net and back again. "It's a very tense thing. The pressure gets to BEVERLY LAST SAW Wimbledon in 1959. She was playing out of Long Beach in those days and only recently moved to Rolling Hills, where she runs a spacious home on one of those quiet, leafy roads, for husband John and three kids, with a tennis court in the back yard.

She's blonde, tan and really doesn't look 36 at all but admits. "I'd had it. I'd had my travelling. I'd had enough of the playing, the grind, and it is a regular grind. It's not a fun game. I know what those people are going through over there now.

"I quit when I wanted to and I've never had any regrets. Other things became more important, like children

But it's hard to dismiss the melancholia that engulfs her when the big one comes around. This weekend she's water skiing down on the Colorado River, but part of her is at Wimbledon. They kick off Wimbledon with a garden party where all the new fashions are, and that's fun," Beverly says. 'Once I met Princess Elizabeth, before she became queen. My mother, of course, was very impressed. "When you play on the center court and there is royalty in the hox you walk out, step to the baseline and curtsy, or the man bows. You're coached to do this, That's just to say, 'We respect your being here.' But once you're playing you forget who's there."

BUT IT'S NOT EASY to forget where you are, Bev-

"Tennis is a big thing in England. You go down the street and you see your name on big billboards. It's great "And then also, not to be disrespectful, the newspapermen put a tremendous emphasis on little incidents and blow them up. I remember when I was playing one year and they found out I was expecting a baby, they put out an extra on it.

"They play these things up and they chase you around. They chased John through the Cumberland Hotel. He ran out the back door and set off all the fire on a tennis court. It was "love" at first sight.

"We were 17," Beverly recalls softly. "That's quite a while ago—like a hundred years, at least."

Beverly never won at Wimbledon, but she did reach the finals one year.

I lost to Louise Brough, whom I had beaten four times previously that year. That was a heartbreaker. She played quite well and I just missed a few key shots . . .

casy volleys, really.
"Funny story about playing Louise: This good friend of mine now, Vic Braden, is the one who brought her along for that tournament. He's manager of the Kramer Club here, and he's been working with my daughter. We've become close friends. He's a terrific guy and I just love him . . . but I could kill him!" BEVERLY'S OLDEST daughter participates in junior Georgia, MSU Coeds play around the Southland. "Kim's 13. She's not a player. I mean she loves to in College Tee Final play but she's a one or two-round player-a 'funner.' No I'm not disappointed, but I'm a wreck when I watch her play. They do those stupid things, 'How can she do that!' And I did it the same way, so I know what my father went through, getting ulcers watching me play."

Beverly will testify that competitive instinct is not

I was always completely intense but I always looked like I wasn't nervous. I looked very cool because I never opened my mouth. I'd smile occasionally but I never said anything. I kept everything inside.

"Even now when I play my own mother in ping pong I can't let up. I want to win. And Kim, she's out there just sort of waving her racquet around, smiling when she's [Nicki Nordstrom, Arizon losing. She couldn't care less."

OLIN DUTRA 'A Lot of Fun'

leet Olin Dutra, PGA 'King By DOUG IVES

Whoever wins the 42nd So, Calif, PGA tournament at Recreation Park July 6-10, it is a good bet that the man wasn't born when Olin Dutra started taking his swings in the Long Beach tee classic.

It was in 1928 that the former national PGA and U.S. Open champion first entered the So. Calif. PGA, and he won his first of six titles 36 years ago.

Now 66 and the head pro at Anaheim Municipal, Dutra will be in the field he has long since given up serious golf.

"I just play to help support the tournament now. says Olin, "but I intend to keep playing for a long time . . . I have a lot of fun and wouldn't miss it for anything."
This will be Dutra's 33rd appearance. He played in consecutive tournaments from 1928 to 1949, then moved to Mexico City before returning in 1954. He hasn't missed since.

Shooting birdies or bogeys, Dutra remains an attraction, especially to the oldtimers who remember him when he won the National PGA in St. Paul in 1932 and the U.S. Open in Philadelphia in 1934,

The complaints by today's pros in the recent U.S. Open San Francisco made Dutra reminisce,

"They gripe over ankledeep rough, but when I played the Open at Merian Cricket in Philly we played in knee-deep rough and nobody cried.

"Heck, I remember we had caddies with markers ball was heading for the rough, he'd race out to mark it. If he hadn't we'd still be looking."

set on the strength of her forehand, But Mrs. King began to outthink her young opponent. Billie Jean realized that if she put the ball away from the Aussie's forehand, Miss Krantzcke would be a dead duck.

The American started serving to Miss Krantzcke's backhand, and the Australian tried to run around the service to get at it with her forehand. Mrs. King kept the lumbering Miss Krantzcke on the move with lobs and drop outs. The Aussie tired quickly and could not cope with Mrs. King.

Annette Van Zyl of South Africa, the sixth seed, was the first girl into the quarconquest of Miss Arnold. The South African just kept the ball in play and let Miss Arnold give her the points on errors. Miss Arnold could not hold her service, she was wide with the forehand, she hit long and nearly every time she rushed the net she was passed.

Third-seeded Ann Haydon Jones of England disposed of the inexperienced Miss Casals, 6-2, 6-3, by taking advantage of her newness.

Miss Casals, the U.S. jun-ior titlist making her debut on the famed center court, played sloppily and impa-tiently most of the time. However, her flat service blazed at her opponer, some of her drop shots were superb and her lobs were inspired, Many consider Miss Casals the flashiest of the young stars on the circuit.

Top-seeded Margaret Smith of Australia whomped Edda Buding of Germany, 6-1, 6-2; seventh seeded Francoise Durr of France beat Shirley Brasheer of Britain, 6-2, 6-2; Trudi Groenman, The Netherlands, whipped Madonna Schacht of Australia, 6-1, 6-2.

The Aussies were glad that Roche and Richey were unable to play because the delay will give Roche an extra day to rest an ankle ibirdies in nine holes, starting tance in 3:36.3—the equivahe injured.

HOT DAY, HOT ROUND

Tommy Aaron stops to mop brow under shade of oak free while studying card that showed only 69 strokes on third round in Western Open Saturday. The hot round matched the hot weather and gave Aaron a one-stroke lead. Billy Casper, Ken Venturi and Kermit Zarley are next.

Maybe he has the secret that has escaped us-long arms to rake it in.

Despite Orlando Cepeda's trade to the St. Louis Cardinals recently, his million-dollar libel suit against Look magazine which described him as being "expendable" will not be dropped. It probably will come to trial this

The Cardinals wired $10,000 to San Francisco banker Jake Shemano the other day to get Cepeda off the hook. His financial affairs are even more snarled than were Willie Mays when Shemano took over his case.

Part of the money went to stop foreclosure on Orlando's San Francisco home.

THE U.S. OPEN WAS SUCH a great tournament that we thought you might be interested in a few untold stories to wrap up our coverage of the event.

Billy Casper, who converted to the Mormon religion earlier this year, drew Jim Stark, a sophomore on the Stanford golf team, as his caddy. Arnold Palmer drew a Mormon youth who is the No. 4 man on the Brigham Young links team.

Stark isn't accustomed to packing those 75-pound pro-style golf bags and during his first practice round with Casper, he was having trouble bending over to pick up divots while still controlling the bag.

'Walking along with them was Billy Casper Jr., age 9. Stark asked Billy to replace a divot, promising him a share of his fee. Little Billy was so delighted, he rushed to do the job after every shot the rest of the week.

Casper Sr. overheard the transaction, however, and warned Stark not to give his son more than a dollar. "I don't want him spoiled. He'll expect it every tournament,"

After the tournament, Bill asked Stark what his fee was, and the youngster said about $7 a round . . . "but I'll only charge you $5 for the playoff since I wasn't count-

Billy smiled as he pulled a check out of his pocket with the fee already filled in . . . $2,000.

Billy Jr. quickly got Stark aside and wanted his fee. The caddy finally came up with four dollar bills, all he had, but warned him "don't you dare tell your father I gave your more than one."

Palmer, incidentally, paid his caddy $1,000. John Miller, who finished as the low amateur, originally signed up to caddy in the Open . . . but qualified to play in the event held on his home course.

THE OPEN WAS A SHATTERING experience for many players . . . Palmer, Gary Player, Doug Sanders, etc. And, of course, Gene Littler. You undoubtedly read about his second-round 83 with a nine on the 11th hole after shooting an opening 88 ... but what went virtually unnoticed in the frantle finish of the tournament was another 80 on the final round with an EIGHT on the par-four 18th.

Talk about slow play and the USGA's "speed-up" edict, Ben Hogan declared that "In my day, I was considered a slow player... but compared to today's players, I'm extremely fast. It seems to me the younger players are the slowest of all. They're real surveyors.

Hogan, incidentally, won an exemption from qualifying for the 1967 Open at Baltusrol with his high finish.

Jack Fleck, the man who beat Hogan in the 1955 Open over the same course, made it plain from the out-set that he was a bitter man. He feels he should have been exempted from qualifying like Hogan, who got in via a special pass. Jack also feels he never received the credit

"It's unfortunate," said Ed Purgol, the 1954 Open champ who is a close friend of Fleck's, "but that's the way he is. Jack believes the public and press never gave him his due. Just like this year, they're already saying Palmer lost rather than Casper won it. That's what they did in '55. All they talked about is that Hogan should

AMONG THE LOST AND FOUND ITEMS was a boy's false teeth (identified by the size of the plate), and one license plate, oddly enough a "NIP" number.

'Most unusual sight: Seeing a woman's wig rolling down one of the course's steep hills after it had been knocked off hy the milling mob during the playoff.

"Dave Marr must have set a record for hitting sand traps on the front nine of the final round, and knocked his tee shot into another bunker on the 10th hole when a fellow, who had just joined a friend in the gallery, asked "is he a good sand player?"

"He is by now," answered the friend!

Jim Miller of the Southern California Striders won the 440-yard hurdles in 50.1, while Jim Ryun, Jim Grelle and Dyrol Burleson led eight qualifiers through the heats into today's finals of the mile run.

Davenport's great hurdle race missed the world record by only one-tenth of one second. Don Shy of the 49er Track Club of Lung Beach, Calif., was second in 13.4, his career best, and teammate Earl McCullough was third in 13.6, also a lifetime best.

Walt Clements of the 49ers ran 52.1 in the 440-yard hurdles, but the race as so competitive that he finished only seventh.

Ryun casually won his heat in 4:06.4, while Burleson won in 4:06.2 with Grelle an eased-up second.

One-two finishers qualify for the United States team scheduled to meet Poland in a dual meet at Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17 and against Russia at Los Angeles July 23-24.

With that as a lure, the favorites generally had their hands full to beat off the challengers, but only three defenders were tumblcd-Connolly in the hamthe 100 and John Pennel in the pole vault.

Paul Wilson, USC freshman, finished second in the pole vault at 16-81/4, pushing Pennel to third place with the same height but more misses.

Boston, the 1960 Olympic champ, and Mays both had leaps of 26-3, but the veteran representing the Striders had a second best jump of 26-2 to 25-91/2 for Mays, and that decided it.

Oerter and Randy Matson of Texas A. and M., the NCAA titleholder, were tled after the first round, but Oerter came up with a final throw of 193-9 to win and veteran Rink Babka of Pasadena, Calif., with 191-2, bumped Matson to third place at 190-9.

Lee Evans of San Jose, Calif., tied the meet record of 45.8 in a trial heat in the 440-yard run, Dave Crook of Nebraska ran 45.9 as a second to Evans while the event favorite, Theron Lewis of Southern U., won his semifinal in 46.3.

With 11 events to go to-day, the Striders led in the team race with 73 points. The Pasadena AA was secthe New York Athletic Club 22. 49er Track Club 19, and Athens AC of Oakland, Calif., 14.

U.S.-Canada Pro League Will Start Operations Next May

Ambitious Jack Kent Cooke expanded his sports empire in another direction Saturday as head of a new coast-to-coast professional soccer league.

Cooke, who already owns the Lakers and a "condi-tional" franchise in the expanding National Hockey League, led a group which won formal recognition in San Francisco Saturday from the United States Soc-cer Football Assn., the rul-ing body for the sport in this country.

The new league, to be called the North American Soccer League with teams in Canada as well as the U.S., won out for official sanction over two other proposed national bodies.

Players will be acquired through an international draft and Sunday games will be telecast nationally in color, according to Cooke,

Cities included are Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Boston, New York, Washington, Toronto and Vancouver. Two oth-ers, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, are being considered as later members.

Four of the owners, including Cooke, also own NHL franchises - George Fleharty at San Francisco, Weston Adams at Boston and the Madison Square Garden Assn. in New

The other owners are: Chicago - Arthur Allyn, president of baseball's White Sox; Washington -Earl Forman, president of the Baltimore Bullets of the National Basketball Assn, and part owner of the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League; Toronto - Steve Stavro, a Canadian soccer promoter, and Vancouver-Frank McMahon, wealthy businessman and sports-

Games will be played on Wednesday nights and Sunday afternoons from May to August. A promotional campaign is planned to acquaint the U.S. public with soccer, which is the major sport in Europe and Latin Teams will draft players from semipro and amateur ranks, the colleges and forcountries. However, each club must carry five American residents.

Frank Woods, president of the USSFA, said that two other groups were turned down for recognition. They were headed by Richard Millen of Los Angeles and Robert Hermann of St. Lauis.

Cooke added that by 1970 the new league also may have teams in Phila-delphia, Cleveland, Detroit and Houston.

Artificial Reef Plans Advanced

Artificial reefs around seven piers in Southern California will be built within the next four months, and, if the reefs are as productive for fish life as other reefs have been, fishing on those piers will be from 25 to 50 percent better. That is the way that fishing was affected at the Imperial Beach Fishing Pier in San Diego.

The California Wildlife Conservation Board awarded the $163,450 contract for the seven reefs to the Connolly-Pacific Company of Long Beach. The reefs will be constructed at Oceanside, San Clemente, Huntington Beach, Seal Beach, Hermosa Beach, Manhattan Beach and Venice Piers. The Venice Pier is called the Los Angeles Municipal Quarry rock will be used. The funds will come from the WCB's $5 million share of the California Beach, Park, Recreational and Historical Facilities Bond Act of 1964.

Raymond J. Nesbit, executive officer of the WCB, explained that a previous contract for the seven reefs had been awarded to another company, but administrative difficulties prevented it from handling the project. The plans were put up for rebid recently and the Connolly-Pacific Company submitted the lowest bid.

Installed around the outer limits of a pier in about 20 or 30 feet of water, the reefs rise only three or four feet from the bottom and offer no hazards to boaters.

ALL OF THIS BRINGS UP a question about the new Belmont Pier, scheduled for completion this fall. How about its artificial reef? Such a reef has been promised by the Wildlife Conservation Board, but there is a cheaper way that will benefit all parties concerned.

The Guy F. Atkinson Company, which is building the new pier, also has the contract to demolish the old pier which consists of badly eroded concrete pilings and a concrete floor. In this writer's humble opinion, there is no reason why the Atkinson Company could not dispose of the old pier and form an artificial reef with the concrete.

It would save money for the Atkinson Company, the City of Long Beach and the WCB would not have to put out one dime for quarry rock from Catalina Island. It's a cinch that perch, opaleye, bass and other fish are not going to make a fuss about whether the reef is built of rock or concrete. Within a matter of weeks, marine growth will start encrusting anything that is put on the

Charles H. Turner, biologist with the Department of Fish and Game at Terminal Island, says the idea is a great one. Turner and his scuba-diving crew have been installing the artificial reefs off Southern California piers. They recently installed the artificial kelp beds off Redondo

THE TROPHY FOR THE FIRST bluefin tuna apparrently will go to Pierpoint Landing even though the actual first bluefin was caught by an angler aboard the All-America Nut Company's Goober, skippered by Barney

Tillotson, several days ago.

Bob Masters, 206 Covina Ave., Long Beach, fishing on the Liberty Thursday, got the second bluefin, a 14-pound, 8-ounce fish. The Liberty was Pierpoint's sundown boat and Gary LaMont was the skipper. It was just off Pt. Vicente when the fish was caught.

lnasmuch as the Port of Long Beach limits the bluefin and albacore trophies to Pierpoint and Pacific Landings, the trophy must go to Pierpoint this year. However, it would be a nice gesture on the part of the Long Beach Harbor Department to give a letter of commendation to Tillotson and the angler who really got the first bluefin.

It's later than you think regardless of the nice warm weather that we are having. The archery deer season in the coastal (or early) deer area begins July 16 and continues through July 31. Then, on Aug. 6, the early deer

It would be wise for all hunters to get their licenses and deer tags now. At the same time, pick up a copy of the 1966 Hunting Regulations so as to be prepared for all the seasons this year.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS-Three anglers on the Belmont Pier half-day boat, Queen of the Sea, were happy ones last Wednesday. Each decked a yellowtail. This is not to say that other anglers were unhappy; they were putting limits or partial limits of big barracuda and kelp bass into their sacks. James Y. Camp, 53, chairman of the board of the S.A. Camp Companies, has been appointed to the State Fish and Game Commission by Gov. Edmund Brown. He succeeds Bryan E. Gibson of Woodland Hills, who resigned because of personal business. Camp, whose firm deals with cotton, cattle and chemicals, is a Democrat. He is an avid hunter, fisherman and boater.

Next Thursday and Friday will climax the first period of the San Diego Yellowtail Derby when 600 to 800 ancompete for $8,000 in prizes. Top award will be 1966 automobile. Yellowtail fishing off the Coronado Islands has not been too hot in the last few days. Dock total for Thursday was only 168 yellows. However, barracuda fishing was good, with 801. Some skippers resorted to rockfish to make their patrons happy, or at least give them something to take home for the dinner table.

There's Another Nagurski in Sight

FALLS, Minn. (P)-Bronko Nagurski, the legendary profootball star whose legs worked like pistons while he burst through tackle and guard for the Chicago Bears, owns his own gas station nowadays.

He's still a hard worker. Bronko puts in 10-hour days while running the station with two part-time

His station is situated at the busiest downtown corner of this small Canadian border papermill and fishing town. It is Nagurski's hometown and he came back to it after his football days with the University of Minnisota and the National Football League Bears.

But not before the bullstrong men with the blue eyes and the mild manner inspired gridiron legends that will outlive him.

All-America at Minnesota in 1929 and all-pro three times with the Bears, 1932-34, Nagurski did things on a football field men still write and talk about.

This remains a source of quiet pleasure and amusement to Bronko. When a

"Some of it's true, some of it's exaggerated," he said the other morning between car fillups.

"Sometimes, I think they're talking about the wrong guy."

The blue-and-white signs it the station simply say Bronko Nagurski's. The proprietor was sitting at his desk in his blue uniform, reading the sports page and listening to the radio, when a visitor arrived. The station walls were lined with photographs of other football grees.

Men tourists, old enough to remember him, sometimes ask Bronko to pose for pictures, which he does willingly.

Bronko bought the station about six years ago, after he quit pro wrestling, which had followed his retirement from the Bears in 1943.

He's 57 now, and weighs 270—about 30 pounds over his playing weight.

Bronko guided fishing parties on Rainy Lake, near

His name is Ronald, and some day sportswriters may have to do something about that. He will be a high school juntor this fall, stands 6-foot-1, weighs 200 and plays both football and hockey.

"He'll be as good as Bronko Jr.," says the old man, and adds with a note of pride:

"He's got just a little meaner temperament, He'll be a little more vicious."

Sitting in the umpires' room during a recent tour of duty in New York, Ashford explained his gestures and mannerisms from the small school that gives the big, easy-to-see - through the words of former Dodger star Roy Campanella.

'Campy said there's got to be a little boy in everybody who plays the game, Ashford said. "That's the way I feel. And if my personality and enthuslasm come out in my work --- it's iust me. Besides, it's something for the fan to see, and I think it helps the game.

Ashford eventually will have to ante up for uniforms if they take the beating his gestures seem sure to inflict. The league only furnishes replacements at the rate of one every other year. All others have to be bought by the umpire and they serve only one purpose.

"You really can't wear them outside," Ashford said. "They're not stylish."

Ashford also ticked off the prices of various other equipment that has to be purchased, revealed that he totes around five balls in the specially designed umpires' pockets and is strictly a suspenders-only man.

"A mask goes for about $15, shin guards for about $18, special shoes for working behind the plate for $25, special shoes for working when you're on the bases, also about $25," he said. "Most of those last a whole season."

"The number of balls an ump carries varies with the person," Ashford said. like to keep six around the one in the game and five in my pockets, two in the left and three in the right pocket. When I need more. I signal to the ball boy to bring me some."

Violence Grows as March Continues

THE NATION.

Violence increased as they trudged deeper into the Delta area, but the "freedom" marchers continued toward Jackson, the capital city of Mississippi, exhorting Negroes to register and vote.

DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR., who took over leadership of the march after James II. Meredith was wounded by shotgun blasts at the start of the trek, led an automobile side trip 60 miles to Philadelphia, Miss., and was greeted with jeers, stones and clubs. There were no serious injuries there, but during the week, two white men were shot in incidents related to the march.

When the marchers reached Canton they pitched their tents in a school yard after being denied permission to do so. As they drove the tent pegs, Mississippi highway patrolmen closed in with tear gas guns and heavy boots. The marchers fled to the Negro section of town from clouds of gas, flalling boots and swinging rifle butts. Forty were injured in the melce.

Meredith, apparently unhappy with developments since his wounding, returned to the march Friday and snubbed a welcoming rally saying, "The whole danm things smells to me." He planned to walk alone from Canton to Tougaloo, where the main body of marchers had gone after the tear gas and boots fracas.

A troupe of Hollywood personalities, led by actor-singer Sammy Davis Jr., was scheduled to entertain the marchers in Tougaloo Saturday night. From Tougaloo, it is only eight miles to the State Capitol where thousands were expected to take part in an antisegregation rally

The violence along the march route was what Mississippi Gov. Paul B. Jonson Jr. had wanted to avoid. He urged patience by the state's white citizens. Said the governor, "Now, in the closing days of these weeks of provocation, I again call upon the loyal citizenry of this state to avoid all contact with these marchers and to ignore their last desperate effort to stand in the spotlight of publicity at the expense of our state."

The Delta area's militant whites refused to listen.

NEW YORKERS put away their ticker tapes, canceled a civic reception and pointedly ignored a visit by King Faisal, absolute monarch of oil-rich Saudi Arabia. The reason: The king, in answer to a White House news conference question, said: "Unfortunately, Jews support Israel and we consider those who provide assistance to our enemies as our own enemies."

The aftermath to that statement was explosive. In New York, where there are tens of thousands of Jewsand few Arabs-Mayor John Lindsay, reportedly against the advice of Secretary of State Dean Rusk, canceled an official dinner for King Faisal and refused to send the city's official greeter to the airport to meet him. Even New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller withdrew his recognition of the king's visit.

The king apparently was not fazed. In flowing robes and burnous, he made himself at home in the royal suite at Waldorf-Astoria.

United Nations Secretary General U Thant gave a formal luncheon. A mong those attending was Arthur-Goldberg, United States Ambassador to the United Nations and a Jew. Asked why he was there, Goldberg replied, "I am your ambassador at the United Nations."

The open sessions were heated and bitter as former employes in Dodd's Senate office testified that Dodd received many favors from Klein and flew to Germany at Klein's urging to try to save some German clients for

When the hearings recessed for the weekend, Dodd was charging the committee was unfair.

The committee chairman, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., disclosed that a witness against Dold had been threatened and said, "The committee cannot stand by and see any witnesses coerced or intimidated."

It turned out that Dodd's son, Jeremy, had seen one of the witnesses in the Senate cafeteria and had berated him for testifying against his father. Dodd apologized to the committee saying that his son was upset by the dis-loyalty demonstrated "towards me and my family."

PRESIDENT CHARLES DE GAULLE of France continued to muddy international waters as he began a 12day visit to the Soviet Union in what he hoped would re-"restoration of Europe into a single, fruitful whole." He is the first French chief of state ever to visit Russia and he and the crowds are enjoying it.

De Gaulle had several conferences with Leonid 1.

Brezhnev, general secretary of the Communist Party in Russia, Nikolai V. Podgorny, Soviet head of state, and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin before going on a tour of the Soviet Union.

He proved to be the biggest attraction ever to hit the Siberian city of Novosibirsk where at least half of the city's million population turned out to welcome him. He also was the first Westerner to watch the launching of a Russian satellite.

Western leaders waited to see what kind of pact De Gaulle would forge with the Soviet leaders, EASTERN EUROPE had another visitor this week-Premier Chou En-lai of Communist China. He was in Romania until Friday when he flew to Albania, his single true ally in China's ideological feud with Russia.

The Romanian visit appeared to be going smoothly with bear lugs exchanged by Chou and Romanian Premier Ion Gheorghe Maurer until a Thursday night "friendship rally." More than 2,000 guests and the nation's television audience were kept waiting more than two hours for the

No one is saying what went on behind the scenes, but when the rally finally got under way, it was short, frigid and diplomatically correct. There was no love and no bear hugs. Apparently Chou had failed to swing Romania from a neutral position to Red China's side in the squabble with

There were three fronts in the Viet Nam War last week-political, ground and air.

In the political war, combat police and Vietnamese marines moved into Saigon's Vien Hoa Dao pagoda Thursday and arrested several hundred die-hard Buddhist rebels without firing a shot. Police arrested a man with a shaved head, dressed in monk's robes, for the killing of a policeman during riots against the military government of Premier Neuven Cao Ky.

Vietnamese officials said the pugoda was the last significant center of political rebellion against the Ky regime. One official said that those arrested were not Buddhists, but Communists.

IN THE GROUND WAR, a North Vietnamese officer defected to the south and directed American artillery fire and air strikes against his former comrades. The pinpoint intelligence supplied by the North Vietnamese officer resulted in the deaths of at least 53 Communists—swelling the known enemy dead in Operation Nathan Hale to 380. In the air, an American P105 Thunderchief jet was shot down 30 miles northeast of Hanoi while attacking a petroleum storage area in North Viet Nam. Earlier in the week, a CI23 was shot down south of Da Nang in South Viet Nam while on a defoliation mission.

War cusualties last week included 10 water buffalo. The Air Force announced that strikes are being made against water buffalo pack trains in the Mu Gia Pass sup-ply route, between North and South Viet Nam, and that 10 of the animals had been killed by air action.

THERE WAS NEW speculation about peace in Viet Nam as special Canadian envoy Chester Ronning returned from a second trip to Hanoi, Canadian officials declined to say what his mission was about, but they have indicated in the past that they were trying to set up peace talks between the United Staes and North Viel Nam.

Washington observers noted with interest that William P. Bundy, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, flew to Ottawa, Canada, to confer with Ronning, Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and Canadian Foreign Minister Paul Martin upon Ronning's return.

THE WEST

Payola was back in the news last week as the Federal Communications Commission held closed hearings in Los Angeles on bribes allegedly paid to disc jockeys and program directors of radio stations in return for playing certain records on the air.

Jay A. Kyle, presiding officer at the hearings, said nothing, but one of the witnesses, Currie Grant, former record promoter, said he testified that payola given to disc jockeys included food, clothing, paint, hard cash and WIPING TEARS FROM THEIR eyes, members of the Los Angeles County Grand Jury began secret heavings into accusations that major automobile manufacturers have conspired to delay development of smog-reducing devices of cars. It is believed the inquiry is aimed at returning indictments under violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The hearings startled auto manufacturers. From Detroit came the statement that "we know of no reason why, a grand jury has been impaneled. We have cooperated fully with the Department of Justice and are confident this investigation will confirm there has been no violation

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, the Air Pollution Con-trol Association held its annual national convention and the dangers of smog received new emphasis. Dr. James McCarroll of Cornell University's medical school, said statistics show that peaks in the death rate coincide with periods of high air pollution.

A SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY

By ROBERT J. SERLING

WASHINGTON (UPI)-A gentleman named C. L. Gerdes started a sentimental journey Saturday.

At 8 a.m. EDT, he boarded Lake Central Airlines Flight 422 at Baltimore's Friendship Airport, After six days, 33 stops, four airlines and eight flights, he'll arrive in Seattle the last man who will have crossed the nation entirely by DC3.

Gerdes, 25 and a private pilot who lives in Quincy, Ill., is taking the unusual trip to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the DC3 in commercial airline service. American Airlines introduced the plane on June 2511936, He is not trying to prove anything — except that "I just love the DC3 the way some people love the Model

IT TOOK HIM weeks to plan the journey, largely because the local service or regional airlines on which he must travel are rapidly phasing out their DC3 fleets.

The starting leg on Lake Central — Baltimore-Cincinnati — for example, wasn't confirmed for two months because Lake Central didn't know whether it still would be using a DC3 on this route by June 25.

Actual flying time will take five days; he plans to rest up in Chicago today, arriving in Seattle on West Coast Flight 399 at 9:25 p.m. PDT. Gerdes takes Lake Central from Cincinnati to Chicago, Ozark from Chicago to Sioux City, Iowa, North Central from Sioux City to Bismarck, Frontier from Bismarck to Great Falls, West Coast from Great Falls to Spokane, and West Chast from Spokane to Seattle.

THE TRIP will cost him about $250. It would cost him $144.11 to fly one-stop on a jet from Baltimore to Seattle - in seven hours. But it makes no difference to this DC3 buff who figures it's a good way to honor the most beloved commercialy plane in aviation history.

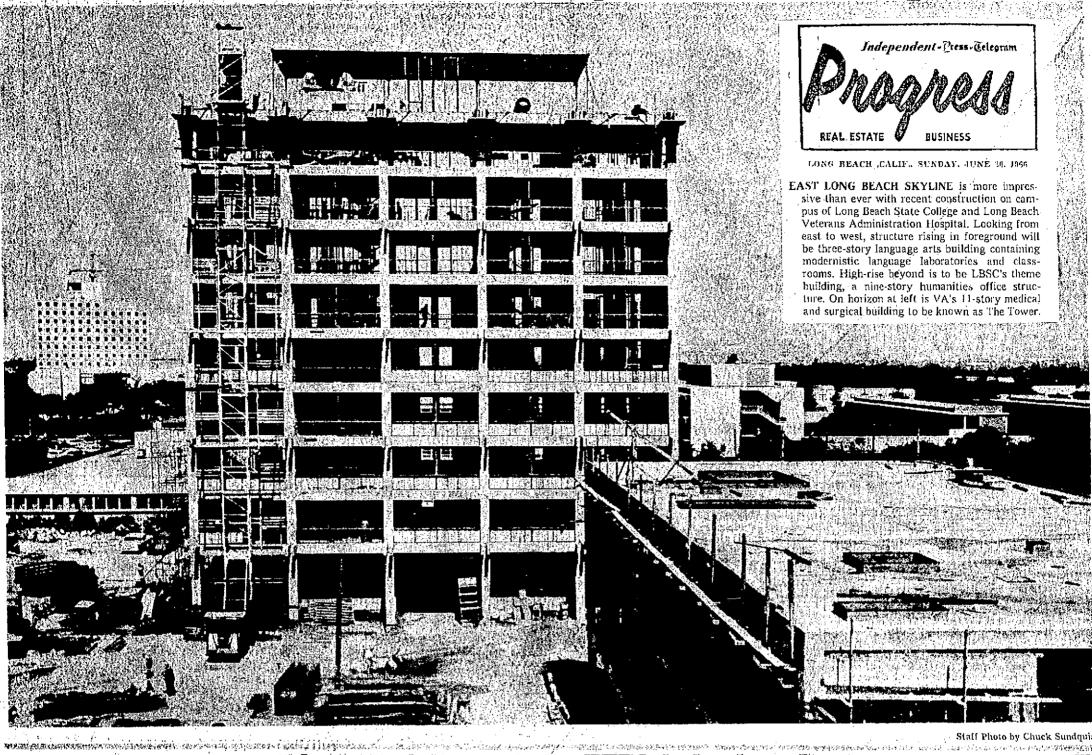

Gerdes' troubles in arranging the journey emphasize that the days of the DC3 as a scheduled airlines are coming to an end. For example, he originally wanted to fly from Washington to either Los Angeles or San Francisco, but no scheduled airline serves the two California cities with Only 124 DC3s still are in scheduled service in the United States, a sad comedown for a plane that 25 years ago carried 90 per cent of the nation's com-mercial air traffic. Ozark has the most (20), followed by Trans-Texas (18), North Central (15) and Southern Central and Lake Central (14 each). Five of the 13 local service airlines have retired their DC3 fleets entirely.

Yet the grand old girl of aviation still is a long way from total demise. No less than 434 arc in service for foreign airlines, with major carriers like Varig and Air France operating 40 and 25 respectively.

It's entirely possible that DC3-lover Gerdes could come close to flying around the world via the gallant "Gooney Bird."

Huntington Harbour 'Boardwalk' Shop Center Is Planned

Huntington Harbour soon will have its first shopping center and the same exacting architectural con-trol placed on its luxury homes will be followed in the $2.5 million area for stores.

To be known as "The Boardwalk," the 100,000square-foot commercial center will be just off Warner Avenus at Algonquin Street.

"The Boardwalk" has been designed with a nau tical look in keeping with its environment. Rough sawn lumber will be used as the basic building material to lend warmth and character to the architecture.

Clifford Russell, president of Huntington Harbour, declared this shopping center probably will be the "least commercial looking" neighborhood shopping district in California.

"WE LOOK TO the Boardwalk as part of the total Harbour community as first spelled out by our land planner, William Pereira," said Russell.

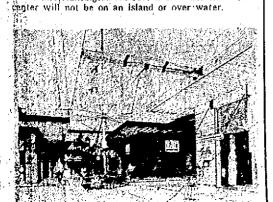

"The center with its 20 businesses, is specially conceived for our homeowners with their income, age, and family characteristics taken into consideration."

The one-story project will melt into the community rather than be a jarring glass and neon addition, Russell added. Special entrance designs are being prepared for the stores and the interior lighting will be tailored to particular needs.

RICHARD MAITLAND, project supervisor, anmounced that El Rancho Markets has been signed as the "ideal market operation for this type of development. They have three stores in the Pasadena area and are known for high service and gourmet items."

Few people in the Long Beach-Orange County area . have heard of the Transworld Management Corporation. But Tramancor is on the lips of kings and statesmen, of educators and workmen throughout the Middle East.

Southlanders who gaze at the appealing Edison Company office building at 100 Long Beach Blvd. in most cases do not know-or care—that in a spacious office on the fifth floor is the Tramancor headquarters.

Yet, ministers of agriculture and finance-from such countries as the United Arab Republic, Iraq, Lebanon and Iran-arrive unheralded and seek out this same office.

Tramancor had its beginning in Los Angeles in the late 1940s. Its initial purpose: to recruit and train workersor oil companies operating in the Middle East. William Dodson, president, who himself had worked in those small countries, surrounded himself with 17 other men with similar hackgrounds. Together, they represent 80 years of dealings with Mideast peoples.

In the late 1950s, the governments of such countries as Jordan, Syria, Algeria, Tunisia, Afghanistan, Saudi Arabia, Morocco and the Kingdom of Libva demanded the upgrading of nationals and the reduction of foreign labor.

By this time, Tramancor had branched out fro oil field endeavor to management counseling. Would Traman-cor, several of these governments asked, set up training programs to help their people help themselves?

Lyman Leonard, operations manager, said—in the absence of Dodson now doing survey work in Beirot—"we

Aerospace, Electronics Spur to Southla

By KEN CHILCOTE

While the pinch in home building is being felt in the Southland, the general economy continues on a strong basis with no immediate letup in sight,

Upsurge in the area's aerospace and electronics industry makes the economic outlook bright for months to come. The stepped up orders for aircraft—$220,000 in orders for Douglas Aircraft last week alone — and the stepped up action in Vict Nam will pace much of the economy. Increased consumer spending is boosting sales,

Robert A. Lambeth, senior vice president of finance and treasurer of North American Aviation Inc., reports that aerospace companies in this area will add 13,000 people to their payrolls by the end of this year. This will be in addition to 27,000 such jobs added the past year.

A high rate of capital expansion will continue, Lambeth said, with his own company spending $50 million this year compared to $35 million last year. Douglas is expected to double its expenditures on capital outlays.

Except for home construction, virtually all phases of the local economy picture continue to reflect a rosey hue into the future.

CHECKMATE, the protective check cashing system designed to eliminate the worry and costs of retail firms trying to collect bounced checks, has signed more than 1,000 supermarkets, hotels, restaurants and liquor stores in this area, according to Justin R. Eccles, vice president of American Certified Check Corp.

Since the plan was announced several weeks ago, some banks have come out with a somewhat similar plan of their own but because of limitations to just their own customers, the banks are beginning to find the Checkmate plan far more acceptable, Eccles said.

A computerized system, Checkmate is an identification card type of operation certifying personal checks up to the sum of $150. A retailer accepting the check, signed under the plan, need never worry about the check bouncing and can count it as eash. Should the check bounce, it would go to Checkmate which would do the

The retailer pays Checkmate one-fourth of 1% of the amount of the check. However, this percentage is substantially less than what many merchants presently pay for the cost of cashing checks, such as maintaining check cashing booths, manager's time spent approving checks, time and costs of collecting insufficient fund checks or costs of trying to collect on bad checks.

"When a person obtains a Checkmate card it means his check is as good as cash. Many stores signing plan to eliminate all other check cashings, using just the Checkmate plan and it will eliminate a lot of other costly prob-lems at the cashier's booth," added Eccles.

And these aren't just little camp out trips. Travel agencies are experiencing the greatest flow of orders in years. Overseas trips will double previous years, tourist officials

At home, more and more persons are getting help in outlining long trips instead of just starting out on their own. The big tourist resorts are being broked weeks in advance and reports from more local scenes like resorts along the Colorado River say they are facing a big rush in calls for camp sites.

THE LARGEST OFFICE complex in Orange County, Union Bank Square in the City of Orange, has proven a successful venture in a big way for the David H. Murdock Development Co. The second tower, an addition of 84,000 square feet, is being completed to give the complex an overall size of 234,000 square feet.

An excellent location with respect to freeways, Union Bank Square was planned with many convenient facilities making it virtually a community in its own.

Business firms now headquartered in Union Bank Square include the Western Sales Office of Chrysler Motors Corp.; Chrysler-Plymouth and Dodge regional office; Corning Glass Co.; Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., Humble Oil and Refining Co., and the President's Health Club.

Jerry Hay recently was chosen as the new project manager for the office complex.

AETRON, a division of Aerojet-General Corp., in Covina, has been named to manage the development and construction, and do the engineering for a 35-acre medical complex in Torrance which will include a new sevenstory hospital. Ultimate cost of the project will range between $20 and $30 million. First project will be development of a 250-bed hospital which is master-planned for further expansion to 500 beds. Truck Production Ahead of

With its second advance in a row, the Index rallied into new high ground this week and faced the summer atits highest level ever.

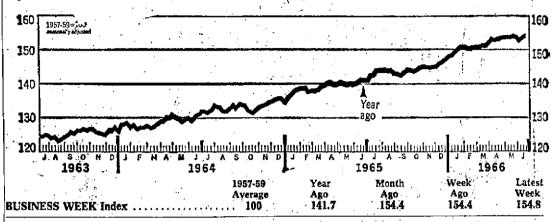

Nearly all components were ahead of last week or of the same week in 1965—and in some cases both. Electric power output gained 8% over last week and 7.8% over a ear ago, as the warming weather built up air conditioning Paperboard production made slight weekly and yearly gains.

RAILROAD CARLOADINGS advanced in all major commodity groups, both from last week and a year ago -freight traffic on U. S. railroads in the latest week is the highest since the wartime month of October, 1944.

Auto and steel output presents mixed figures. Steel production rose over last week, but is still 2.6% under last year at this time. The auto plants leveled off from last post-holiday surge, marking a 1.1% decline from the earlier week.

BUT THAT FIGURE includes both cars and trucks. Car production is 5.3% behind 1985 at the same date, and industry estimates now peg the 1966 model run 2.8% below the 1965 record.

Truck output, though, is 4.8% ahead of last year. And if this trend continues, as it should, 1966 will be the fifth straight record year for truck production and sales.

AT THE CAPE Satellite Launch Was 'All-California' Show

I, P-T Sunday Editor

The highly - successful Titan IHC communications satellite launch June 16 at Cape Kennedy, Fla., in which seven radio relay stations were put into a 21,000-mile high orbit, may have had a Florida background but it was to all intents and purposes a California product,

The launch was directed by the Air Force's Space Systems Division headquartered at El Segundo. Both the sophisticated satellites and the huge Titan boosters were developed under SSD direction.

Technical assistance on the launch was furnished by the non-profit Aerospace Corp., also of El Segundo.

The Titan IIIC will be the space vehicle for the Douglas manned, orbiting laboratory to be sent aloft in 1969.

ALMOST ALL of the leading contractors concerned with the communications satellite phase of the launch are California-based concerns. They are:

WDL Division of the Phileo Corp., Palo Alto. EJMAC Division of Varian Associates, San Carlos. TRW Space Technology Labs, Redondo Beach. Watkins-Johnson Co., Palo Alto.

The Phileo Corp. developed the multiple-launch technique and the unique dispenser which allowed the eight satellites to be launched one at a time and placed into their proper orbit high over the equator.

Philos is the prime contractor for the satellites.

THE EIMAC organization under a contract from the Space Systems Division developed a new lightweight triveling wave tube amplifier for military satellite com-munication. The hermatically-sealed TWTA packages include a metal-ceramic traveling wave tube and a solid state power supply, with both units optimized for operation in the satellite-to-ground frequency band.

TRW Space Technology in Redondo Beach has been producing the satellite structure and power subsystems for communications satellites. These in turn are incorporated into the final structure by Philco.

The Watkins-Johnson Co. has been largely responsible for the highly-successful traveling wave tube amplifier capability which was vital to the success of the mission.

CALIFORNIANS also had a bit share in the 2,400,000 pounds of thrust that hurled the Titan III and its communications package into space.

The Aerojet-General Corp. at Azusa and Sacramento furnished the liquid fuel systems which power the three stages of the Titan III.

the Titan III's 120-inch diameter solid fuel boosters. California, however, can't claim the Titan III space vehicle itself. They are manufactured by the Martin Co. in Denver, Colo.

But Denver, of course, is considered part of the old west which has become the new west in the ever-growing leaps into space.

Two-Ply Tires in Favor

Charles to the Browness Section

Today's tires are safer than ever before and a key reason is two-ply tires, which "are superior tires — a product of a dvanced technology, designed to bring the latest and best to the motoring public."

This was the major point of a speech by George R. Vila, chairman and president of United States Rubber Co., before the Rochester, N.Y., Rotary Club, Conceding the tire industry has not replied enough to criticisms of tire safety, Villa vigorously defended tires particularly two-ply tires—being safe.

"The fact is two-ply tires with a four-ply rating are better than the four-ply tires they replaced," he stated. "They are an improvement brought about by technological advances and provide the motorist with a greater margin of safety."

AS PROOF, Vila cited the results of a computer study of customer returns under the company's warranty program out of a production run of several hundred thousand two-ply and four-ply tires. The tires were all made with the same design produced during the same period and released through the same distribution channels. These were the results of the study based on comparing equal numbers of tires in each group—

Road hazard damage caused by glass, metal, stones, chuck holes, etc.: For every 100 four-ply tires returned, 93 two-ply tires were returned.

--Impact rupture: For every 100 four-ply tires returned, only 52 two-ply tires were returned.

-All other conditions such as tread separation, fabric breaks, excessive or uneventread wear; for every 100 four-ply tires returned, only 49 two-ply tires were returned.

THE OVERALL average was 69 two-ply tires returned for every 100 four-ply tires returned, Vila noted.

He also pointed out his company has found that two-ply tires are cooler running—about 15 degrees cooler at 80 miles an hour than equivalent four-ply tires — which gives the driver greater safety against rupture and ply and tread separation. Cooler running tires are safer, because heat weakens rubber. Their greater flexibility permits a lower cord angle which makes two-ply tires more stable and safely maneuverable, he said.

Burst strength — at least seven times the maximum suggested air pressure for a tire in regular operation—is the same for the two-ply as for the four-ply tire, he noted.

'These data are highly significant to the American motorist," Vila said.

"Two-ply tires are not cheap tires. They are not flimsy tires. They are not unsafe tires. They are not inferior tires in any respect. In lact, they are superior tires."

TO ENSURE the continuing safety of its tires, U.S. Rubber spends over $12 million a year in development and testing, he sated. Tires are run about $60 million miles a year at the company's tire-proving ground in Laredo, Tex., on test wheels and in fleet tests throughout the country.

the country.

Inside these gates your own private world of Ciudad Capistrano

A wonderful world of secluded patios, gardens, and atriums enclosed within eight and ten foot high Spanish walls. Hidden from public view you will enjoy your outdoor living areas as never before — lounging by the pool, dining on the terrace, walking in the garden. Ciudad Capistrano is a private community within the quaint village of San Juan Capistrano. There are no ordinary streets in Ciudad — instead there are landscaped courtyards around which the homes are situated. It's safe to say you've never seen anything like it. The California-Spanish architecture and the unique land plan have already received over twenty national and regional awards. The larger homes are called casas — the smaller homes, which are completely maintained by the homeowners association, are called casitas. The residents of Ciudad are a rather continental lot. Some are people who must work in Los Angeles but don't choose to live there. (Los Angeles is less than an hour away — it's freeway all the way). Some are retired. Some are busy executives who want a secluded hideaway for the weekend. Some have purchased for price appreciation and tax shelter. They'll lease their casa September through June and use it themselves during the summer. (The beach is only 5 minutes away). Older California families will remember San Juan Capistrano for its old world charm, beautiful mission, white sand beach, and wonderful, wonderful climate. None of this has changed, but the San Juan area now has four golf courses, a new tennis and riding club, a new shopping plaza, and several fine restaurants. And soon one of the largest marinas on the coast will be completed at Dana Point, five minutes away. Why not drive down the coast this weekend to see Ciudad Capistrano. Take in the mission while you're here and finish up with a canddelight dinner in the village. Come expecting a delightful surprise and you won't be disappointed.

Progress has moved into the story of the birds and the bees!!

Some California crops ar now being pollinated by "mechanical bees," reports the Council of California Growers.

Due to excessive costs of land and the need to produce more crops, tomatoes are being grown inside moisture and temperature-controlled plastic greenhouses. This permits growing tomatoes in the winter as well as summer months and will mean the growers can continue to farm on heavily-taxed land adjacent to

The plants won't yield without pollination. Bees do much of the work when the crops are grown outdoors. The wind also helps. But inside the plastic tents, bees won't live and there is no wind.

So workers now are using hand operated vibrators on the stems of the plants to shake loose the

MRS. SANDRA HANO . . 'Students Are Paid'

By ELLIOT ZWIEBACH

A three-time visitor to the Soviet Union says the U.S.S.R. does not claim to be a Communist country

"They say they are a socialist country and will not be a true Communist nation for another 10 or 15 or 30 years," Mrs. Sandra Hano, an instructor in Russian at Santa Ana Junior College, told the Long Beach Community Forum:

Her statements on the Soviets' view of themselves were based on lectures she heard while attending Moscow University the past three summers.

THE LECTURES on life in the Soviet Union also tended to demythologize American stereotypes of Russian culture, Mrs. Hano said.

"They told us banks give 3% interest, that Soviet citizens can buy on credit and that they can change jobs whenever they please," she went on.

"Students are paid to go to school," she said,

Mrs. Hano deplored the inefficiency of Russian bureaucracy, in which "everything must go through

She cited shopping as one of the best examples of Soviet inefficiency, saying that a customer must stand in one line to select his purchases, another line to obtain his purchase tickets, and a third line to receive his groceries. "It takes hours to shop," she

Some Companies Abandon 'Male-Female' Want Ads

As a result of the new Civil Rights Act, many com-panies have changed employe policies and practices to avoid charges of discrimination against women. This con-clusion is drawn from the results of a pilot study just released by the Administrative Management Society.

The purpose of the study was to find out the effects of the equal employment opportunities provisions of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act on current policies. Title VII specifies that there shall be no discrimination against employees because of race, color, creed, or sex.

ACCORDING TO the study, the main policy changes appear in employment practices toward women.

Here are some of the policy changes listed by the participating companies: some of the companies have abandoned the use of separate "male" and "female" help want ads; other companies have begun to include women among its management trainers, while 30% of the companies have changed one of their benefits from a "widow's

That's what you'll say about the Great Master Series of Influential Homes in Anaheim. As master artists set trends for good art and modern design, we now project their thinking and accomplishments into a new trend of modestly-priced homes. P Taking a lesson from da Vinci, who believed that an artist must understand objects in order to paint them successfully, our architects conducted extensive research to understand what you need and want from a home. Then, with an artist's eye, they designed these wants and needs into a masterpiece. 🗷 Underground utilities follow Cezanne's trend in consideration of space. 🗷 As Rembrandt respected privacy, a decorative block wall is on your side and rear yards. 🗅 Your TERRACE KITCHEN's is as bright and cheery as a Brueghel. The love of Renoir for natural light was our inspiration for the sliding glass door and service windows that bring your outdoors inside. De Step inside and recognize De Goya's richness in the lush carpeting, exciting flooring and paneled rooms.

Van Gogh's trend of dynamic patterns leads your eye across the large and well-proportioned living room to the custom-coordinated fireplace and outside terrace.

Monet's lush garden paintings influenced the large planting areas.

Daring light effects such as your luminous kitchen ceiling follow a Degas trend. - The simplicity of Rousseau is imitated in your children's bedrooms and their adjoining play areas. I Lavish attention endows your master bedroom with the grand style of Gainsborough. I You'll find warmth and beauty in stone, as did Michelangelo, in your cultured marble pullman tops and elegant exterior masonry. • The overall effect has the serenity of a Raphael, • These are the broad strokes. To this we have added other master touches: concrete driveway, elegant Waste-King double oven, built-in electric can opener, custom lighting fixtures, intercom and outercom pre-wiring and prepared for air-conditioning. Frame all of this in the City of Anaheim, an established community of increasing value which is short on commuting time and long on entertainment— The Angels, Disneyland, Melodyland, parks, golf courses --- mould it by experienced developers--back it with a full one-year warranty-then offer it for a price $3,000 less than any comparable home in Orange County—and you have a masterpiece.

We urge you to come and see for yourself. The opportunity to view a masterpiece doesn't happen often—and it should not be missed. The chance to buy a masterpiece, at a price you can afford, is an even rarer experience. This is your time. Give your family a masterpiece which they can prize over the years.

Aug. Construction Start for California Exposition-Fair Project Scheduled

Project plans and financing for the new California Exposition and Fair have been approved and announced by the Exposition's executive committee in

The committee action clears the way for site clearing, ground-breaking and construction activities to begin in late summer to expedite engineering and construction in time for the Exposition's opening on its 630-acre site bounded by Sacramento's Arden Way, Interstate Highway 80 and the American River.

DESIGNED AS a showplace for California's people, heritage, industry and agriculture, and to provide new and modern quarters for the state's 108-year-old California State Fair, the grounds will be open yearround with a continuing cycle of attractions.

An extensive feasibility analysis indicates during the Exposition's first twelve years of operation it will host almost 50 million visitors and will have a total economic impact on the economy of California of $1

PLANS APPROVED for the Exposition reveal a unique concept in the composition of landscaped grounds and buildings. The central portion of the Exposition approximate the area of the successful Seattle World's Fair. Parking area, golf course, race track and other outdoor recreational areas increases this

Elements of the Exposition include:

Exposition Center-The integrated complex on a nine-acre plot houses exhibits and displays on California's resources, heritage, culture, agriculture, industry, art, travel, and historical sites. It is a combiof enclosed, roofed, and open landscaped areas.

Fair Activities Complex—This is an inter-related series of ramp-connected buildings to house all of the features of a modern state fair and exhibits;

Recreation Park—A fun-park of simulated mountains, seacoast, desert, forests and valleys to show California's natural resources; it is the nucleus of a chain of amusement rides and attractions like a boat trip "around the fair" and an unusual "sky tower." Two of California's finest golf courses will be built near the river.

Race Track-This will accommodate both race and show horses, and its facilities include exercise rings, tack and feed rooms, and related quarters; racetrack and grandstand are designed to accommodate 24,000

Industrial Exhibit Area—Here planned permanent year-round displays will supplement those in the Exposition Center, and will emphasize California industry. This area will contain industrial exhibits and buildings developed by industry itself, under direction of the Exposition.

VISITORS MAY easily walk through the main areas in a single day's tour, according to Eugene R. non, general manager of California Exposition and Fair Corporation.

In addition, a variety of transportation means will be available to them. A boat canal, a minirail, and a skyride will supplement pedestrian and ground transportation with vista tours for easy transit between exhibits, parks, and other areas

Waiting for housing prices to come down?

By 1970, they may be 20% higher than today.

Every buyer would like to see lower prices for a change. But will he? Check the record. House prices in the Los Angeles area have gone up about 15% since 1958, says the U.S. Department of Labor. Now they're rising faster. Local authorities estimate that increasing labor and materials costs are adding about $1,000 a year to the price of a $20,000 house.

At this rate, the price level could easily be 20% higher than today by 1970. And what is to hold it down? Newcomers keep flocking to Southern California, bidding against each other for a spot in the sun. New suburbs, shopping centers, and business and industrial sites keep gobbling up the shrinking supply of available land.

All this, plus the inflationary impact of the Viet Nam war, points to one conclusion: the longer you wait to buy a house, the more you'll pay for it.

Waiting for interest to come down? The recent upward tilt in mortgage rates may worry you as much as house prices.

That's only natural, But what does higher interest really cost you? A typical ½% rise runs to 30¢ a month for each $1,000 you borrow on a 25-year loan, That's $6 a month on $20,000.

It's no fun paying even this much more. Yet rates may go still higher, like everything else. Many experts predict they will. A reassuring note: by buying now, you're covered against further interest hikes. That could be important protection.

Buying vs. renting: which costs less?

The equity you build up as an owner certainly beats collecting rent receipts. In addition, mortgage interest and property taxes are deductible on your Federal income tax,

And a house (especially in beoming Southern California) is a great hedge against inflation. In an area everybody else wants to move to, house values historically rise faster

Available to smart shoppers: bargains

Good buys can be found today because there's never been such a great selection of houses in Southern California, Many new homes can be bought with little down, and long-term loans. Many not-so-new homes offer most attractive mortgages, at interest rates below the prevailing level, in addition to good locations and lots of living space.

Security Title suggests that instead of waiting for housing prices to come down, it's more realistic to move into your own house now and watch it go up.

Your real estate broker knows the best buys. in your area. His professional knowledge about values, linancing, taxes, local schools and other matters can be most valuable. Look him up. With his help, you'll find that now's the time to buy!

1, for one, am atraid of Virginia Woolf, but . . .

Premieres are still glamorous

JACK OAKIE, CAROL CHANNING Carol wears newest architectural haircur

JANE WYMAN AND MIKE NICHOLS she looked glamorous; he directed new controversial "Virginia Woolf" movie

By Mary Ellis Carlton Director, Women's News

Everybody's asking "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

The answer: practically everyone.

Hollywood has never made a movie even faintly resembling Edward Albee's study of marital frustration and . . never before has such searing drama, laced with outrageous comedy, been viewed on a movie

But the movie's world premiere at the Hollywood Pantages had all the glamor and glitter of the film capital's

Only thing missing was appearance of the two stars—Liz Taylor and Richard Burton, currently in Italy for filming of their latest picture, "The Taming of the Shrew.

But all the rest of movie colony was there.

Everyone wanted to see if Warner Bros.' controversial film lived up to its reputation.

They came in their Rolls Royces and Cadillacs, their Bentleys and chauffeurpiloted limousines to make up their own minds about this much publicized "new milestone in motion pictures."

AS KLEIG lights pierced the night, crowds of onlookers and autograph seekers crushed their way closer to the theater to catch glimpses of Hollywood on parade.

They squealed at Academy Award winner Julie Andrews, who shunned flash bulbs and TV cameras ... whistled at Carol Channing's shenanigans, sequined flapper dress and kooky architectural hairdo . . . cheered such old favorites as Gregory Peck and Cesar Romero . . . oh-ed and ah-ed at the sedately glamorous beauty of Merle Oberon and Jane Wyman.

One Hollywood veteran compared it to that eventful night in the 20s when the world premiere of "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, brought sound to the silver screen.

OF, COURSE, even the most moviestruck onlooker is forced to admit that Hollywood Now is different from Hol lywood Then.

Hollywood Then had an almost exclusive monopoly on glamor . . . on solid gold Cadillacs, champagne-filled swimming pools, jewelled gowns and full-length minks.

Hollywood Then was a celluloid never-never land, the only glamor for millions in the workaday world of

Not so in today's affluent times. America's garages are filled with shiny new cars . . . jewelled gowns and fulllength minks hang in many a closet ... swimming pools no lunger make a big splash in the status-symbol department.

EVEN SO, attending a Hollywood black-tie premiere is an exciting experience-anytime!

When the film colony turns out for a gala, you can bet your premiere tickets (they're difficult to come by!) that you'll see some of the most gla morous AND kooky fashions this a studio wardrobe department.

Take, for instance, some of the starlets at the "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" spectacular,

Apparently the young Hollywood set is more concerned these days with looking different than being glamorous. The going "coiffure" is to pile hair high, then let part of it fall down. There's no particular pattern for this fall of the coif . . . it may be a few unraveled curls, or it may be deliberate chaos.

With the young crowd, flapper dresses are more for evening than the long jewelled creations worn by the Janet Leighs and Jane Wymans

But no one out-flappered Carol Channing. Her blond mane was blunt cut at mid-ear on one side, chin-length on the other. For a surprise exit: three sharp points dipping at the nape. Her short-short dress, a solid armour of silver sequins, was low-belted and flounced with egret feathers.

Wild-haired Phyllis Diller created quite a stir, too, in an unfitting long satin gown of black and white awning

An attractive note about the men: many wore satin vests under their tuxedo jackets, a welcome relief from those cumbersome cummerbunds,

ALL IN ALL, the audience was quite a contrast to star-performer Liz

Duo-pianists Ladd Thomas and Robert Prichard, guest artists for Tuesday night's Starlight Serenade in Recreation Park, began their professional association casually.

Each had a growing reputation as a concert artist—Thomas as pianist and organist, Prichard as pianist, organist and harpsichordist. The two dark-haired young men knew each other in many musical organizations. One day Prichard said to Ladd, "Let's try two pianos."

Since that day two years ago, they have been in increasing demand as duo-pianists. Several of their concerts have been with conductor Lauris Jones. They were so warmly received in February when they played with the Long Beach Symphony with Jones conducting that they have been invited back for Tuesday's important engagement. The program, which will begin at 8 p.m., marks Long Beach's farewell to its conductor-this will be Jones' last scheduled concert with the Long Beach Symphony.

Since they were founded July 24, 1962, by Mrs. Herman H. Ridder, who still serves as honorary chairman, the admission-free Starlight Serenades have become synonymous with summer.

Previous concerts have been played in Bixby Park, but because of landscaping under way there, Tuesday's program will be in the more spacious Recreation Park on E. Seventh Street at Park Avenue. The same acoustical shell used for previous concerts will be on the stage of the bandstand which is being extended and re-enforced to support the weight of the soloists' two Bluthner concert grands. There will be seating for 4,000.

To make certain the music can be heard clearly the city is installing sound equipment; special lighting will add to the visual effect. An area will be designated for blind listeners.

THIS YEAR'S chairman is Mrs. Alex J. Kadvany and it was in her home, 3334 E. First St., that the two pianists talked about their

DON'T SUPPOSE anyone actually did kick their shoes off and romp around the patio Saturday night at Ed and Margaret Stepp's home, 290 St. Joseph Ave. However, the Stepps had made such gaily informal plans for a bon voyage party for Elmo and Mary Adams, wouldn't be a whit surprised if several didn't WANT to do just that.

It was cocktails and dinner for close friends of the Adamses who leave July 3 on their first trip to Europe. They'll fly over and then dawdle and ogle their way all over the continent until mid-September.

IT WAS fiesta bright Thursday when Connie (Mrs. Cliff) Reiman, Nancy (Mrs. Myri) Ott and Thel-nore (Mrs. Max) Nichols had a Mexican-themed brunch at League House from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The hostesses were dresses in vivid Mexican colors as did assisting hostesses, Bindy Vossburg, Nancy's daughter, Mary Ann McCauley, Connie's They used flowers in brilliant colors everyplace there was room to park a bouquet and served Mexican food, muy callente, to complete theme, deliciously!

AFTER FIVE years spent in Omaha, Neb., Mary Jo and Ken Lyons are home. Only it isn't just plain Ken anymore but Dr. Ken Lyons, MD. That's the reason for the years in Omaha, where Ken attended Creighton Medical School and interned there, as well. For the time being, with their three children, Jim Kathy and Kevin (4, 3 and 1-year-olders, in that order) they'll divide time between her parents, Cliff and Frances Rodgers, 3357 Easy Ave., and his folks, Bill and Jean Lyons, who recently moved from LB to 10840 Janine Lane, Cypress.

Unfortunately, Ken can't start a practice (to put into practice what he has practiced so long) because the U.S. Air Force Medical Corps has indicated they'd like the pleasure of his company for a couple of years, beginning about September. At the end of service he'll hang up his shingle in Long Beach.

MOST OF us have known about Greg Killings worth and his gang of teenagers who belong to the Virgina Country Players (numbering about 50 strong and 50 enthusiastic). This past week, however, VCP hit the national spotlight with a two page spread of pictures and story in House and Garden in the current (July) issue. It tells how Greg showed his folks, Architect Ed, and singing star, Laura, how they could utilize their gardens and terrace for an outdoor theater for group's annual summer productions and how the scheme was put into action. This story so intrigued Raiph Story of KNXT television he has set up three filming sessions for a documentary on the players scheduled for airing July 24.

This summer's show (and the one Story's program will cover) is an original, "The Late Marty Washington Might As Well Be Dead," and has to do with an airline pilot who is always late. It is based on a script and lyrics written by John Harding, 19. Music was composed by Bruce Polay, 16, who will also conduct the orchestra. This show opens July 23.

The House and Garden bit was started two years ago when they took pictures for a creative garden fea-ture. Then the writer became intrigued with the theater bit. Not only did the New York editor come take a look-see but the West Coast editor and a crew of four spent a full five days filming the Killingsworths last summer, from dawn to dusk. "They must have taken 250 color shots," Laura told me, "then did it as a black and white layout."

HEADED for Indian Ford Guest Ranch near Sisters, Ore., are Paul and Kit Staley and their own four little Indians, to spend a week in that plush, green forested area. The Staley boys, aged 12 and 9, will have their own wrangler and program to keep them busy, while the pre-schoolers, aged 5 and 3, will be occupied from sun-up to bedtime by a special program geared to their interests. This will leave Mom and Pop free to lounge or join ranch activities planned for adults to hearts' content:

AUGUST. WILL be a blinkin dream-come-true month for Reg and Mary Barden. They'll be on a month's vacation to Europe their first trip abroad. Having seen their share of this continent, they decided it was time to see how the other side of the world lives. They'll visit big cities but want to explore the out of the way places too.

They're hoping to confirm reservations for a stay in a castle on the Rhine and get tickets to see a performance of the famed dancing horses in Austria of which the legendary expression, "horses that dance on the air." is about.

In addition to England, France, Austria and Germany, they'll be in Italy, Switzerland and Holland.

DUE HOME as of this weekend are Lee and Roberta Wakefield and daughters, Nancy and Carol, who have been vacationing at a place called Rankin Ranch up in Sequoia country.

"There is the excitement of ensemble playing for duo-pianists," Prichard explained. "There is a brilliance of sound, balanced and polished by two people, that sur-passes that of a single pianist. It's necessary to maintain constant rapport - not always by eye contact but each must be aware of balance, tempi.

"THERE IS great satisfaction when everything goes What about the times when everything doesn't go just right?

"Everyone knows those."

Thomas laughed. "Actually, absolute perfection is an illusive idea."

Duo-piano music is written on four scores, each pianist playing a different part. The literature is not extensive, but more contemporary work is being composed and commissioned.

The program Tuesday will include Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" and a new work by Morton Gould, to be heard for the first time in this area, "Dance Variations" for orchestra and two pianos.

OTHER NUMBERS will be selections from "Mary Poppins," "West Side Story" and "Do I Hear a Waltz"; Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty Ballet" and Khatcha-turian's "Sabre Dance."

As in past years, many families will arrive in late afternoon with picnic suppers, blankets to spread on the wide green lawns, cushions for benches. Ages will range from tots in strollers to seniors in autoettes. Several bus lines go to Recrea-tion Park and there is free parking.

"We hope everyone knows about the change of location for this concert," said Mrs. Kadvany. "Recreation Park this time—not Bixby!"

RICHARD CODD

By MILDRED K. FLANARY , P-T Food Editor

The inference wasn't subtle! He was recommended for the column as a "man who could REALLY cook." It's noteworthy his wife, Jean, heartily agrees.

Today's candidate for Chef of the Week, Richard Codd, is associate administrator of St. Mary's Hospital, a position to which he was appointed five years ago, and now is concentrating on expansion-development of the hospital.

Since entering hospital management, Codd has served at Daniel Freeman Hospital, Inglewood, and Queen of Valley, West Covina, before coming to Long

SWIMMING and golfing have been their foremost hobbies. Now they're busy concentrating on the port and starboard side of a sailboat.

Codd is an authority on pipes, too! But by the time he remembers where he leaves them-has them thoroughly renovated, stuffed and stoked, there isn't much time left for enjoying a smoke.

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S INLAND PASSAGE

The new shortcut to Alaska

By Fred Taylor Kraft Travel Editor

VICTORIA, B.C.-A new 330-mile ocean highway stretching through one of the most beautiful and unspoiled wonderlands of North America awaits Southern Californians who visit British Columbia this summer.

This travelers' nirvana is the majestic Inland Passage, and it became a reality when British Columbia Ferry Authority Fleet, largest of its kind anywhere, recently in-augurated service of its spanking new $6 million ferryliner Queen of Prince Rupert from the bustling Vancouver Island port of Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert situated on the province's mainland, only 25 miles from the southern tip of Alaska.

Not only will visitors find this highway system to the sea cuts 800 miles off the driving route to northern B.C., Alaska and the Yukon: they will travel in high style during the overnight cruise that takes them through an area seemingly as primitive as when it was first visited by a white man-Sir Francis Drake - almost 400 years

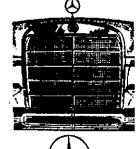

MOST Californians who visit B.C. drive first to Vancouver, Canada's third largest city, see world-famed Stanley Park and other eyepopping attractions before proceeding to Kelsey Bay from which they begin their drive to the Inland Passage. To do this you motor to Tsawassen, 23 miles south of Vancouver, where you put you car (if you are driving) and yourself aboard the first British Columbia's Ferries' "Queen" for a miniature ocean cruise across the Gulf of Georgia. In less than two hours you are in Victoria, capital of B.C. whose British atmosphere is overpowered only by its extravagant old-world elegance. Pause long enough to absorb the atmospherelike paying a call on the ohso-British Empress Hotel and being served tea and crumpets on white linen napery--and by having the grand tour grownsommer measurement and which may begin at the Empress on one of the parlour coaches of Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Your escort will stop (as he did for me) at such famous spots as the Royal London Wax Museum, Undersea Gardens, the Butchart be photographed on a horse-drawn tally-ho wagon on one of the many stops, and tell you where you may find the best English china and woolens, but you won't need his help to discover for yourself that this is the last bastion of the walrus mustache in North America.

YOU LOOK longingly hack at Victoria as you start your drive north to Kelsey Bay, southern terminus of the Inland Passage, and then the city and its quaint elegance are temporarily forgotten.

You glide over the 49th parallel at Ladysmith through giant forests and tiny meadows that sparkle with wildflowers in the warm sun below mountains coned in white. A burst of lilacs and roses brings wellkept lawns alive. broom yellows the hillsides. Deer dart across the concrete ribbon in front of heavily laden logging trucks, and the inlets and lakes are jumping with king salmon, steelhead and trout. You drive through interesting little cities like Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River.

At Campbell River, fishermen's lies have to be extralarge for this is the home of the famous tyee salmon.

When you reach Kelsey Bay the Queen or Prince Rupert is waiting (fare for car, including driver, $60 one way, $114 round trip; other adults, $30 one way, $54 round trip; children 5-11, half fare).

THE "QUEEN" heads north from Kelsey Bay every other day at 1:30 p.m. She can handle 430 passengers, cars, and all the color film you can carry aboard.

There are staterooms for the family, and both dining and cafeteria service. The scenery is on the house.

Summer Beauty

It is easy to have a smooth lovely complexion, despite the skin-coarsening effect of summer. The poles open much wider in the heat so it's essential that they have free movement to open and close without being clogged. Protect from cosmetic plgments, dust, and powder by smoothing on your oil of Olay. This will also protect the complexion 'against harsh sun rays and will give the skin a milky bloom even on the hottest days. Use your lemon Jelvyn daily to refine and tone:

The time and thought proved well worthwhile because he came up with a play that was certain to win for him provided diamonds broke 3-2 and trumps broke 3-1 or better.

You are looking at all the cards. See if you can come up with this play.

He started by leading a diamond to dummy's ace. Then he ruffed a diamond with a high trump. This was the first key play. The second was to lead a low trump toward dummy.

WEST WENT up with the iack and forced dummy with a? club but it did him no good. South ruffed another diamond with another high trump. This set up the rest of dummy's diamonds. Then he drew West' two trumps by leading his last high trump and the low trump he had kept carefully to put dummy in to run off the rest of the diamond suit. Once upon a time a dog had a dish and a collar and maybe a leashand that was it. But high fashion has come to dogdom and today the family pooch may have a wardrobe of accessories as extensive as some breadwinners, such as the proud fellow on today's cover who shows off in hat and vest. He didn't don his boots because he knew he already was in trouble with his girl friend, the white poodle beside him, for showing off. For the story of fashion's invasion of the canine world, read "A Dog's Life? You May Want to Trade Places," on page 5.

A FOUR-LEGGED "walking" truck and a set of "mechanical muscles" giving an ordinary man a giant's strength are new research projects that may start a revolution in the "heavywork" trades in factory and foundry and in specialty jobs like underwater salvage operations.

Both of these unique machines, using an advanced system of levers, control linkages, and servo-mechanisms, can mimic-and amplify - the movements of operators, dramatically extending strength and endurance. The man-machine "marriage" will combine the operator's dexterity brainpower and all-round versatillty with the machine's size, strength and rugged-

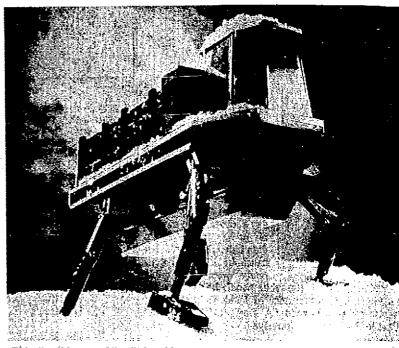

WORN LIKE an external skeleton, the "incchanical muscles" machine, nick-named "HardiMan" by General Electric's Research and Development department, will permit its operator to lift a 1,500-pound load while exerting only a fraction of this force. He will be able to perform general load - handling tasks, including walk-ing, lifting, climbing, pushing and pulling. It will be attached to the operator at the feet, forearms and waist.

The prototype will be connected to a separate power supply by means of flexible hydraulic lines, but later models will have self-contained power units.

The operator of the walking truck, by manipulating controls attached to his arms, legs and torso, will be able to maneuver the 10x4feet body in any direction. Astride 6-foot legs, the 10foot fall vehicle will be able to transport a quarter-ton load over extremely rugged terrain impassable to

If a wheeled vehicle was to move through soft soil for 1,000 feet, it would have to compact the soil for the complete 1,000 feet. However, the walking truck will only have to trample down the dirt where the operator places its feet. As a result. the new track will require less horsepower per pound than a conventional vehicle,

> It was in 1954, after several years of preliminary study, that General Electric began intensive work on various manipulator programs. At the same time the Land Locomotion Laboratory of the U.S. Army Tank-Automotive Center began research on the feasibility of walking machines, prompted by a need for a vehicle that could transport heavy loads over rough terrain.

The G.E. work resulted in an electromechanical "force that allowed a human operator to control a machine as if he were a part of itoadless areas, actually feeling what the It has taken 15 years of machine "felt."

MISS RULE: Please give brief data on ROBBINS. —J. R., San Francisco; R. M., D. P. Long Brach

D. R., Long Beach.

ROBBINS is an English family with an ancestor baptized Robin, a nickname taken from Robert, The ancient Anglo-Saxon warrior name Robert meant "shining with fame." Records of Cambridge, England, in 1273 list Dera Robins, a remote ancestor, In medieval London the Robbins were granted a coat-of-arms, a red shield decorated with two fleurs-de-lis. Robbins descendants were 17th century settlers of Connecticul and Massachusetts.

MISS RULE: May we have data on JAKUBOWSKI, KOPPKE, KOPPE, KOPP, KOPPISCH, KOPPE, H. J., J. R., M. K., J. F., Long Beach; W. K., Garden Grove.

JAKUBOWSKI is Polish, joining "Jakub," (Jacob in English) meaning "supplanter," with "-owski," the complete name denoting "sons of the man from Jacob's village." KOEPE, originally the Georman Kooke, as well as KOPPE, KOPCHO, KOPF and COPE are all German variations of the nickname "Kop," also derived from Jacob. The Kopke shield is blue, decorated with a rampant mountain goal within a gold border. For Koppe the shield is silved, emblazoned with a grapevine; for Jakubowski the shield is red, centered with a large silver rose.

MISS RULE: Please explain FICKETT,—C. F., Garden Grove.

FICKETT began in England as Ficquet, developed from the Old German "Fic" meaning "Clever one," coupled with "-el" for "young man." Henry Fikel was a progenitor in the late 13th century. No shield is available for Fickett.

MISS RULE: Would like data on SASSE.—W. S., Lakewood.

SASSE is north German, derived from Sachse, referring in the 14th century to "man from Sexony." The ancient term "Sechse" or "Saxon" meant swordsmen." The Sasse armoriel shield granted in Holland is silver, decorated with a red cross placed between three black heraldic birds and a green clover leaf.

The House Magic Built

. . . With a Little Help From Some Spooks

By Bonita Lynch

O YOU remember the first magic show you ever saw? Will you ever forget your first incredulous wonder at seeing a beautiful girl locked in a shiny cabinet only to reappear within seconds from the wings? Do you still feel a thrill whenever you read a poster that says: "See the Mysterious Merlin saw a woman in half RIGHT BE-FORE YOUR EYES!"?

You're not the only one who answers to the ancient lure. From the dim reaches of antiquity the art of sorcery and trickery always has captured the imagination of man and woman alike.

Today, a house of illusion known as the Magic Castle is attracting to its doors in Hollywood, Calif., increasing numbers of the great, near-great, and just plain magic buffs from all parts of the world. There is no place quite like it anywhere in the U.S.

Perched on a hilltop, just a few blocks off busy Hollywood Boulevard, this gray, mysterious Victorian mansion is an anachronism in the midst of modern apartments. It is the only private club in the country especially fashioned for magicians, magic lovers, and their guests.

IF YOU ARE lucky enough to wangle an invitation from a member (of which there are now nearly 1,400) and manage to cross its eerie threshold, there on any given night you might rub elbows with Cary Grant or Charlton Heston, or maybe a German countess or U. S. Navy admiral, all waiting to be thrillingly frightened, or awed at some feat of legerdemain.

There are approximately 400 amateur or professional magicians who are regular members, the remaining thousand are aficionados from the sports, entertainment and business worlds, professional people and industrial tycoons, all brought together by their mutual love of the mystic.

ANYWHERE FROM 500 to 600 persons crowd into the castle during an evening to Sunday, June 26, 1966

Just five years ago William Larsen, now an executive for CBS, and his brother, Milt, a TV writer, both talented amateur magicians like their father, decided this gingerbread, rambling residence built in 1907 could be a living shrine to the fastdisappearing cult of necromancy.

They rescued the turreted and musty house, situated on Franklin Ave., from demolition, spent endless hours in restoring it, enriching it atmospherically with dim lighting and a 19th century atmosphere. Then opened it in 1962 with 64 members,

As befits a Magic Castle, the only way you can enter is to utter the magic password to a wise old owl. If he passes you, a bookcase swings wide to admit you, and you find yourself at an elegant bar and lounge, and enveloped by a sense of instant camaraderie. Then you might elect to ascend the heavily carpeted staircase, or try to take the gilded elevator cage aloftif you manage to make it past the Frankenstein-type monster who already occupies it.

yours is a private party. Or you might enjoy the excellent cuisine in the red plush Gay 90s dining room.

The Castle is now busy instituting a 'Magic Library" on the third floor where magic books are to be collected for the use of regular members who will have to gain admittance, not with some juxtaposltion of magic words but through a com-puter-type "card key" (shades of electronic in which all members participate, and all receive the benefits of a tidy little nest egg for our annual vacation.

This is a game we call "Eat it next summer," and it encourages qualities of willpower, thriftiness, helpfulness and anticipation, By foregoing an occasional treat or luxury, and putting the money, instead, into a vacation fund—to be used the following summer, we all share in the spirit of saving and the fulfillment of more pleasures on our vacation.

Our vacation budget provides for healthy and pleasant accommodations, adequate travel expenses plus necessary clothing and equipment. But the little 'extras" that pop up are the ones which make the discernible dent in the billfold.

The extras, then, are the ones for which the special vacation fund provides. In this little game the saving is painless at the time but worthwhile in the end!

One year at the Grand Canyon, our daughter re-marked, "Oh, if I hadn't savings plan in our family, bought that new sweater last month I could afford the 'donkey trail trip'." Another year, the expenses of seashore activities were too numerous for our sons' allowances and job-savings, and they too, regretted those earlier purchases of new football gear, another baseball glove, an extra movie.

In passing up that big, luscious sundae at the drugstore fountain (in favor of a lemonade) we say, "We'll eat it next summer" and pocket the money for the fund. Or, refusing the temptation of a dress sale or "Sweaters Reduced," we say "We'll wear it next summer."

Father gives up smoking for a month, puts the cost in the fund and says, "I'll smoke it next summer." Mother reconsiders making the new blouse and chuckles, "I'll make it next summer!"

When the family pitches in to wax and polish the car (instead of having a professional job) the money saved goes into the "wax It next summer" box.

The movie someone gives up, the extra golf match, the out-of-town ball game . . . all of these furnish the cost equivalent to be tucked into the savings fund, and the decisions for these are entirely voluntary. So it goes, through the months little willing deprivations and savings accumulated toward an enticing additional some-thing for the vacation.

This seems good practice in self-discipline and the encouragement of saving with a purpose, Everyone is allowed to put into the fund any amount he or she wishes. Once a month the money is entered in our bank under a vacation savings fund.

Throughout the year, this is earning for us as well as. later, providing means for an extra excursion, a special side trip, a deluxe sight-seeing tour, a glamorous souvenir or treat.

Aimed at dropouts, potential school dropouts and un-employed or unemployable high school graduates, the NYC is sponsored in Long Reach by the Long Beach Welfare Council, under supervision of the Economic and Youth Opportunities Agency-the countywide anti-poverty agency.

The out-of-school phase, which still has many openings, currently provides a unique educational opportunity for nearly 2,000 youths besides the 193 enrolled locally. "In Long Beach we have had 750 youths go through the program since it began over a year ago," said Dwight Welch, NYC Coordinator. The greatest problem connected with the out-of-school program is contacting the youths who need the help, he added.

There now are 100 openings in the local out-of-school program, and youths who have been out of school for six months and need a job should contact the Youth Opportunities Center at 1318 Pinc Avc.

As to the program's successes. Welch noted that local enrollees earned a total of $21,319 in April.

The NYC has helped to find employment for them within governmental agencies, the municipal government and non-profit, private organizations.

relations matters, what with the deepness of the hurt on both sides usually being expressed in frighteningly venomous language. But even here, humor results.

For instance, so lawyers' lore holds, there was the time a judge listened intently to both parties in a case against a man charged by his wife with failing to support

After hearing the evidence, the judge found in favor of the wife, admonished the errant husband, and declared "this woman must be taken care of, and I'm going to give her $100 a month."

you, sir, and I'll try to give her a dollar or two myself from time to time."

There are probably 10,000 lawyers across the country who will swear to have been personally present when that rock was pulled. And another 10,000 who'll swear that they were involved in the following conversation with a client:

Lawyer: "Mrs. Blank, I've Just had a long conversation with your husband's attorney, and we have come up with a property settlement that we feel is eminently fair to both of you.'

Outraged Client: "Fair to both of us! I could have done that myself. What do you think I hired a lawyer for?'

Superior Court Judge George Francis, who sits in Long Beach, recalls one device a suspicious husband used to make sure his wife didn't play around, or, at least, to impeda her somewhat.

"When we were ready to go to bed," the wife testl-fied at her divorce hearing, "he would tie all my shoes together, even the slippers; to make sure I wouldn't go out after he fell asleen!

But what Judge Francis admits is difficult to describe adequately was the pride in the woman's voice as she told of her husband's jealousy.

Her husband was 80, and she was 77!

Generally, damages sought in a lawsuit are higher than the plaintiff—the person making the claim-expects to get, so as to leave room for compromise, But one man accomplished his purpose by going the other way.

BACK WHEN it was impossible to do so-it isn't any To this the husband responded: "That's very kind of more-he filed an alienation of affections suit against his wife's boy friend and, scornfully, said he had suffered damages to the extent of $50 by virtue of his wife's defection.

And it probably was another cynical defendant in a divorce action who multered that "Alimony is a system by which, when two people make a mistake, one of them continues to pay for it."

lumber on "their" lot! They sadly approached the workmen and were told a local builder was constructing the home — but happily — as an investment. In two minutes they called the builder and were able to arrange the purchase and even to have a voice in some of the construction.

As Mrs. Giffln says: "In a way we built it, but in a way we didn't!"

The lot is enormous; so large. In fact, that it took 58 trucks of topsoil just to begin landscaping.

THE DECISION to build a terraced patio instead of a pool was easy. Actually, iney prefer the beach and Giffin says he was tired of "pool sitting." They love the beach so much that they have spent the past five vacations on Waikiki!

These truly are Californians, not only by birth but also by way of life. Every-thing revolves around the summer and outdoor living. They just tolerate winters and begin to feel relaxed only when the sun shines brightly,

Their house reflects this way of life. The architecture generally is provincial with a shake roof and dual facade of batten board and shiplap with touches of used brick. The 35x35-foot semicircular concrete patio was designed for dancing. It overlooks a lovely sloping garden area with much room for badminton, croquet and even luaus! The Giffins have been known to give parties outside for as many as 75 people!

The grounds are beautifully landscaped, with sidewalk contours softened by Gazania and Natal plum growing both front and back. They have used eastern birch and western rubber tree to complement each

THE GIFFINS still feit the need of water, so the landscape architect gave them a waterfall. This is particularly lovely since the

The water even passes through the center of some of the old volcanic rock.

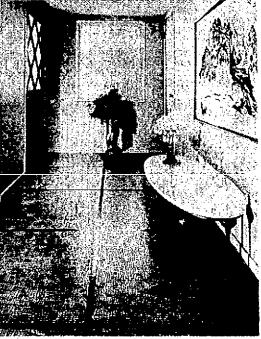

The home is large enough to accommodate two very busy daughters. Both girls are active in school and are quite creative. They were given sole rights to their bedrooms. They decorate, move furniture at will, have private phones and personal televisions. What more could 18- and 13-year-old young ladies wish for?

Glenda, who plans to be un elementary schoolteacher, obviously loves violets and pansies for she selected shades of lavender and purple. The complete room, from the royal purple carpet to the violet and organza print bedspread, was fur-nished in her choice. Her furniture is all white sparked with gold.

THE LIVING room has a slightly formal approach in furnishings. The room gained its color scheme from an oil painting which Mrs. Glffin particularly likes. Predominantly electric blue, the scene is the New York skyline and building lights actually turn on. This is most effective at night.

The antique white silk, circular sofa and the gold leaf demitasse tables pro-vide a perfect foreground for the painting.

THE SMALL walk-through dining room has been given a formal touch with the use of mahogany traditional furniture. Dahlia Culture

Dahlias may be planted from tubers, according to flower form and color, or from seedling flats generally available only in mixed col-ors. The latter are the small border species. The larger forms are usually planted

The seedlings may be planted and treated as any annual might be, though they produce tubers which can be planted again the following year. The tubers, however, deserve some special care.

Plant them in full sun along the coast (where they are at their very best, incidentally) or with some parttime shade inland. Wherever you plant them, however, don't overdo the shade,

Set the tubers about four or five inches deep. In harder soils, it is well to dig down another six inches to loosen the soll before planting. If the taller varieties are planted they will have to be staked and the stake should be set in at planting time so us to avoid later damage to the tuber. The growing eye should be placed toward the

Water frequently, but don't feed dahlias until they have grown up 12 inches or so, at which time you should both feed and top them to encourage side branching and increased bloom.

CARL SAYS learning to play the new instrument is easier than the regular accordion. And he ought to know. He helped the inventor sketch the idea back about 1929 when the two men were friends in Colorado. He's played them all-from the first commercially unsuccessful model down through the newest, that Bonmancini is planning to sell from his base in Italy, where for the past ten years he has owned an accordionmaking company,

Who Needs Common Sense?

ADY JANE FRANCESCA Wilde, "Speranza" as she liked to be known, and mother of Oscar Wilde, was a celebrated champion of Irish fotklore.

She and her husband, Sir William Wilde, an eye surgeon, wrote three books on the subject. Lady Wilde noted the well-known Irish predilection for superstition, and as American folklorist Richard Dorson says in his foreword to "Folktales of Ireland" (University of Chicago Press, $5.50, edited and translated by Sean O'Sullivan) she ascribed it to "an instinctive dislike for the narrow limits of common sense coupled with a passionate yearning for the vague, the mystle, the

Sean O'Sullivan (to speak the Gaelic truth he is Sean O'Suilleabhain) of the Irish Folklore Commission went fishing in the more than a million and a half pages of Gaelic manuscript on file in the commission's archives and he has hooked a big basketful of beauties.

COMMON SENSE? I eave that to the tidy tales of the Teuton. You'll find a little of it in this collection by O'Sullivan, but you'll have fun.

These are tales told by the Irish, so it is somewhat redundant to point out that the eight longest and best stories are of warriors and kings.

In the tale of "Young Conall of Howth" is this situation to delight an Irishman's heart:

"I suppose it is you who has taken my wife from me, you blackguard'," said the big man.

'Not to make you a short answer'," said Conall, "'you had no wife that I could take. You took MY wife from ME.

"THEY ATTACKED EACH other. For two days and nights they fought, and Conall's fury was increasing all the time. No matter how he tried, the big man could not strike any blow on Conall. . . . On the evening of the third day, Conall delivered a warrior's blow so weighty and fierce that it twisted the hig man around and he fell on his back."

In the tale of Ceatach, that king's son fights the Great Hag of the Hills for seven nights and seven days and cuts off her head on the eighth day. "The head was whistling as it rose in the air, and it was humming as it fell, hoping to join the body again. But Ceatach was ready. He kicked the head with his big boot and sent it across a ridge and seven acres of ground.

"'Twas well for you you did that,' said the

The Irish are a Christian folk, but the pagan in them is never downed in the religious tales of saints and sinners. And witches and wizards, the wise and the witless, all abound in these matchless tales.

CIVIL WAR MEDICINE. By Stewart M. Brooks, Charles C. Thomas, $6.

The spate of books that came with the centenary of the Civil War left almost untouched the medical aspects of the conflict. In Viet Nam helicopters whisk the wounded GI from the battlefield to a hospital behind the front, thence to the Philippines or the U.S. In a relative trice. The Civil War, medically speaking, was "four hideous years of twisted flesh, burning fevers, oozing raw stumps." It was wholesale agony but out of its pesthouses came a military medical revolution. THE MONEY HUNTERS. By Cothburn O'Neal. Crown, Cothburn O'Neal's novel probes the morality of the money-raising business, a big business. Through the medium of Larry Shelton, who talks the town of Corinth into believing it needs a million-dollar gymnasium for the President's Physical Fitness Program, all the trickery, all the gimmickry and the good works too of professional fund-raising are exposed. The amalgam of badgering and arm twisting, and honest hard work behind a fund-raising campaign is revealed.

A Look at Lean Years

Forest Jordan

THE AMERICAN WRITER AND THE GREAT DEPRES-SION, Edited by Harvey Swados, Bobbs-Merrill $7.50.

WHEN AN earthquake shook down the towers of Wall Street and the aftershocks rumbled across the land for a full decade afterward, Americans were left. at first, in a state of shock which later turned to fear and then cold despair as the months of struggling for existence in economic and social darkness turned into уеать.

A generation has now grown up under the warm, friendly skies of prosperity without ever having felt the cold, hostile grip of hunger. It is true that in the 60s, the shadow of the bomb hovers on the horizon. But we turn our backs to it. In the 30s there was a different spectre which did not hang at the far corner of vision, but covered the sky. It was hard times. It was real. And it was now.

FOR THOSE who remember and for those who would like a panoramic view of the era, editor Swados presents this anthology. Swados sets forth two aims: to convey the impact of the depression. on the life and thought of the American people and to present what he calls "a cross section of the good writing of the period." The anthology is part of the new American Heritage Series.

The list of writers is a roll call of leading literary talent-of the 20th Century: Sherwood Anderson, John Stein-heck, Erskine Caldwell, James Agee, James T. Farrell, Edward Dahlberg, Edmund Wilson, Nelson Algren, E. E. Cummings, Marc Blitzstein, John DosPassos, Nathanael West, Archibald MacLelsh, Thomas Wolfe and a number of others.

SOME OF them did their best writing during that period and subsequent efforts of theirs have never quite measured up Steinbeck, Farrell and DosPassos come readily to mind in this category. Some fine writing also was done by unknowns who were chronicling the American scene either from garrets and park benches or under the helpful wing of a government assistance program

Some of the most accurate, forthright accounts of the depression come from these struggling beginners.

The book is segmented, with portions covering, among other things, the industrial scene, the rural life, and political ideologies that burgeoned.

Amid the cries of despair

TWO WHO ARE GONE-The words are Adlai Stevenson's, the photographs are from cameras of Cornell Capa, Inge Morath and Stevenson's son, John Fell Stevenson, in "Adlai Stevenson's Public Years" (Grossman, $8.95). Included in collection are photos by his son during trips to Russia.

there were vaices of hope, too, and Swados includes these to give us a full picture. There are millhands forming unions, farmers finding a way out through the a half forgotten heritage.

An excellent introduction by Swados, graphic pictures and an index helps round out what is surely one of the finest collections of writings on a stark, searing era in American history.

Token Meet

By Maurice M. Gould

DISNEYLAND will be the scene in August of the 16th annual convention of the American Vecturist Association, contender for the oddest-sounding name in numismatics. Many people have never heard of this term, which applies to the art of transportation token collecting.

This highly specialized collector will go to any lengths to obtain the pieces he needs, including street-car, bus, subway and parking meter tokens—in fact, almost anything used in the field of transportation. Some of these pieces go back to the 1830s; the Maverick or Roxbury coaches then were drawn by horses in the Boston, Mass., area, and their tokens are very desirable.

The American Vecturist Association is extremely active and its publication, "The Fare Box," reaches into every corner of the U. S. and many foreign couninto every confer of the U.S. and many foreign conferings. Its editor, John Coffee Jr., is one of the foreign most authorities in this field, starting his hobby as a young man and continuing during college days. His interest never waned but gained momentum with each new discovery and find.

Fascinating indeed are the stories behind many of the tokens. One example is the token issued for a 15passenger litney bus once used on the outskirts of Omaha, Neb. A real estate firm, selling land in this area, found it necessary to operate a 15-passenger litney bus in order to make it easier for its prospective customers to reach the destination.

The bus would take the passengers from the end of the streetear line to the proposed site, later re-turning them so they could make connections with the streetcar. Eventually the streetcar line was extended to the land site and the bus service was discontinued, but the tokens became highly prized items.

One of the newest sidelines to this interesting hobby is the parking meter token. Many parking lots now find it necessary, for a number of reasons, to issue their own tokens. There now are over 1,000 known varieties and a new book on them will be out in the future.

Not only are the relatively easily collected tokens of the U. S. and Canada in the limelight, but considerable research also is being done on the tokens of many foreign countries as they become more popular

THE NEW MINT, which will be completed in July, 1967, will have a production capability of about eight billion coins each year. Its operations will include the entire gamut of minting—melting, casting, rolling, the coining of all coins, plus the production of the new clad strip.

The basic process essentially will be the same used by the present mints, but great innovations are planned in equipment and techniques.

The finished coins will pass through a novel electronic scanning device, currently being developed. It will inspect the coins as effectively—and much more rapidly—than the present visual inspections. Coins will be counted and bagged automatically and conveyed to the vaults for storage.

THE MOST exciting change will be a new process for stamping and coining; the new stamping machine or coin roller is expected to produce coins at the rate of 10,000 per minute, more than three times as effective as the equipment used previously.

Our tremendous progress in coinage can be traced from the Colonial period, when coins were individually and painstakingly struck, while each period of our history is depicted and traced through the colnage faithfully collected and classified by the ever enthusiastic numismatist.

To order the new "Coins of Special Value" booklet send 50 cents to Maurice Gould care of Southland Magazine, Box 4037, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

These are highly useful against a sunny south wall or against the south side of a fence in full sun. The narrow leaves are loosely carried, giving the shrub an airy and open structure. Annual pruning will help to keep foliage full and the pattern of growth as you like it. Prune to renew these shrubs in the late summer.

Another member of the family which attracts plenty of attention is the Weeping Bottle Brush. This is a taller, more slender version, with pendulous branches that cascade down in graceful manner, carrying through late spring and into summer a mass of red brushes smaller than those of the above, but showy nonethe-

THE PROSTRATE Bottle Brush seems to have yielded to the family's natural tendency to sprawl. It is not a ground-hugging shrub, but more in the manner of the Santa Cruz pyracantha, being low-growing and wide spreading in proportion to the over all bulk of the plant. This is an excellent choice for a hot, dry hillside where other covers sulk and refuse to grow. The flowers, again, are smaller than those of the Red Bottle Brush, but they are in abundance. The leaves are ouite narrow, even more so than with the Red Bottle Brush.

The narrowest leaves in the family belong to the Pineleaf Bottle Brush, a shrub whose common name pretty well describes its foliage. The red blooms of this one are offset by prominent yellow stamens. This is a littleknown Bottle Brush and well worth some increased attention.

One of the edging plants that continues to increase in popularity is the quite hardy Bergenia cordifolia "rock foil," grown in rock gardens, as edging plants, mass planting or a few plants set out In the perennial garden.

These desirable plants grow about a foot high with roundish heart-shaped leaves, clusters of cup-shaped rose color flowers and bloom through the late winterspring season.

SOME PERENNIAL edging cover the planted area. There are three methods of soil preparation. First of all the area should be thoroughly watered, then a couple of days later prepare the soil.

The most thorough method for level or nearly flat ground would be to prepare the whole area by spreading a 2-inch layer of pre-moistened sphagnum peat moss over the ground, then an inch or two of lawn grade weed-free treated steer manure over it. Dig or plaw the materials in twice, at least 8 to 10 inches deep. Soak down well. Water again several days later. A week or so still later, plant the ground cover plants.

Exciting Maples

Even though they lose their leaves in winter, the Japanese maples have something exciting to offer the gardener the year-round. They have the further advantage of fitting into gardens of all sizes, from the smallest to the largest.

Here is a typical yearround story of the Japanese maples; delicate light green or delicate purplish-red foli-

The fastest method, although not the best, yet one that helps the plants, is to mix in a handful of premoistened sphagnum peat moss or one of the several prepared planter mix mulch materials into hole for the individual plants. This soil preparation method is the only practical way for slopes, burms or bank plantings.

A TRULY fine restaurant owes its popularity to many things, large and small. Surprisingly, it's the small touches-original and unique -which often contribute enormously to the success of a particular establishment.

Would you believe that chopped up lops of small green onions have made a major contribution to the immense success of the Apple Valley Steak House in downtown Long Beach? They have, emphatically and delectably. For years this res-taurant at 733 E. Broadway has attracted the patronage of prominent business, civic and sports figures because of its superlative cuisine and service by topnotch waiters and waitresses.

Those guests, knowledgeable about dining out pleasures, have praised - year after year - the sauteed green onions which accompany every Apple Valley steak. No other restaurant in town offers that particular gourmet touch. I don't know why. I do know, however, that those charming little onions make every mouthful of top sirloin or New York out a savory treasure. Executive chef Don Gay uses the tenderest green tops, sautees them briefly in butter and adds salt and pepper. He claims that's all he does to them, but I'm sure there must be more to the process than he cares to reveal. Those smiling new faces which showed up at the Steak House this month belong to new owners Marc Hulsman and Chris Metkovich, who purchased it from Oscar Contratto Sr. Both are food experts, with years of experience in the industry, and also sportsmen. Enthusiastically continuing the policies established by Oscar and manager Charlie Dodd, they offer charcoal-broiled steaks from $3.95 to $5.45; superb sea foods, from $2.45 chicken, turkey and choice chops, all with soup du jour, elegant salad, oversized baked potato and beverage,

SUNDAY TREAT - Numerous Italian delights such as fetuccine, gnocchi and cannelloni- enhance the menu at Manno's Pizza Den and Terrace Room, 5607 E. South St., Lakewood, Served every day except Monday, they are priced from about $2.60. Equally praiseworthy and enjoyable are the specialties served Tuesday through Thursday nights for $1.85. Included are ravioli, rigatoni, mostaccioli and; gnoechi, with soup, salad, garlic bread and coffee, All the are extraordinarily good,

EDDIE WANTS OWN TV SHOW

Feels He'd Be 'More Ready' Second Time Around

By VERNON SCOTT

INOLLYWOOD (UPI)—EDDIE FISHER opened at New York's Residential York's Persian Room recently coming full cycle in his tempestuous two decades as a singing star.

"I want a TV show of my own because I think I'm ready for it now," he said. "I have the temperament for it. Previously I was going on sheer guts and didn't know what it meant. I didn't understand the responsibilities.

'All I did on my shows was stand up and sing. There's more to it than that. I listened to a lot of advice instead of using my own judgment."

It was back in 1947 that the tousled-topped Fisher first appeared at the Copacabana as a production singer with billing just above the chorus line.

In the intervening years Fisher has touched all the bases, hitting the highs and lows with the abandon of a runaway space missile.

HIS PRIVATE LIFE and career careened unbelievably; a saga of what can happen to a nice young guy caught in the maelstrom of the spotlight.

In the beginning Eddie was the nice young boy next door-the shy grin, the big voice. Television and a dozen consecutive hit records propelled him to the very top of show biz and everybody was happy for Eddie Fisher.

Then came a stint in the Army and it was Pyt, Eddie Fisher, the boy-next-door in uniform. The country followed his star, applauding him at every turn.

After returning to civilian life, he married Debbie Reynolds to become the All-America young married man. He had his own television show, lived in Hollywood, and became the father of two beautiful children. Hooray for

Enter Elizabeth Taylor and then the death of Mike Todd and Eddie blew his image.

The divorce papers from Debbie were hardly dry when Liz became Mrs. Fisher.

ENTER RICHARD BURTON. Down in flames went Eddie. No more television show. The records weren't-selling. A lesser talent might have evaporated from the scene altogether. But if Eddie is nothing else, he is a survivor.

Even Frank Sinatra hasn't encountered the headlines and romantic escapades that have befallen the nice guy

So where does Eddie stand now? What kind of man is he at 38 in the year 1966?

Eddle is still endowed with youthful charm although he is wary now. He answers questions guardedly.

In Hollywood he is a man-about town, dating the prettiest young girls on the scene. He's a regular at the Daisy Discotheque which have become his private hang-

He makes a great deal of money singing in clubs-Las Vegas, Tahoe, Philadelphia, Miami and Los Angeles. He appears frequently as a guest with Dean Martin, Andy Williams, Ed Sullivan,

He visits his son and daughter by Debbie and is on good terms with his ex-wife. He seldom discusses Miss Taylor or Burton, and when he does it is usually with humor, tinged perhaps with a trace of bitterness.

He would like to marry again.

"I don't particularly enjoy being single," he says. "There's no feeling like being in love. I'm searching for the right person, just like everybody else. Love is very hard to find, especially after you've been there and know what it is."

EDDIE FISHER... Touched All Bases

One gets the distinct feeling that he still cares a great deal for Miss Taylor, but he takes pains to hide it.

Fisher is convinced his career is on the upswing again. He'll be cutting more records, activating his production company and taking aim on that television series.

And if he finds the right girl, he'll be completing another cycle. No matter what, Eddie Fisher is still going strong.

To me, one of the most beautiful things on TV is the narrated poem, "High Flight," accompanied by a soaring jet.

Channel 9 execs believe the poem was part of a special program called "Flight of the Magellan."

The tape of the program was erosed and there was no script.

Sorry about that.

Who is the TV father of Zorro? Is it Cesar Romero or Britt Lomond?

Somehow, Cesar Romero never managed to get into the act.

Hull, 29, a veteran, is married and has a daughter. He has been working on KRLA for three years and, according to Pulse ratings, has one of the largest teenage audiences. BALDNESS Like Time

Most people don't stop to realize that in 95% of the cases where a person is on the road to baldness, common sense on his or her part could prevent tragedy.

People simply do not get around to doing something about People simply do not get around to doing something about their balding condition until, in many cases, it is too late. Bert's Eye View

T WAS THE DAY BEFORE Zsa Zsa Gabor's latest wedding-would you believe five?-and sister Eva was late to her "Green Acres" series rehearsal.

Pat Buttram didn't think practicing for the wedding was a legitimate excuse for Eva to be tardy.

"If you're going to be late every time Zsa Zsa gets fed," he joked, "we're never going to get anywhere married," he joked, with this show."

Eddie Albert was confused.

"I thought they were already married," he said.

Eva attempted to straighten him out.
"No, dollink," she said, "they just got divorced."
There was room for confusion. Zsa Zsa had filed for a marriage license with millionaire oilman Joshua Gosden a day after she put in for a Mexican divorce from industrialist Herbert Hutner,

The marriage, which had been planned for a Monday. was delayed two days until the Mexican divorce decree could become final.

"I TOLD HER to do II on a Saturday," said Eva. "but she couldn't wait. "I'm a little mixed up, too, I think I'm the bride. I bought six gowns and I can't make up my mind which to wear."

Afterwards, Eva said that although she was elated. she really wasn't mixed up as to who was the bride.

The CBS-TV star, who feels very much married, has been wed to stockbroker Richard Brown since Oct. 5, 1959. He is her fourth husband,

The longevity of her present marriage qualifies her for expert advice on the subject of matrimony.

"To get married, to fall in love is easy," said Eva. To stay married is an art, It is worth the while to pur effort in.

That "effort" takes various forms and it helps, of course, if one of the forms is the kind that Eva physically

"A MAN MUST HAVE something new when he comes home," she said. "My husband never knows what hits him when he comes nome.

"I'm always a different woman, If's not difficult-I'm so changeable.

"No, I can't give you examples. It's not a pattern. It's not something you study. It's just something you do.

"It's unpredictable. Maybe that's what a woman should be—unpredictable,

"Never have a man take you for granted. And never take a man for granted. There's always another woman who wants him."

Eva feels the "being someone new" daily is toughest for the housewife. But the housewife is used to the toughest. For it is she, in Eva's opinion, who works the hardest of all women and gets the least credit for it.

If the housewife does find it difficult to be changeable, there still remains a minimal step she can take when the breadwinner arrives home.

"FIRST, AT LEAST, give the guy a drink, then the bad news.

The most important thing necessary to keep any marriage intact, in Eva's opinion, is a sense of humor. "For the man, too," she clarified.

The Hungarian beauty doesn't think that most American housewives dress up to their best advantage. They can, she believes, do so in this country very inexpensively.

"Plainness is the answer to being very chic," she said. "Also, there are good things to be brought out and little things to hide.

"It may be nice to have diamonds, but a string of pearls is always the smartest."

THE ACTRESS confessed that she doesn't always limit her own tastes to the inexpensive.

"My hat and bag and shoes must be the best," she

Indicating the coat she wore, she said.

"It's junior size, very chie and only cost $70. My hat (a pink bonnet) cost more than that."

Eva has no compunctions about offering advice for other femmes because:

"Dollink, I really like woman."

She's convinced the affection is reciprocated. Her evidence is that her matinees, when she appeared in a Broadway play, were principally attended by women.

Further, sponsors of her television series took a survey to see if women would accept her in her current role and she came off with "flying colors."

"I can sense a woman who is witchy and would like to try to take away your husband," she said.

"I can also tell when a woman is real. Most of them are and I like them,"

'Never Marry Actress,' Advises Man Who Did

HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—Ladies, do not abandon hope. You do not have to be an actress to snag a handsome French actor. In fact, Jacques Bergerac says he will never again marry an actress.

"They can only think of themselves," Bergerac says. "They have nothing left to give anyone else."

Bergerac is a veteran of marriages to Ginger Rogers and Dorothy Malone. He was in town for a few days, visiting his two daughters (Miss Malone is their mother) when he got all this off his great Gallic chest.

"THE MORE SUCCESSFUL an actress gets," he says, "the more unhappy she is. When she is not working, she is unhappy. And when she is working, she complains that the part is not good enough or the photographer does not know his job or the halrdresser is ruining her, so she is unhappy,

AN ESSAY ON HOTELS
—Following in the same vein as his earlier acclaimed "Essay on Bridges" and
"Essay on Doors," Harry Reasoner today takes a lighthearted look at the kinds of places people call home when they're away from home, covering the history of hotels and motels, and reviewing the argument about the advantages of each. A crew of 10 cameramen filmed hotels in 50 cities for the 10 p.m. hour, ch. 2, with rates of rooms filmed ranging from $500 a day to $1.10 a day (they didn't check in either), and interviews including bell-boys, maids and elevator operators who candidly discuss their guests. Among other things, Reasoner won-ders why hotels give so many towels and such little cakes of soap, and how it is possible for "wake-up" operators to be so cheerful at dawn.

CRITICS' CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Program: "The John Gary Show," premiered last Wednesday on channel 2.

It would be nice to think that in the year 1966 a fine, low pressure singer-and a quietly gracious host to boot
— could have a successful new television series,

Which is another way of saying the John Gary Show bowed in on CBS-TV Wednesday night, replacing the Danny Kaye hour for 12 weeks this summer.

The show lacks wham and zap because Gary Is not a pow, wham and zap performer, being rather a throwback to the more genteel school of supper club entertainers who rely on taste and adult audiences. His customers are more likely to order champagne than soda pop. Critic Rick Du Brow

of UPI

The musical numbers most familiar songs, were fine. The settings were handsome. But a late-evening variety show really needs some lively and stimulating comedy if it wants to keep the viewers from nodding in their armchairs.

And where the new "John Gary Show" may fall down is in its concentration on music - there was nothing else for at least the first half

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

Program: "Campus of the Last Chance," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

A mildly interesting documentary on the Ventura School for Girls, an institution for delinquents.

have no major quarrel with the production except that it really added nothing new to our knowledge of how California, a pioneer in the field, attempts to re-habilitate rather than imprison in the stronger sense of the latter word.

Certainly the objective, as specified by Mrs. Beatrice Dolan, superintendent, is noteworthy. That objective:

"To make a girl feel like a person with a future."

Program: "Viet Nam: Eric Sevareid's Personal Report," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

He had no answers to the questions, but he raised questions around the questions—China's encirclement, the unacknowledged spread of fighting by Americans outside Viet Nam's borders, the way we are fighting the war. He disagreed with much of Washington's viewpoint, but he was neither optimistic nor despairing, anew in a half-hour program. Johnson became President. emphasizing fact, rather than rhetoric.

He pointed out that it cost the U.S. government a million dollars last year for each enemy soldier killed - a rather cold-blooded statistic.

For every 10 million dollars the enemy spends, we spend 15 billion dollars.

Among U. S. troops in Asia, there are now 20,000 in Thailand, more than the entire amount there were in Viet Nam when Lyndon

No Chinese soldier has ever been found in the ranks of the North Vietnamese.

Of the 65,000 American military men actually in combat—his estimate—each has a 50-50 chance of being wounded or killed.

Along with fact, there was Sevareid's personal opinion, qualified by the statement that he was not an authority on Asia nor an expert on war.

It was his opinion that until the U.S. became involved, Vict Nam was essentially a civil war. Viet Nam, only a society, not a nation, has no strong national sense nor strong national leader.

The deepest force moving Asia today has little to do with military power, including the nuclear bomb. The deepest force — China in-cluded—is the modern industrial revolution.

Mitch Miller, star of NBC-TV's repeat "Sing Along with Mitch," recently appeared at Chicago's Comiskey

Park for a special salute to "The Star Spangled Banner."

tion, Short had substituted the latter for the national

CBS Seeks Original TV Dramas

CBS-TV has earmarked a half-million dollars for the writing of dramas specifically for television.

In making the announcement, John T. Reynolds, net work president, said:

The enthusiasm for significant drama on television was apparent in the response to our presentation of Death of a Salesman.'

"Looking beyond next reason's presentation of other proven great theater, such as Tennessee Williams The Glass Menagerie' and Arthur Miller's 'The Crucible,' we are determined to find and present the very best of original drama as

For each drama commissioned, CBS-TV will pay up to $25,000. The sum, Reynolds noted, is approximately twice the budget allocated for former "Playhouse 90" scripts.

"WE HOPE that some of the great writers who left television for other areas will be tempted to return, just as we hope many new writers will produce challenging ideas for us.

"Once a writer's work Is commissioned by the program department, he will receive full payment without restriction on the length of his drama and without any time limitation on completion of the final script.

"We will fit our schedule to the writer's schedule."

Program title for presentation of the dramas will be "CBS Playhouse." The plays will be aired in prime time.

Q. Of all the politicians in Washington, who is the best dancer?—Laine Edwards, Vandalia, Ill.

A. In the top echelons of government, probably Vice President Hubert Humphrey, a former mayor of Minneapolis, once known in his home state as "The Twinkletoes of Hennepin County."

Q. Is it true that The Sound of Music has already grossed $100 million, making it the most successful motion picture of all time?—Fred Gronich, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. To date it has grossed approximately $70 million, will undoubtedly do $100 million worldwide. It is already the all-time high film grosser.

Q. I have been told that Dr. Kildare, the TV and movie doctor, is based on the exploits of a real-life physician. If this is so, would you identify the physician?—Vi Jameson, New York, N. Y.

A. The character, played by Richard Chamberlain (1.), is based on the medical practice and background of Dr. George Fish (1.), a consultant surgeon in urology at Presbyterian Hospital, New York, and a professor emeritus in clinical urology at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University. The Dr. Kildare character was originated in 1936 by writer Fred Faust (nom de plume, Max Brand). Faust and Fish were classmates at the University of California in 1915. When Fish later interned at Roosevelt Hospital in New York, Faust pumped him for material. In 1936 Faust wrote the first Kildare story, Interns Can't Take Money. In 1944, working as a war correspondent in Italy, Faust met his death at 51.

Q. I would like to know how many helicopters we have in Vietnam, and who operates them. — Ed Kalish, Joplin, Mo.

A. Between 2000 and 2500 at this writing. Most are operated by the U.S. Army.

Q. What's happened to Pia Lindstrom, daughter of Ingrid Bergman? — Elley Fisherman, Denver, Colo. A. Pia Lindstrom, 27, is working in Italian films as an actress. After her divorce in 1961 from Fuller Callaway, she flew to Europe, worked for a while as a decorator, later as a translator for UNESCO.

Q. Something on Oskar Werner—age, marital status, how did he get that cheek scar, was he involved in World War II, etc?—J.G., Flushing, N.Y.

A. Werner, 43, born in Vienna, was married to Elizabeth Kallina with whom he had a daughter, Eleanore, now 21. He is currently married to Anne Power, daughter of the late Tyrone Power and Annabella. The scar on his check was makeup for his role in Ship of Pools. He was drafted into Hitler's army where he served as a "highly unsatisfactory member" for four years, most of which time he spent on leave to play at the Burg Theatre in Vienna. Reportedly Werner deserted from the German army three months before war's end.

Q. Doer anyone know how much money Somerset Maugham left his secretary of 34 years, Alan Searle? And what will the man do now?—Priscilla O'Day, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. Maugham left Searle, 62, approximately a million dollars. Searle will probably marry, if he hasn't already, a French Riviera widow, Mrs. Isabelle Darley.

Q. I am going to Paris this summer and would like to know who the hot painter is this season. I buy art from time to time.—Mrs. R.A.L., Seattle, Wash,

A. One of the hottest is Ronaldo de Juan, an Argentine who has lived in Paris since 1960, paints expressionistic abstracts. The most esteemed is Balthus—real name: Count Balthazar Klossowski de Rola, a long-time favorite of French Minister of Culture André Malraux. Balthus, 68, is a classicist and impressionist whose most repeated theme is the innocence of young nudes. A retrospective exhibition of his works is now in progress.

Q. Who said: "Justice will be achieved only when those who are not injured feel as indignant as those who are."?—A.H.M., Larchmont, N.Y.

A. The quotation has long been attributed to Solon, the Athenian statesman and author, 638-558 B.C.

Q. Could you please tell me the relationship between the two dancers on the Lawrence Welk Show—Barbara Boylan and Bobby Burgess? Are they married? —Alice Lakin, Sacramento, Calif.

A. Both are single as of this writing, have long been "good friends."

Q. Is it true that the late Hedda Hopper did not know how to write, that her autobiography and Sunday pieces were ghosted by professional writers?—A.T.T., San Bernardino, Calif.

A, Many of her Sunday pieces were written by Kirtley Haskette, a professional writer, much of her autobiography by James Brough, who in addition to the Hopper autobiography also helped with the autobiographies of Keenan Wynn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

Q. Red China has exploded its third nuclear bomb. For years China was in turnoil because of wars. How and where did China manage to educate enough knowledgeable scientists to develop nuclear bombs?

—Archie Hendon, Red Bluff, Calif.

A. Of the 14 Chinese scientists associated with the development of the nuclear bombs, 12 received their scientific training in foreign universities, among them Cambridge, the University of California, Edinburgh, Manchester, Liverpool, Berlin, California Institute of Technology, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Princeton, Halle and Joliot-Curie Institute in Paris.

Q. I understand that Frank Sinatra has quietly edged his way back into the Necada gambling business. The truth, please. — S.R., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. The Cal-Neva Casino at Lake Tahoe, owned in part by Sinatra, has been granted a gaming license, but only on the proviso that Sinatra have absolutely nothing to do with running the gambling casino. Sinatra's gambling license was revoked by the Nevada Gaming Commission in 1963 because of the singer's alleged relationship with Sam Giancana, Maña leader from Chicago.

Mamie & Ike talk about 50 years of Marriage

by ROSALIND MASSOW

n July 1, 1916, a pretty 19year-old girl exchanged
"I do's" with a handsome 25-year-old Army licutenant in a simple ceremony in the parlor of the bride's home in Denver, Colo.

. The bride was the daughter of a well-to-do family. The groom was a graduate of West Point. The local newspapers duly noted the event with a story in the social columns.

This Friday, a half-century later, that same couple, Mamie Geneva Doud Eisenhower and David Dwight Eisenhower, known as Mamie and Ike to millions of people in all parts of the world, will mark their Golden Anniversary—again with a simple family celebration.

What happened between 1916 and 1966 is a far cry from those simple beginnings. It encompasses a career that includes two of the nation's highest honors—the Presidency of the United States and the achievement of the rank of five-star General of the Army. If that weren't enough there were other important accomplishments — Eisenhower's election as Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in Europe and his tenure as president of Columbia University.

What effect did this outstanding career of public service have on that nice young couple who married in 1916? PARADE visited the General and his lady at their peaceful 189-acre farm here for a look back in time and memory.

Mamie and Ike sat side by side on a slipcovered loveseat on the glass-enclosed sunporch of their stately old colonial farmhouse overlooking the Gettysburg battlefield and rolling hills of fresh green. She wore a bright orange knit suit with matching orange shoes. Her blue eyes sparkled with health and vitality. Her hair, a lustrous honey blonde, was dressed with the familiar fluffy bangs. The General relaxed in a blue tweed sports jacket and gray slacks.

Red and yellow roses, Mamie's favorite flowers, were arranged in vases around the room. An unfinished and still-wet landscape by General Eisenhower lay atop a table. Other canvasses, finished but unframed, stood on the floor behind a chair.

I asked the General: If he had it to do over again, would he marry the same girl?

He threw back his head and laughed the famous Eisenhower laugh. His blue eyes twinkled. "That's the worst question! ever heard," he said. "There's only one possible answer."

Then he turned serious. "As a matter of fact, I wouldn't want to live my life over again. I've made my mistakes, my errors and blunders like everyone else, but to go back and start again at, say, 20—no. Look what I would have missed. Everybody has to live his own life and take his share of the problems."

As Ike recalled it, his first problem after being introduced to Mamie was getting a date with her. They had met at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., while she was there with her family on a winter holiday.

"He was different from anyone else I knew >>

"I was going on guard tour when I was called across the street by a lady who lived on the post," he said. "I walked across and chatted a minute. There was this attractive-looking gal. She was wearing a great big flowered skirt that came up to here [Ike pointed to a high waist-line]. I didn't know how long she was staying, but I invited her to take a walk with me.

"I found out later that she didn't like to walk, and that was a long walk we took."

"Aw, it was just the uniform," Ike said, grinning.

However attractive Mamie may have found him, it was quite a while before he received her undivided attention. There was much competition from other young men. To deal with it, lke remembers, he worked out a clever strategy.

"When Mamie had another date, I went to visit her mother. I liked her mother very much. I'd hang around until midnight and let the guys see me there when she got back." After a while lke had won over her parents and discouraged the other young men. In a few months, on Valentine's Day, the couple became engaged, and eight months after they met they married.

They set up housekeeping at Fort Sam Houston in a two-room apartment with no kitchen. The flat was the first of a series of homes for the couple. During the next 25 years they lived the life of a typical Army couple — in the United States (he was commander of Camp Colt in Gettysburg), France, Panama and the Philippines. They were years of tragedy and of happiness. The couple's first son, Doud Dwight, nicknamed "Icky," born in 1917, died three years later of scarlet fever. A second son, John, arrived in 1922. He is now 44.

Not long after their marriage, Mamie remembered, she got her first taste of the compelling sense of duty that was to carry her husband to great heights. "Ike was ordered out of San Antonio for a short time," she said. "We had very little storage space in the apartment, and Ike had to keep his bedroll and pistol under the piano out of sight. I was watching him gather up his belongings, and I guess I was complaining, All of a sudden, he turned to me and said, 'Manie, this you must understand. My country comes first. You come second.' That has always stayed in my mind."

Mamie also come to learn about her husband's ambitions. "There wasn't much chance of Ike's being promoted in those days,"she said, "yet he used to read and study until 2 or 3 in the morning even though he had to be in the field at 7."

Ike interrupted to explain his diligence. "You see," he said, "I was not a very good cadet. I finished 125th in discipline out of 162 in my class, and there was even some doubt whether I would be commissioned, because I had a leg injury. But I got my commission after all. From that moment on I decided that I was going to do the best job I knew how. In those days it was impossible to become a general in peacetime. And I wasn't too concerned about promotion —I was more interested in doing my job well. Later when my son John wanted to go to West Point, I told him never to think about promotion but to do his job well and make every boss sorry when he leaves."

"When Mamie had another date I visited her mother "

I asked the General what, in those early days, he had learned about his bride. What kind of housekeeper was she? Was she a good cook?

Mamie interrupted. "I'm not a cook. I was never permitted in the kitchen when I was a young girl."

"You could make mayonnaise and fudge," the General said with a gcin. He went on to say that he did the only thing a fellow could do—he became the cook.

To this day, Mamie admits she is not overly fond of cooking. She can manage steak and potatoes and several other dishes Ike likes, but she's unenthusiastic about the kitchen. During the war, she confessed, she often ate caudy rather than cook a meal for herself.

Often in those days she and other military wives would get together and take turns doing the cooking. Mamie always drew KP—she preferred washing dishes to preparing meals.

Looking back, those first 25 years seemed pretty happy to the Eisenhowers. I asked which assignment brought them greatest happiness. They looked at each other and tried to decide. The General suggested their first tour of France in the late 20's. "We had a nice life and a nice group of friends," he recalls. "Our son John was going to a good school, and we had lots of fun and lots of company."

Mrs. Eisenhower said it was very difficult to pinpoint a place where they didn't have a wonderful time.

"I don't think we've ever left any post that we didn't have a feeling of reluctance to leave," she said.

Life changed drastically for the Eisenhowers in 1941. Ike was promoted to Brigadier General, later to become Assistant Chief of Staff to Gen. George C. Marshall, then commander of the North African landings. Thus began the Eisenhower public years. Supreme Allied Commander of the European Invasion, he was next appointed Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army and went on to become president of Columbia University, Meanwhile, he was appointed Supreme Commander of Allied Powers in Europe, after which he achieved the greatest honor of them all, President of the United States.

The couple remembers their home at Columbia as the most pleasant place they ever lived:—even more so than the White House. "John and Barbara came down from West Point where John was an instructor, and we saw a great deal of our grandchildren," they recalled.

As for the Eisenhower political career, that, too, brings back personal memories.

Because Mrs. Eisenhower was ill, she missed one of the most exciting days of her life—the day lke was nominated. As the General recalls it, "She was sitting in the apartment slek or something, and I was sitting up in a room with my brother and other people. I went back to see her every once in a while. I was kind of bored with the whole nomination business, but then Minnesota changed its vote and I was nominated. I went back to tell her. She looked up from her pillow and said, "That's nice."

Mrs. Eisenhower hastened to explain that she had been given medication—she's allergic to all medication—and as a result couldn't comprehend the immensity of the news.

The Presidential election in 1952 proved just how popular Eisenhower was. He won by a landslide, and Mamie and like moved into the White House. January 20, 1953.

Mrs. Eisenhower, accustomed to making a home wherever they went, settled into her new job as First Lady with ease.

Strange as it may seem, the White House was the Eisenhowers' first permanent home — they lived there eight years, the longest period they spent anywhere. It was, the General recalls, like moving to another post. "I had had certain duties, and I did them, and Mannic had her duties, too. We always managed to have good friends around. In many ways the White House was easier to live in because we had so much help, but it really wasn't any different from any other place we lived."

Today the Eisenhowers can look back on their life with objectivity and pursue their interests with greater freedom; however, being in the public eye means they can never have complete freedom.

I asked if they ever resented sharing their lives with millions of people.

"Sometimes we wished we weren't so famous "

The General answered: "There were times when we wished we weren't so famous. Mamic and I have talked about this many times. Sometimes we wish we could go into the live-and-ten—or even Cartiers—without people knowing who we are, but then people are so kind. They want a picture of us; they tell me they voted for me twice or that their son served with me. When I consider the life we've lived, which took us to places of considerable prominence, we stop complaining. Suppose people didn't like us. That would be terrible, wouldn't it?"

These days the General, 75, and his bride, 69, follow a more leisurely pace, although they rarely stay put. They are always going somewhere—Washington; New York; Palm Desert, Calif.; Augusta, Ga.; or Phoenixville, Pa., where John and Barbara Eisenhower now live.

Ike explained that he is writing another book, a small one of personal essays. He also paints and makes a few speeches here and there. Although they see their grandchildren less than they used to, Dwight David, Barbara Anne, Susan Elaine and Mary Jean are still their greatest joys.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW About YOUR dog's HIDDEN COAT AND SKIN PROBLEMS.

The first thing you may notice is scratching without any fleas. Or maybe a dull, brittle coat. Both are often early signs of diet deficiencies that can lead to more serious problems. New Pet'm* Coat and Skin Daily Food Supplement helps guard against these diet deficiences. It supplies essential polyunsaturated fatty acids and vitamins that even canned and packaged foods may lack. Vital nutrients all pets need every day for bright, glowing coats and healthy skin.

Just squirt new Pet'm Coat and Skin Daily Food Supplement on your pet's food. It's that easy. Dogs like the flavor. Cats, too. So give your pet a chance at the coat and skin he could be showing. One bottle lasts the average dog for thirty days. Then, if your pet doesn't look better and scratch less, we'll give you your money back. Just mail us the empty bottle. What can you lose? Nothing but your dog's dull coat and dry, itchy skin. If new Pet'm Supplement doesn't help, the problem may not be diet deficiencies and your veterinarian should be consulted. So if you love your pet, Pet'm.

Mamie thinks there should be only one

"I just love having them around," says Mamie. "The girls try on my clothes and watch TV with me. We do a lot of talking and laughing."

Dwight David, the only boy in the family, is one of Ike's favorites. "When he was smaller we spent more time together," Ike explains. "Today, he likes baseball, football and soccer, like other boys his age, but these are things I can no longer do with him. I do go fishing, skeet shooting and play golf with him. And often we just sit around and talk scriously."

No one has to ask the Eisenhowers to what they attribute their marital happiness. One has only to observe them to know why they have endeared themselves to millions of people. Mutual respect, humor, great warmth and interest come through when you see them to gether.

If anyone has the right to give advice to young married couples, it's Mamie and Ike. Perhaps the best advice the General can offer is to keep a sense of humor, be ready to give and take. He feels it's more important to be understanding than always right.

"Being right all the time is perhaps the most tiresome quality anyone can have," Ike comments. "Mamie and I have had our difficulties. We were both strong-willed, and there was a great difference in our background. I was a boy in a family of six boys, and she was a girl in a family with three other daughters. She used to make a great deal about birthdays, anniversaries and holidays. Now, I keep a record of every birthday and every anniversary. It's a good thing I have a secretary," Eisenhover said with a broad grin.

"For any marriage to be successful," Mamte chimed in, "you must work at it. Young women today want to prove something—all they have to prove is that they be a good wife, housekeeper and mother. There should be only one head of the family—the man."

"And as for spats," she goes on, "if a quarrel develops, one should leave the toom," Mrs. Eisenhower advises. "It takes two to quarrel," she added with a wink.

The one recorded quarrel the Eisenhowers had was years after they were married. They were visiting with Ike's family in Abilene, Kan,, and Ike went out to play some cards with a few of his cronies. When he didn't come back by midnight, Mrs. Eisenhower phoned and angrily demanded he come home. Ike listened but didn't comply. He was playing poker and had lost $600. "I wasn't going to leave until I made up my losses," he said. By 1:30 A.M. he had won back the money he lost. The way he figured it, she would have been much angrier if he were out $600 than a few hours late getting home.

The Eisenhowers also have some advice for grandparents.

"Grandparents should be helpful," Ike says, "but not busybodies. They should help out with their grandchildren's education if they can, but under no circumstances should they get in the way and become prime ministers for them. That's the one way to ruin your children's marriage."

When you're married a long time, you run out of ideas for gifts, and the Eisenhowers are no exceptions. At this late date, they may have bought anniversary presents for one another, but if they did they weren't talking about it.

"One trouble, nowadays, is to find a gift for one another," Ike says. "It's very hard because neither of us has extravagant tastes. Mamie uses a 1955 car and she won't part with it, so how can I buy her a new ear?"

Mamie touched his arm and said softly, "The one gift I want from you is to be a good boy and keep well."

Of the gifts the Eisenhowers have given to one another, the one Ike loves best is a watch Mamie gave him for their first anniversary. "It still runs," Ike says. And Mamie prizes the wristwatch she received from him on their 25th anniversary and a tea set he was years collecting for her.

Mamic and lke will receive gifts from family and from each other when they mark the day they were married 50 years ago at the home of their son John in Phoenixville. It will be strictly a family affair.

As they pass the golden milestone, the Eisenhowers know that their devotion to each other and to their country is returned by the millions who wish them the full cup of their vintage years.

"NO FINER GIFT"

You can help honor General and Mrs. Eisenhower on their Golden Wedding Anniversary this Friday.

With the Eisenhowers' consent, a national tribute is underway. Comedian Bob Hope and former Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson are cochairmen. The campaign will collect gifts for the undertaking the General says is closest to his heart: the establishment and advancement of Eisenhower College at Seneca Falls, N.Y.

The liberal arts college (first described in PARADE, January 9, 1966, "Eisenhower College: A New Idea in Education") will receive its first students in September 1967. A unique school with international emphasis, it will reflect the General's lifelong interest in world events—and in young people.

All gifts to the national tribute which are tax-deductible—will be recorded at the college, and special gifts will be inscribed on a Golden Wedding plaque in Founders Hall. The Post Office Department has agreed that contributions may be addressed simply: Eisenhower College, clo Postmaster.

"For a beloved leader," the tribute committee has declared, "there can be no finer tribute, no more cherished gift."

Bob Hope and Eisenhower break ground for Eisenhower College, dear to like's heart.

the constant traffic in the halls is one of the first things a visitor to George Washington High School notices. It's a byproduct of a break with calucational tradition.

At George Washington students come and go as they please when they do not have classes. Unscheduled, unsupervised, they have the run of the building. They can experiment in a lab, drop in on another class, talk, sleep, goof off.

"A lot of them goof off," says administrative assistant Richard Hunt, "but one of our key phrases is 'toward self-direction.' We believe it's something they must learn through experience."

A lot of them do not goof off, and the result is that educators from all parts of the country have been coming to Charleston to see what is going on at George Washington. Another result is that George Washington has won a 1966 Pacemaker award.

A Pacemaker award is given annually by PARADE and the National Education Association to honor a pioneering school or school system in each state. Across the country forward-looking educators are experimenting with bold, new concepts; it is the intention of PARADE and the NEA to encourage them.

For example, there's the North-Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, N. C., the country's first state established, state-supported school for the performing arts, where the entrance exam is an audition. Like George Washington, it's a 1966 Pacemaker.

COMPUTERIZED

There are many others—like the Altoona School District, Altoona, Pa., where seventh-graders are taught to operate computers, and the Vestal Central Schools, Vestal, N. Y., where students stay after school every Tuesday to discuss Plato and Shakespeare and e. e. cummings in noncredit seminats.

The full list of Pacemakers is published on page 11. All will receive Pacemaker plaques at the NEA convention in Miami this week.

As for George Washington, it is a pacemaker among Pacemakers. Although the building was designed to fit an educational program, there is nothing about its exterior to suggest the ayant garde.

The school sits in a clearing on a mountaintop on the south side of the Kanawha River. To reach it, a car winds through an exclusive wooded residential section. But GW's students also come from poverty pockets beyond. "We have a few kids who come from homes with no floors," says Hunt.

The school is a three-level, flat-roofed brick structure that hovers between plain and modern and could pass for an armory or a dormitory. The inside walls are cement block, functional rather than fancy. But it is architecture with a purpose. Less than two years old, the school was built, at a modest cost of $1.7 million, to house a dream.

In 1960 Kanawha County was preparing to build three high schools. L. K. Lovenstein, then superintendent of county schools, wanted one of the schools to explore new ideas in education. So the Kanawha County school system, the West Virginia State Department of Education and the College of Education at Ohio State University got together and blueprinted a pilot school. There were committees piled on top of committees, of Ohio State professors and county and state administrators in West Virginia, and coordinating them was a young, agressive principal named Gene Stanley. Stanley had been recruited from a Ford Foundation post in Florida.

He spent two years at Ohio State with the planners, all the while shuttling back and forth to Charleston, and then he spent another year recruiting a staff.

The planners broke with the traditionalists in two major areas. They discarded the standard six-, seven- and eight-period school day for a flexible schedule broken into 20-minute segments, and they moved away from the fixed class of 30 to classrooms of varying sizes.

Every 20 minutes someone changes classes at George Washington, but some classes run 40, 60, 80 and 100 minutes. The teachers in a subject area determine the length of their classes. "Our French teachers think 40-minute classes are most effective," says Hunt. "Our Latin teachers prefer 60-minute classes." Instead of fitting the subjects to a schedule, George Washington fits the schedule to the subjects, using a computer to get everybody in the right place at the right time. "I don't know any two students who have the same schedule," says Hunt.

There are small classrooms for seminars (12 to 15 pupils), medium classrooms for academic labs (30 to 35) and large classrooms for lectures (150 or more). "The class of 30 was an arbitrary anachronism," says Stanley. "There is no real good reason for a class of 30. It's too small for a good lecture. A teacher who lectures on the same subject five times to groups of 30 is wasting his breath. And a class of 30 is too large for good discussion."

A typical English student at GW will have six classes a week — two large group lectures in which the subject matter is introduced, two academic labs where the students pursue it further through supervised research and study and two seminars where the students learn through an interplay of ideas.

"INVOLVED" STUDENTS

"We find the seminars are probably the strongest part of the whole program." says Stanley. "They're involving students as I think they haven't been involved before in public schools."

The academic labs surround the library and are extensions of the library, containing tapes, records, films, anthologies and other materials in specific subject areas. In world literature, for instance, there are 20 sets of materials worth approximately $150 apiece. "And the door to the library is open if this is inadequate," says Stanley. It's a library that gets used, and, in keeping with the easygoing, permissive atmosphere of the school, it is not consplenous for silence. "I just try to keep things reasonably quiet," says librarian Mrs. Helen Martin.

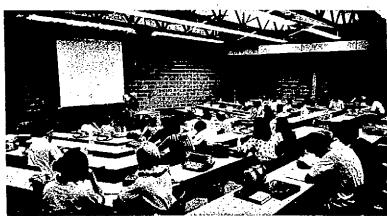

Free time may comprise 10 to 30 percent of a student's schedule. Because of the timesaving group lectures, teachers, too, have free time, and it is not unusual to see students and teachers conferring over some problem or project. Both are enthusiastic about GW's approach.

"It's a tremendous challenge for those students who want to be challenged," says Miss Jan Penix, journalism, French and English teacher. "I wish every school were like George Washington."

Cessa Movin is an exchange student from Copenhagen, Denmark, and she appreciates GW. "In Denmark," she says, "you're kind of looked after all the time. Here you have an opportunity to take care of your own time. It's good preparation for college."

"It's great," says Yale-bound Vernon Jones. "You can go as far as you want."

George Washington's Pacemaker program has been so successful that it may cost the school one principal. "I'm getting a lot of job offers," says Stanley.

Amphitheater is used for lecture at George Washington High School. Classrooms come in all sizes, depending on purpose of course. The school was designed to fit curriculum.

Sometime soon, Carol Hansen's fiancé will ask himself if he has enough life insurance.

(And how much is enough, anyway?)

A timely question. Not only for a husbandto-be, but for anyone with new responsibilities. You perhaps?

A quick answer is a minimum of four to five times annual income.

A better one is it all depends. On the size of the family, as well as income. On the financial responsibilities still ahead. On how far other assets will go towards meeting them.

Chances are you've already decided that your other resources can't do the job alone. Especially if you have a family to support. Kids to put through college. A mortgage to pay off. Retirement ideas that call for more income than social.

That's why you own life insurance. You realize it gives you an important advantage over all other types of thrift: the full amount is guaranteed right from the

But remember that family circumstances change.

FRIENDSHIP. Is a sincere, enduring friendship possible between a white man and a native? It's possible, believes anthropologist Robert Edgerton of UCLA, but not very probable. Writing in the South-western Journal of Anthropology on his experiences with Menomini Indians in Wisconsin and colored tribes in Uganda, Kenya and Tanzania, Edgerton points out that most such friendships go through the following four definite stages:

(1) The Native's Lament in which the native describes his previous painful experiences with other whites and waits for the declaration by his new friend that he is "really different."

. (2) The Traditional Test in which the native asks his white friend to do something illegal such as smuggle liquor onto an Indian reservation.

(3) The Hinting Period in which the native makes constant hints for more favors.

(4) The Outrage in which the native, testing the limits of his new friendship, commits a transgression that the white man equates with outrage.

Edgerton believes white-native friendships end on the downgrade because they are founded on artificial, pseudorelationships between unequal partners. The white man enters the friendship with power, position and prestige the native cannot even approach. The white man is moreover prejudiced by the stereotype image of the native, and the native is burdened with the stereotype image of the white. The white regards natives as stupid. shiftless, sexually promiseuous, lazy. The native regards the white as rich, greedy, selfish, powerdrunk, exploitative. There is no mutual understanding of the other's culture. Having been exploited for centuries, the native, refusing to believe the white man's altruism, his offer of friendship and help without strings, is driven to acts that will define the extent of the white friendship. When these tests result in The Outrage, the white man regards the native as a hopeless ingrate, and the native retreats. convinced that his tribe is right in its assessment and suspicion of the white man. Asked whether these observations apply to the relationship between Americans and Vietnamese, Dr. Edgerton answers, "Never having been in Vietnam, I wouldn't know, but there may be similarities."

MEDICAL MONITOR. Scientists from the Philco Corporation have devel- . oped a chair that monitors vital functions of the human body -- pulse rate, respiration, heart sounds and impulses -- with no sensors attached to the person being examined. Anyone who has undergone an electrocardiographic examination and has waited for the technician to apply paste and strap on electrodes to record the heart impulses knows how complex the measuring of physical functions can be. Philco's Automatic Medical Monitor could make such procedures obsolete. The upholstery of the chair contains a series of electrical pickups that conduct the impulses of the human body to electronic units that produce the data on a series of graphs. Philco demonstrated the chair a few months ago at an aerospace medical meeting; and the worldwide response has been excellent. The Automatic Medical Monitor is not yet in production, out the company is conducting a marketing survey and will probably produce first models for sale some time next year. Probable selling price: $3000 to $4000, making it the most expensive chair in the world, but well worth it.

NEGROES IN VIETNAM. Of the 250,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam at this writing, approximately 37,500, or 15%, are colored. In the top fighting units, however, such as the airborne troops, the proportion is frequently

50%. The war in Vietnam is the most integrated war U.S. servicemen have ever fought.

PREPARING FOR WAR. More than 17 years after its creation, Israeliis still regarded by the Arab world as an intolerable intruder. Israeli proposals for peace talks have been met by constant Arab hostility. The two-year-old Unified Arab Command, established to coordinate Arab preparations for war against Israel, is a military planning staff whose work is hindered by internecine political suspicion. It does, however, recommend that individual Arab states arm for war, which they are doing as follows:

JORDAN recently acquired 50 to 100 Patton tanks from the U.S., is bargaining for supersonic fighters from Britain, France, the U.S.

LEBANON recently obtained from Jordan 40 British Charloteer tanks, has tripled its air force with the purchase of 12 new French Mirage III supersonic fighters.

IRAQ, having switched from Western to Eastern arms after the 1958 revolution, is having trouble getting aid from Moscow because of harsh treatment to local Communists. Supplies from the U.S., however, have been continued.

SAUDI ARABIA has negotiated a deal for British jet fighters, radar networks, plus American Hawk antiaircraft missiles.

As for ISRAEL, France is said to be supplying her with rockets capable of carrying atomic warheads. It is widely believed that the Israelis, using the French-built atomic reactor in the Negev desert, will be able to produce an atomic device within three years.

WANTED: MALE MODELS. British automobile manufacturers no longer want their new cars presented in show-rooms by glamorous young women. Reason: foday women play the decisive role in the purchase of an automobile, and they are more likely to be tempted by personable, handsome young men. British Motors. Corporation has decided to replace its pretty, long-stemmed beauties with men outfitted by Pierre Cardin, who has come up with a new line of male apparel.

Favorite Jokes

by Jeremy Vernon

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jeremy Vernon, hailed by critics as one of the brightest new comics in show husiness, was born in New York City 26 years ago. "I was originally named Jerry," he says, "but there are so many Vernons in show biz-Jackie Vernon, Matilda Vernon, Joe Vernon, Mount Vernon-that I decided to change my first name to Jeremy. Sounds very British, no?" Vernon wanted to become a serious actor, but the Army assigned him to its Special Services Division where he developed comedy routines to entertain the troops. Following his discharge, he attended the American Theatre Wing, starved while looking for jobs, decided to make comedy his forte. Young Vernon has appeared on several TV variety shows, has also worked such nite spots as the Aladdin in Las Vegas, the San Juan in Puerto Rico, the Sheraton Park in Washington, D.C. Herewith some of his best jokes:

The wife of an alcoholic decided to scare her husband into quitting the bottle once and for all. When he came home drunk one Friday night, she was waiting for him, a white sheet covering her head and body. She began to make eerie, screeching, ghostlike sounds.

"Who are you?" her husband asked. "I am the devil," she wailed.

"Shake hands, devil," he offered. "I married your sister."

A college student was undergoing his physical at the Army induction station. Said the doctor, "I'll whisper a number from the far side of the room. If you hear it, please repeat the number to me." The physician then shouted at the top of his lungs, "Fortyseven." The sound was so loud the college boy winced. But he thought a minute, then said, "Thirty-six."

"Close enough," said the doc, "1-A,"

Another college student, this one a beardnik, raced up to the psychiatrist at his Army. physical and pleaded, "Take me right now. Forget about basic training. Just give me a rifle. Send me to the front. I'll kill every Viet Cong singlehanded, Send me. I am power, I am strength. I am the conqueror."

Said the doctor: "You're crazy."

Immediately the beardnik calmed himself. "Write it down," he urged. "Write it down."

I recently took an air trip around the world and recorded the announcements of the various airline stewardesses. In Germany 1 heard, "Good evening. Welcome to the world's most superior airline. Please march to your seats, sit without squirming, ring for your hostess only when absolutely necessary." In Israel the stewardess said: "We shall be flying at an altitude . . . you wouldn't believe it! Under your seat is a life lacket. You should wear it only in good health." In Madrid the stewardess said, "Have a most pleasant flight, and please, pray for clear skies. Because the planes in Spain fall mainly in the rains."

It was the lunch hour at the elegant Four Seasons restaurant in New York. A leading matinee idol walked in with a beautiful redhead.

"Boy!" exclaimed one press agent to another. "Who's that beautiful dish?"

"That's his wife."

"His wife?" repeated the first press agent. "Boy! What a publicity stunt!"

Green Bay is famous for football, but not for coffee.

It doesn't have MJR.

Talk about David and Goliath! Little old Green Bay (population 62,288) regularly shellacs cities ten, twenty, and a hundred times its size, and currently holds the World's Championship. It's a wonderful town for football, but don't go there for coffee. Green Bay just doesn't have the heart-warming goodness of the country's best coffee. The MJB people made up their minds back in 1881 to make the best coffee in the country, and they do. This requires searching out

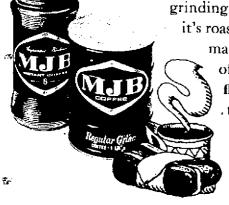

> them with utmost skill, roasting them with care, and then grinding and packing

the coffee the very same day it's roasted. Always! Now this kind of painstaking care makes great coffee-the best in the country, as a matter of fact-coffee that gives you first-cup-in-the-morning flavor all day long, but it does limit the amount of MJB they make. So be glad you're in

might do if it had MJB!)

What's one of your favorite cities that's deprived of fine MJB Coffee? Why don't you write the MJB people, 665 Third St., San Francisco, and tell them about it.

To the bride June means "forever," and to her dad these French Pronuptia models will mean a pretty penny (f. to r.): "Soleil" (satin), "Orphée" (satin, face) and "Laurence" (organdy)

Brides Are Big Business

by LLOYD SHEARER.

efore this year is out approximately 1,800,000 American women will become brides. And of this goodly number only 15 percent will elope or get married in simple ceremonies.

The remaining 85 percent or 1½ million will shoot the works in a showy, formal, ritualistic, once-in-a-lifetime wedding complete with bridesmaids, flowers, ushers, the whole traditional kit and caboodle.

It is the annual crop of 1½ million dewy-eyed brides which has given rise to the $7-billion-per-year U.S. wedding industry.

Do you have any idea how much the average church wedding with a country slub or hotel reception afterward costs the father of the bride? It runs from $2500 up, and frequently the poor guy can't afford it. But how many men have the courage to defy sentiment, social pressure and the dribbling tears of a darling daughter?

Not many, which is why once a daughter's engagement is announced, the wedding industry moves in for the kill. Photographers phone, printers solicit; travel bureaus, department stores, carbire services, honeymoon hotels, florists, caterers, recording engineers, furniture salesmen, insurance salesmen, real estate salesmen, hakers, orchestra leaders—the whole Pandora's box of economic opportunists empties out.

JUNE BESTSELLERS

Manufacturers of wedding dresses in the U.S. are relatively conservative compared to their counterparts in France. In Paris, for example, the Pronuptia chain has a fleet of advertising trucks that cruise the city streets, displaying the latest in wedding apparel. The photos on this page show the June bestsellers from the Pronuptia line. They range in price from $50 to $500.

Last week these were the typical wedding expenses a Chicago factory foreman who carns $13,500 a year paid for his daughter's "big day":

Gown and veil$287.50
Bridal accessories
Wedding cake 80.00
Champagne per guest, 112 guests 6.00
Hotel dinnerper guest 7.00
Flowers and candles, church 110.00
Flowers and candles, hotel 250.00
Orchestra
Photographer 205.00
Invitations 82.75
Flowers, gifts for bridesmaids. 108.00

The total came to $2891.25 or almost 25 percent of the poor guy's annual income. Was it worth it? Or would it have been more sensible and possibly more fun for the bride and groom to have bought a ladder at the hardware store and then eloped? Generally it depends on how long the marriage lasts. But is there any bride who on her wedding day doesn't expect her marriage to last "forever"?

"Yoo-hoo, George! Dinner will be ready in about 10 miles."

"Do this," Christ said, "in remembrance of ME"

Sitting through Mass in a Catholic Church for the first time, people are often impressed by the ceremony and the quiet picty of the worshipers.

But they could scarcely feel, what Catholics believe, that the Son of God is truly present on the altar...that He is, in fact, acting as the high priest in a holy sacrifice in which He is also the victim.

"Jesus Christ," they may say to themselves, "made a complete and finished sacrifice when He died on the cross. Why do Catholics claim that our Lord's sacrifice, already consummated, is repeated again and again every day in Catholic Churches everywhere?"

No one believes more firmly than Catholics do, that Christ's sacrifice was finished and complete when He gave up His life on the cross. We agree that He died but once, and He is not nailed to the cross and crowned with thorns again and again. Yet the Catholic Mass is not a substitute...not a mere imitation ...but a true and holy re-enactment of the sacrifice offered by Jesus Himself,

If this sounds confusing and hard to believe, think for a moment of the Last Supper. The crucifixion and the Mass are one and the same sacrifice.

At the Last Supper, our Lord offered Himself when He changed the bread and wine into His own Body and Blood, the price He would pay for the redemption of men's sins. Only a few short hours later, He was to repeat this sacrifice in the bloody consummation of the cross.

Jesus clearly indicated at the Last Supper that He wanted His sacrifice to be perpetuated...so that all future generations might have the same suitable gift to offer to Almighty God. So, having changed the bread and wine into His own Body and Blood, He said to the Apostles: "Do this in remembrance of ME." They were to repeat His sacrifice-and they did so. They said Mass and consecrated the bread and wine as our Lord had done ... and just as Catholic priests the world over have been doing for the nearly two thousand years since. This we call the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass . . . this is the heart and core of our Catholic Faith.

FREE - if you would like to read the whole wondrous story of the Mass and its vast significance, write today for our free pamphlet.
